

Help, hope for the lonely who would die

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

The curtains on the old lady's house across the street have been drawn for two days.

The old man's neighbors up the street are angry because he isn't cleaning up the trash stacked against his house.

The kids laughed because the old "hermit" took so long to find his way to the door when they rang the bell—but now the door no longer opens.

The three don't know each other, but all suffer from the same fate.

They're old and feeble; alone, without relatives, and their friends have long since died. They know no one cares. So they lie down to die.

And, in many cases, they do what they set out to do.

In other cases there's someone—a neighbor, a mailman, a salesman—who calls somebody—the police, the welfare bureau, the social services department, the health department.

But the police can't do anything—the person hasn't committed a crime.

The welfare bureau's responsibility is limited to welfare recipients.

The people from social services don't have the authority, they say.

And the health department—until recently—could act only if the home created a health hazard.

Until the Health Department's Community Resources Coordinator was put into operation—the State Health Department expense—the next movement around the oldest's homes would have been the removal of bodies.

It's happened many times before.

"There are individuals who are isolated from society—unable to help themselves. So many have just given up and in too many instances die there alone," Dr. I. D. Litwack, the city's health officer admits.

"They're sick, deprived of one of the essentials of living—other humans—and they no longer care."

"They are old; alone, sick and too tired to get any help. So they just lie there and die.

"We don't hear about these problems, though," the longtime health chief says. "We only hear of the big problems."

But he and his staff had been aware of the problem, hence the establishment of the job of Community Resources Coordinator.

Dr. Litwack admits that before establishment of the program the health department "eventually" got the problem anyway but had no one to handle it.

"We used to sit down—a nurse, social worker, sanitarian and myself, as a physician—and try to figure out what to do to help the person. You have to establish rapport—some have rejected the social worker and though they're deathly sick, they don't want to go to a hospital."

A nurse, many times, could be the one to let the oldest know that

ISRAELI TANKS HEAD FOR ASSAULT ON COMMANDOS IN LEBANON SATURDAY

Israeli raiders take 16 Lebanese villages

Combined News Services

Tank-led Israeli troops, backed by warplanes and artillery, made one of their biggest raids into southern Lebanon since the 1948 Middle East war Saturday, attacking both guerrillas and Lebanese army units and sweeping into 16 villages in the heart of the Palestine terrorist "Fatahland," an Israeli military spokesman said.

The spokesman said the fighting stopped after dark but the Israeli soldiers planned to hold their territory at least overnight because of the risk involved in moving tanks and heavy armored cars during the night.

A senior officer of Israel's general staff said the air and land invasion killed at least 40 guerrillas and 17 Lebanese soldiers, destroyed four Lebanese tanks and 130 houses, and flushed Palestinian commandos from 16 villages. Twenty guerrillas and Lebanese were reported taken prisoner.

In Cairo, the Middle East News Agency (MENA) said the Libyan head of state, Col. Muammar Khadafi, offered to send troops to help Lebanon. However, experts said it was unlikely Lebanon would accept because the presence of Arab troops might touch off more Israeli raids.

The Israelis were reported in Beirut to be in brigade strength of about 3,000 men with tanks, backed by air support.

Lebanon, Israel's northern neighbor, did not take an active part in the 1967 Middle East war, but it has since become a major base for Palestinian guerrillas raiding Arab territories occupied by Israel. Saturday's attack follows an announcement by Israel Friday that two other soldiers were killed by raiders in the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights.

Lebanon's resistance was surprising, since its forces usually have stood aside during Israeli moves to wipe out guerrilla bases.

The Lebanese ambassador to the United Nations, Edouard Ghorri, lodged a written protest with the U.N. Security Council against the "massive land and air attack against Lebanon."

However, Lebanese Prime Minister

Saeed Salam decided against asking for a special meeting of the U.N. Security Council, saying it would be "like going to the Wailing Wall again." He referred to the United States last Sunday which obstructed a council resolution condemning Israeli air raids against guerrilla camps and villages in Lebanon and Syria on Sept. 8.

An Israeli spokesman said troops crossed the border at three points and drove straight toward suspected guerrilla areas.

Kissinger cites gains in Soviet talks; not so Viet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger gave this account at a news conference following a private report to President Nixon on his three days of discussions with Kremlin leaders and his 17th secret Paris parley with North Vietnamese envoys.

On Vietnam, Kissinger said the Hanoi delegates had indicated "a certain seriousness" in the negotiations.

But without going into detail on his meeting Friday with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho and Xuan Thuy, he took a dim view of the enemy's latest proposal last Monday for a coalition government in Saigon.

He said it appears to be weighted in favor of the Communists and the United States will not "impose a particular form of government that gives dominance to one side."

Thuy, North Vietnam's chief peace negotiator, said in Paris that he "does not see any signs that the war is in the process of ending."

HE SAID the U.S. and North Vietnamese positions on political and military problems were still "far apart" and the United States was still "holding tightly" to President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

Kissinger said Vietnam was discussed, too, in his 21 hours of talks with Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev Sept. 10-13. But he added that the United States still believes the path to a negotiated settlement of the Indochina conflict lies through direct talks among the warring parties.

But on other items in his Moscow agenda, too, the White House aide reported significant progress on such current issues as U.S.-Soviet trade, the proposed European security conference and talks on mutual force cuts in Europe, and preliminaries on the next round of U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Talks.

In these areas Kissinger said:

—Three Russian groups will come to Washington next week to discuss agreement on settling the Soviet World War II lend-lease debt to the United States; an accord for shipping between the United States and the Soviet Union; and a broad trade pact.

—He voiced confidence that re-

Swedish jet hijackers give up in Madrid

New York Times Service

MADRID — Nine Croatian extremists turned themselves over to the Spanish police Saturday three hours after their arrival at Madrid Airport aboard a hijacked Swedish jetliner.

Three hijackers and six fellow Croats they had liberated Friday from Swedish prisons were being held Saturday night by the police who announced that they would be turned over to judicial authorities. The short official statement made no reference to a request from Sweden, announced in Stockholm, for extradition of the nine men.

There were reports that Croat groups living in Valencia on the Mediterranean coast, had issued bomb threats if the men were not released. The latter had surrendered docilely after apparently disagreeing among themselves as to what they wanted and Spanish authorities expressed satisfaction that

S. Viet marines fly flag over Quang Tri Citadel

SAIGON, Sunday (UPI) — The red and gold flag of South Vietnam fluttered in a typhoon wind atop the scarred walls of the Quang Tri Citadel Saturday, officially marking the end to one of the most significant battles of the war. Hastily sewed into one corner of the standard was the green and yellow shoulder patch of government marines who raised it.

Military spokesman said 725 North Vietnamese soldiers were killed near Quang Tri City Saturday, most of them trying to flee the Citadel area. Another 25 were taken prisoner. South Vietnamese casualties were 21 killed and 88 wounded, the spokesman said.

In a scene reminiscent of the flag-raising on Iwo Jima by U.S. Marines in World War II, rain-soaked South Vietnamese marines raised their national flag on a 20-foot pole atop the west wall of the battered fortress, recaptured by government forces Friday.

The marines huddled under tents and ponchos and military spokesmen said there probably would be relatively little activity by them today while the slashing rain and wind of typhoon Flossie covered the northern segment of South Vietnam. Air support has been at a minimum because of the bad weather for several days.

Top military officials involved in the fight turned their attention to the question of "what next?" The most logical target was the town of Dong Ha, eight miles north. The North Vietnamese still held the 18 miles of territory between Quang Tri and the demilitarized zone (DMZ), and everything west of the Thach Han River which passes the west wall of the Citadel.

All North Vietnamese opposition within the walled 19th century fortress was reported removed, as well as in the surrounding city, which was the only provincial capital to fall during the Communist offensive, UPI correspondent Barney Seibert said.

Seibert said 27 prisoners were taken in the final sweep of the Citadel, some with documents that showed the Communist defenders were short on all types of supplies. He said requests for food, ammunition and other supplies returned with the notation "don't have any, don't have any." He said a request for replacements noted 54 men were being sent as reinforcements, but only 27 had weapons. "You must provide weapons yourselves for the others," the document read.

A military source said the Communists stopped firing their long-range 130mm cannon into the Quang Tri area to give any remaining North Vietnamese troops time to withdraw. He said heavy barrages may hit the marines soon, and they were spreading out and digging bunkers to meet such a threat.

The capture of the Citadel was announced late Friday by official military spokesmen in Saigon, but was officially sealed at noon Saturday when the gold flag with three horizontal red stripes was planted.

President Nguyen Van Thieu sent his personal congratulations to the marines and bottles of champagne were dispatched to top officers by the military commander of the northern region, who was in charge of the fight for Quang Tri, 404 miles north of Saigon.

Soviet asks U. N. ban on nuclear arms

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The Soviet Union has submitted a formal proposal to permanently prohibit the use of nuclear weapons, it was announced Saturday.

The proposal was placed as a new item on the provisional agenda of the 27th session of the United Nations General Assembly. It also includes a general repudiation of the use of force in the relations between states.

Explaining the Soviet initiative, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko stressed that in particular West Germany's recent agreements with the Soviet Union and with Poland had been particularly favorable developments toward a state of European and international security.

In a special memorandum, Gromyko also pointed to the agreement between the Soviet Union and the United States on the limitation of strategic weapons as well as other international agreements limiting the arms race.

The new item is entitled, "Nonuse of Force in International Relations and Permanent Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons."

The item is in line with the intention of the Soviet Union to place strong emphasis in the Assembly on various disarmament issues, including its proposal for a world disarmament conference.

In his memorandum, the Soviet foreign minister pointed to the current trend towards reduced international tension and peaceful coexistence.

"Particularly striking," he said, "are the favorable developments along these lines on the European continent. The well-known agreements between the U.S.S.R. and the Federal Republic of Germany (West Germany) and between the Polish People's Republic and the Federal Republic of Germany have laid down within the framework of international law the obligation of states to refrain from the threat or use of force both in their mutual relations and in questions involving security in Europe and international security and cooperation are entering the practical stage."

Referring to the recent arms limitation agreement between Russia and the United States, Gromyko said: "In recent times, a number of agreements have been worked out in the field of limiting the arms race and disarmament. The convention on the prohibition of the production of bacteriological weapons and on their destruction, which is a genuine disarmament measure, has been concluded. The agreements between the U.S.S.R. and the United States of America on the limitation of strategic weapons are destined to play a considerable role in slowing down the nuclear-missile arms race."

Gromyko said such agreements "contribute to lessening the danger of an outbreak of war involving the use of nuclear weapons . . ."

His house just not their cup of tea

Combined News Services

Robert Quinn has lost the battle with Florida officials to save his "Teahouse of the August Moon," a wooden shanty he built five years ago. But he's not giving up the war.

Hours after police moved in to tear down the shanty that neighbors and the county claimed was an eyesore and a health hazard and had been constructed without a permit, Quinn was back at work building a new teahouse.

Quinn was taking a shower when the bulldozers arrived Friday.

"Bob, old buddy, I think they've got you this time," Sgt. Robert Dwyer of the Dade County Public Safety Department told Quinn.

Several hours later Quinn, clad only in a loincloth and holding an American flag, stood on a patch of sand while a county workcrew carted away the last boards of his teahouse.

The demolition of the pine grove retreat southwest of Miami marked the end of a five-year court battle.

Quinn and his wife hammered together their shanty home on Aug. 15, 1967. "We started about noon and finished about 1 o'clock in the morning, under an August moon. That's where it got its name," Quinn explained.

Mrs. Quinn has since returned to her native Holland. But Quinn, 48, stayed holed up in his piney woods retreat, keeping two rifles at his side to protect his teahouse from intruders.

He came out only to buy provisions and appear in court to try to save his home.

"A man has a constitutional right to build his own home and not owe anybody anything for it," he said Saturday. "I expect to have to fight this to the U.S. Supreme Court."

After surveying his barren building site, he added, "I suppose it'll take me about six hours to get it finished. And this time it's in September, and it'll be night time, so I suppose we'll call it 'The Teahouse of the September Star.'"

Old debt

Mayor Frank Garito of New Rochelle, N.Y., paid a two-century-old debt Saturday by giving a fat calf to a descendant of John Pell, the lord of the manor.

The original settlers of New Rochelle had agreed to give a calf to descendants of Pell whenever they requested it. They have been demanding the ceremonial repayment at intervals since 1938.

About 1,000 persons gathered in a local park to watch Garito present the calf to William Rodman Pell of Greenport, N.Y. Pell's ancestor was one of the founders of the town in 1689.

The ceremony was associated with a fund drive for the National Science Center of New Rochelle. Pell later returned the calf to its home on a Connecticut farm.

China mission

John Kenneth Galbraith, professor of economics at Harvard University, and a delegation of the American Economic Association, left Peking Saturday for visits to Nanking, Hangchow and Shanghai, the official Hsinhua news agency reported.

Hsinhua said that during their stay in the Chinese capital the Americans met with Chinese officials, discussed economic problems with Chinese economists and visited factories, stores, universities and historic sites.

Hard way

Leonard Moore, who recently walked across Death Valley in record time, has completed another bizarre adventure — rowing a bathtub 180 miles down the Sacramento river.

"It feels like I've gone a thousand miles," Moore said in Sacramento after completing his voyage from Red Bluff this weekend. "At first I had blisters everywhere, but now they're hard. But my hands are sure sore."

Moore, 48, of Oakland, made the trip in five days despite a handicap probably unique in the sketchy annals of bathtub rowing.

"The two fellows who were following along in my pickup had to go back to work, so I had to drive the pickup, too, for the last three days," he said.

Moore said he first would row the bathtub about six miles downriver, then walk back to the truck and move it ahead.

"Then I'd walk back to the boat and row it another six miles, get out, walk back to the truck and move it ahead again," Moore said.

Far away

A 10-cent helium-filled balloon of Jane Dorst, 14, of Atherton, Calif., has floated 9,000 miles to South Africa.

Miss Dorst had entered a balloon contest at the Menlo-Atherton High School fair. Each contestant attached a postcard to their balloon asking for the card's return.

Miss Dorst's card was returned this week from Pietermaritzburg in the Republic of South Africa where it apparently arrived June 10, about 20 days after it was released in Atherton. She won a $5 prize as a result.

More trouble

Wesley G. Grapp, the Los Angeles FBI bureau chief suspended and demoted for disobeying an order relaxing grooming codes, may face further disciplinary action, the Los Angeles Times said Saturday. The Times said further action against Grapp, 54, is being considered after it was learned that he had used hidden microphones and recorders to tape conversations of visitors and telephone callers. The action is considered "an extremely serious violation" of FBI internal regulations, an informed source said, according to the Times.

Larceny

A past president of the Miami Junior Woman's Club has been arrested on grand larceny charges after police said she had drained $7,000 from the organization's treasury, authorities said Saturday.

Jimmy Burke, public information officer of the Miami Police Department, said Shirley McCausland, 33, surrendered at Dade County Jail for booking on a grand larceny warrant. She was released after posting $1,000 bond.

Police and club officials said the money had been taken from the club's treasury over the past four years. However, the grand larceny charge involved only $300 because the statute of limitations prevented further prosecution.

Mrs. McCausland, who is married to an attorney, was active in numerous civic groups, including the United Fund and the Daughters of the American Revolution, club officials said.

Abdication

After five generations of family rule, John Clunies-Ross has given up his claim to sovereignty over the 27 Cocos Islands. Sydney's papers reported, Friday.

Clunies-Ross, 43, the uncrowned king of the Cocos where 483 Malays work on his coconut plantation, reversed his earlier claim to sovereignty after a meeting Friday in the Cocos with Andrew Peacock, Australia's minister of external territories. But it was not immediately clear how his concession would affect life and his own position on the Indian Ocean islands, located 1,700 miles northwest of Perth. They only have 5½ square miles of land.

Clunies-Ross' Scottish ancestors settled the islands in 1827, and in 1886 Queen Victoria granted them permanently to his family. Responsibility for the islands was transferred to Australia by the British in 1955.

Says he'll resign

Head of monetary fund seen rejected by U.S.

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — The United States has, in effect, vetoed the reappointment of Pierre-Paul Schweitzer as managing director of the International Monetary Fund.

Schweitzer's term does not expire until next September, but he has told high officials he will resign as soon as a successor is agreed upon, according to IMF and other sources.

Schweitzer, a Frenchman, assumed the post Sept. 1, 1963. He was formerly a deputy governor of the Bank of France.

John Connally, the former United States secretary of the Treasury, is known to have been hostile to Schweitzer as a result of positions Schweitzer took after President Nixon's decisions of August 1971 ending the dollar's convertibility into gold.

Apart from that, according to U.S. sources, the view in the administration is that the beginning of a major effort to reform the world monetary system — which is to be formally set in motion later this month at the IMF's annual meeting here — is a good time for a change at the top in the monetary fund.

The Washington Post reported that Treasury Secretary George P. Schultz told Schweitzer the U.S. would not back his re-election. U.S. support was considered vital because of its influence on the fund.

WHILE the U.S. does not have a veto over the IMF office in the legal sense, it has one in effect. Schweitzer has made clear privately that he would not want to accept reappointment unless the major member countries were unanimous.

Schweitzer is understood to have had support from other member countries for reappointment.

Schweitzer was not available for comment, but the report of his pending resignation drew criticism from Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the international exchange subcommittee of the joint congressional economic committee.

"This is the Nixon administration at its pettiest," Reuss said. "Mr. Schweitzer's principal sin seems to have been devotion to duty. At the IMF meeting in September 1971, Schweitzer proposed a currency readjustment that the United States should have jumped at."

"Instead, Connally kept turning it down because it involved a small U.S. devaluation and delayed the Smithsonian agreement until December."

Chess Olympics loom —Soviet team ready

BELGRADE (UPI) — The Soviet Union, still feeling side effects from the malady known as Fischer-fear, has dispatched a wily team of masters to the south of Yugoslavia to rejuvenate its decades-old superiority at chess.

At least that's what the Soviets were saying as teams from 65 nations gathered in Skopje this weekend for the 20th Chess Olympiad which starts Monday. The competition will last about 25 days.

THE SOVIETS have won every gold medal since World War II. They were here to prove that, even though they no longer had a world champion after Boris Spassky lost to America's Bobby Fischer in Iceland, they are still the best chess-playing nation in the world, Yugoslav chess officials said.

The major challenge to the hopes of the Russian Olympic team will be provided, in the view of most observers, by Hungary, Yugoslavia, the United States, and possibly Czechoslovakia. Those teams were all runners up to the Russians in the Olympics four years ago at Siegen, West Germany.

America's chance to grab a gold medal to go with Fischer's championship victory will depend on the team's composition, which was uncertain Saturday, two days before the start of competition.

A SPOKESMAN for the United States Chess Federation said in New York Saturday he did not know whether Fischer would attend the Belgrade matches. "He hasn't contacted us as yet," the spokesman said, "but knowing Bobby, he'll probably let us know the last minute."

The terror of armed robbery

By BILL DUNCAN
Staff Writer

The man kept dabbing the back of his head with a moist, white hand towel as he talked with a police officer.

Each time he brought his hand away from his head, you could see it tremble. The white towel he held was turning red — bloodsoaked from a wound at the base of his skull.

"Did he say anything else to you?" the officer inquired.

"YEAH. Just before he hit me with the pistol, he said 'If you try to follow me, you bastard, I'll kill you.'"

"Then what happened?"

"He hit me!" the man said, motioning to his head wound. "I felt a stinging, burning sensation and sorta blacked out, but just for a moment. I felt weak and sick to my stomach. I fell to the floor and stayed there until I heard the buzzer on the door as he ran outside. I got up and called you."

The man, a liquor store clerk, had just been robbed at gunpoint for less than $100.

In most cases, about 63 per cent, armed robbery is committed with a firearm — a loaded weapon, pointed directly at a victim with a threat to kill if the bandit's demands are not met. In other instances, robbers use knives, clubs or even physical threats to cover the victim into surrendering money.

A SWORD was used in one robbery. A hand grenade in another and in one instance the victim was forced to hand over the day's receipts from a service station after he was doused with gasoline and threatened to be turned into a human torch if he didn't comply.

Another odd robbery case occurred when a bandit armed with karate skills demonstrated his ability to kill with his hands by smashing a display counter with his bare hand. "I'll snap your neck that way, if you don't get that money out of the cash register," the karate bandit told a 20-year-old female clerk in a neighborhood grocery store.

She complied.

"Most of them are killers or potential killers and should be treated that way," commented Long Beach police officer Paul Land, who, as a patrol officer is one of the first to reach the scene of a robbery.

AS LAND talked, his partner, Jim Olds questioned a robbery victim, a 60-year-old Long Beach motel clerk who had just been relieved of $120. He described the bandit in amazingly accurate detail — even to the fact that the man looked like a pug, an ex-prize fighter. Usually victims are so rattled by the experience they blank out on descriptions.

As he rattled off the description for a quick police broadcast, the man gave a nervous laugh:

"I was facing the gun. I'm not too familiar with guns, but it was on the Luger type. He was as nervous as I was," he said, still shaken.

Olds, bored in on the victim with questions, explaining to him:

"I'm trying to get you to remember even the slightest detail. It is extremely important and in the excitement you might overlook telling me the very thing that will lead to an arrest."

"WELL, I do remember one thing. After I gave him the money, he told me to lift up the cash drawer tray and let him see under it. I did. He then told me: 'Okay, walk into the back room now.' I thought he was going to plug me . . ."

He turned to the motel owner, who had been summoned, and said:

"I'll tell you one thing. I was so damn scared my throat was so dry it was like trying to swallow nails. I don't even think I can raise a spit now."

Fear is the bandit's biggest weapon.

And there's plenty of reason to be frightened when someone pokes a loaded gun in your face, or threatens you menacingly with a sharp cutting instrument, or a blunt object. Death or serious injury is at the whim of a desperate person who is using force and violence to rob his victim.

ONE LONG BEACH liquor store owner, a woman, has been robbed so many times she has installed a police radio alongside the cash register to monitor police calls. When she hears the call 211 — the police code based on the state penal code designation for armed robbery — she locks up the store in fear the bandit may strike a second time.

Armed robbery is on the increase, not only in Long Beach, but in the county, the state and the nation. Robberies in Long Beach so far this year number 1,012, compared to 1,415 for all of 1971. Last year 24,597 robberies occurred in Los Angeles County, compared to 47,626 for the entire state.

In an areawide breakdown, covering both Orange and Los Angeles counties, service station holdups occurred most frequently followed closely by liquor stores and late night convenience markets. But hardly any cash and carry enterprise was safe from robbers. There is a decided increase in the number of chain store robberies, particularly those located near freeway on-ramps.

"THE MOBILITY of the robber is of chief concern to law enforcement," a spokesman for the sheriff's office said. "Usually, the gunman selects a spot where he can dash in, rob the victim, sprint to an awaiting car and put several miles between him and the store he has robbed before the victim can get to a telephone and alert the police."

Nationally, 385,910 robberies were reported for 1971, an 11 per cent increase over 1970. Largest increases were in big cities, but there was also a notable rise of 17 per cent in the suburban areas surrounding the large core cities and even rural areas were experiencing an increase in the number of robberies.

NOT SINCE the days of Bonnie and Clyde have police seen such an increase in the number of women participating in armed robberies. Women are either involved, or themselves the lone armed perpetrators, in six out of 100 holdups.

"And they," said one policeman, "are more daring than their male counterparts."

The bandit today also has a young age profile. The FBI said that 77 per cent of the persons arrested for armed robbery in 1971 were under the age of 25 and 55 per cent were under 21 years of age. Nationally, 32 per cent of the persons arrested for robbery were under 18 — an 11 per cent increase over 1970. In suburban areas, young persons made up 28 per cent of the arrests.

According to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, there is a robbery somewhere in the United States every 82 seconds. Last year the average value loss to victims of robbery was $226. This amounted to a total loss of $87 million nationally.

Even if the victim of this violent crime is unharmed by the terrorist, the shock of a robbery leaves its mark. Numerous heart attacks — some fatal — have followed in the wake of holdups.

Those who have been shot or maimed bear mute testimony that the man who walks into a place of business with a weapon should be considered dangerous.

In some cases, a bandit is a wanton killer. In Norwalk a few years ago a gunman shot and killed a liquor store owner because he was too slow in getting the money out of the cash register.

"Nine times out of ten, the stickup man is an amateur. He is nervous and probably not too steady on the trigger. That alone makes him dangerous," explained a robbery detail sergeant. "My advice to the victim is, hand over the money. It can be replaced. Your life can't. I don't trust anyone with a gun in his hand."

MEXICAN-AMERICANS MARK INDEPENDENCE

Associated Press

Mexican-Americans in Southern California celebrated Mexican Independence Day Saturday with a parade, singing, dancing and other festivities.

Activities were planned throughout the week at the University of California at Los Angeles, with fireworks climaxing each night's entertainment.

Mexico's declaration of independence came Sept. 16, 1810, in the form of an impassioned shout, "El Grito de Dolores!" from a Roman Catholic priest, Father Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla.

He proclaimed to his Indian parishioners that day: "Long live our Lady of Guadalupe! Long live independence!"

Nixon ordered whitewash of break-in, McGovern says

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. George McGovern accused President Nixon Saturday of having ordered a "whitewash" in the federal grand jury investigation of the alleged bugging on June 17 of the Democratic national headquarters at the Watergate hotel.

Friday the grand jury indicted two former White House aides and the five men seized by the police inside the headquarters in the early morning hours on charges of having conspired to break into the offices.

Although his first reaction to the indictment Friday was measured, the Democratic presidential candidate called a news conference Saturday at his Japanese-style house in a fashionable section of this capital to make one of his strongest condemnations of his Republican opponent.

"From the first count to the last, the federal grand jury indictment returned yesterday in the Democratic bugging case spells whitewash," McGovern declared, standing on his porch as newsmen gathered in the driveway. "And I suggest that this blatant miscarriage of justice was ordered by the White House to spare them embarrassment in an election year."

LATER Saturday, the Justice Department vigorously countered McGovern's charges, describing them as "a grievous attack on the integrity of the 23 good citizens of the District of Columbia" who served on the grand jury.

In a statement of rebuttal, Henry Petersen, assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, said the department's investigation of the Watergate case had been "among the most exhaustive and far reaching in my 25 years in the Justice Department," with 333 agents involved in the operation.

Before reading a prepared statement for the television cameras, McGovern said that he had interrupted what was supposed to have been a day of rest after two weeks of intensive campaigning from coast to coast because he thought the implications of the Justice Department's announcement that the indictments have ended the investigation of the case were of "the gravest importance."

"I think it goes right to the heart of the moral standards of this nation," he said. "There has been a growing pattern of immorality associated with the Russian wheat deal, with the ITT case, with the handling of campaign funds, and now the latest revelation with regard to the invasion of the Democratic headquarters at the Watergate."

dy, a former presidential assistant on domestic affairs who at the time of the break-in was counsel to the finance committee for the Committee for the Re-election of the President, and E. Howard Hunt Jr., a former White House consultant and associate of Liddy.

"The questions left unanswered by that grand jury are staggering," McGovern said Saturday.

He went on to list them as:

— "Who ordered this act of political espionage?"

— "Who paid for it?"

— "Who contributed the $114,000 that went from the Nixon campaign committee to the bank account of one of the men arrested, and that paid off the spies for their work?"

— "Who received the memoranda of the tapped telephone conversation?"

Continuing, he said that the "Nixon administration asks us to believe that the Watergate Five, plus two lowly White House operatives, dreamed up and carried out this shabby scheme to spy on the Democratic Party all on their own, with no authority from above."

"The administration, with its total control of the grand jury," he went on, "asks us to ignore the diversion of $114,000 in secret campaign funds into the hands of this political espionage squad."

A $1 MILLION suit by the Democrats had charged that Maurice H. Stans, chairman of the finance committee of the Committee for the Re-election of the President Nixon, delivered the $114,000 to finance a spy squad. Stans has filed a countersuit of $2.5 million against the Democrats for what he called using the courts as an instrument "for creating political headlines."

McGovern, as he has traveled around the country, has been increasingly sharp in his criticisms of the Nixon administration.

He and his advisers are known to believe that they must get Nixon to engage in some political dialogue, rather than maintain his stance of being above the battle, if they are to make up what appears to be a large Republican lead.

To that end, McGovern has repeatedly mentioned the Watergate case in speeches across the nation. Immediate and angry response that such references have drawn from partisan Democratic crowds has surprised even his leading strategists.

HOWEVER, when the indictments were handed down Friday, McGovern merely said that they "point up the seriousness in the matter and what now needs to be pursued is how it (the invasion of the headquarters) was funded and whether there are violations there, which there seem to be."

It was apparent Saturday that McGovern and his senior advisers had decided they had a much larger issue in the Watergate case than they had hoped for. This was manifested in the calling of the news conference at a time when coverage of it would make the evening television news shows and be published in Sunday papers.

And McGovern left no doubt that he intended to make the case a major issue in his campaign for the presidency.

"I charge that at all stages of this investigation," he said, "it remained a political case under the total direction and control of Mr. Nixon's political operatives, working through Mr. (Atty. Gen. Richard G.) Kleindienst."

Concluding, he said: "The President of the United States can and must summon this nation to a higher moral standard than these sorry events have indicated. And that is why I intend to pursue this case the length and breadth of the land."

Facts You Should Know About Sapphires!

by Arch Shinder
Lawson's Jewelers
Downtown Long Beach Only

Sapphires are the birthstone of this month, September. In our opinion, the most beautiful sapphire is the STAR SAPPHIRE. A star is created within the sapphire because of imperfections which create three lines that cross one another to form a star. The ancients believed these three lines to represent faith, hope, and charity.

When the three lines cross, you have a six-legged star which is the most desirable. To properly locate the star, you actually should view the gem in the sunlight. Ordinary lighting such as a fluorescent are inadequate and the star cannot be seen properly. So, look at the star either in bright sunlight or under a strong spotlight.

Look at the sharpness of the star formed by the three lines. Are there three lines? Are they clear and distinct? Star Sapphires are examined by our own eyes and these are some of the questions you should try to answer for yourself to properly judge the value of the Star. Remember, there is no perfect star sapphire as there is no perfect gem nor a "bliss-white perfect" diamond.

Star sapphires come in various colors, the most common are black, (from Thailand), grey-black (from Australia), grey-white, white, and blue.

The color of this gemstone is also a significant factor in judging the value of the star sapphire. The color of a sapphire is due also to its imperfections.

When you possess a genuine star sapphire you have acquired another of the wonders of nature. The exquisite beauty of a genuine star sapphire is truly fascinating.

When you view a genuine star sapphire in its mounting, the fact that there may be visible imperfections on the underside of the star sapphire, or on the edges so that one cannot notice such imperfections due to the manner in which the star sapphire is set, such imperfection will not materially affect the value of such star sapphire and will not detract from the beauty of this gemstone.

If you are interested in further information, please see us at Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Avenue, Downtown Long Beach Only, and we will be most happy to answer any questions.

Solon's free mail use limited

CHICAGO (AP) — A U.S. Congressman has been ordered to stop using free mailing privileges to send questionnaires to residents of another district where he is seeking election.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., was ordered by U.S. District Court Judge Philip W. Tone Friday to stop free mailings to residents of the 11th District on the Northwest Side.

The ruling was made in a suit by Alderman John J. Hoellen, a Republican who opposes Annunzio for the 11th District seat being vacated by Rep. Roman Pucinski.

Newsweek reveals bugging informer

HARTFORD, Conn. — Newsweek says in its issue to be published Monday that a former security guard in the Nixon re-election campaign organization supplied information to the government in the Watergate political espionage case.

The magazine identified the man as Alfred C. Baldwin, 36, and said he himself had transcribed some tapes of telephone conversations in the National Democratic Committee headquarters in Washington.

Baldwin, described by the magazine as a former FBI agent, went to the FBI with his information after police arrested five men on June 17 on charges of bugging and breaking into the Democratic headquarters, Newsweek said.

Newsweek did not say how it had learned of Baldwin's role, but did say he would testify for the government at the trial of the seven men indicted last week in the affair.

His testimony, the magazine said, would include such things as the allegation that Baldwin personally delivered one tape transcription to the Committee to Re-Elect the President and that E. Howard Hunt, G. Gordon Liddy and James W. McCord, three of the indicted men, once "cased" the offices of Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic presidential nominee.

Nixon's net worth reported $765,118

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The White House made public Saturday a financial statement showing that President Nixon has a net worth of $765,118, an increase of $168,218 while he has been in office.

At the same time it was disclosed that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has a net worth of $198,250, an increase of $87,166 during the last four years.

The financial positions of the President and the vice president were disclosed in two one-page statements issued by the White House listing their assets and liabilities.

During the Florida primary campaign, Sen. George S. McGovern, the Democratic presidential candidate, made public a statement in January showing a net worth of $271,600 and an income last year of $89,100. A press aide said R. Sargent Shriver, the Democratic vice presidential candidate, was preparing a personal financial statement, which he planned to issue next week.

IN DISPLAYING Nixon's net worth, the White House said "the President and Mrs. Nixon have periodically made public their financial affairs and they now wish to upgrade these reports." The timing of the statement, however, obviously was linked to the presidential campaign.

The last statement on the President's financial position was issued in May 1969, showing a net worth of $596,900. During the 1968 presidential campaign, Nixon issued a statement showing a net worth of $515,830 as of Sept. 30, 1968.

The increase in the President's net worth since 1969 is attributed to savings from his presidential salary deposited in the bank or used to improve his homes.

"With the exception of small sums of interest paid on his savings accounts," the statement said, "the president's total income is derived from a yearly salary of $200,000 and a yearly expense allowance of $50,000 provided by act of Congress."

The presidential statement prepared by White House counsel John Deane showed that Nixon's assets were relatively liquid, with no holdings in stocks or bonds. His liabilities consisted essentially of mortgages on his properties in California and Florida.

THE PRESIDENT'S "assets consist only of cash, savings bonds, life insurance, personal property and real estate," the statement said. "Liabilities consist almost entirely of mortgages on real estate."

The statement showed the President with $363,585 in cash, savings certificates and U.S. savings bonds and with $54,811 in cash surrender value on his life insurance policies and civil-service retirement plan.

Among the President's other assets, the statement listed $55,113 in personal property, such as furniture, and $809,747 in real estate, consisting of two parcels in California and two parcels in Florida.

The statement did not identify the parcels of real estate property held by the President. But the 1969 statement showed the President holding two homes in Key Biscayne, Florida, worth $252,800, a vacant lot in Key Biscayne valued at $37,600 and a lot in Whittier worth $75,000. Since then, Nixon has acquired a waterfront home in San Clemente which he purchased in 1969 for a reported $340,000.

ON THE PRESIDENT'S real estate, the statement listed liabilities of $518,038 in mortgages and trust deed notes.

The only other liability list for the President was $100 in withheld payroll taxes for an unidentified employee.

Agnew's statement was somewhat less detailed than the one issued for the President and did not list any liabilities except a $35,000 mortgage on a condominium in St. Croix in the Virgin Islands valued at $49,000.

Among the assets listed for Agnew were $67,250 in savings and checking accounts, $25,000 in cash surrender value on life insurance and civil service retirement plan, $15,000 in real estate in Baltimore County, Md., and $15,000 in furniture and personal property.

Also listed, without further elaboration, was a $62,000 trust fund with George W. White, attorney.

A spokesman for the vice president said the trust fund was a "blind trust" established to hold Agnew's stocks and bonds upon his becoming vice president. White is a former law partner of Agnew in Baltimore County.

Pat Nixon warns of 'overconfidence'

NEW YORK (UPI) — First Lady Pat Nixon, speaking over the chants of a small group of anti-war demonstrators, kicked off a simultaneous 52-city vote canvassing drive Saturday with a warning against overconfidence by her husband's supporters.

Mrs. Nixon, alluding to surveys showing the President far in front of Sen. George McGovern, told the rally, "we hear a lot about the polls," but "the important polls are on election day."

As she spoke about a dozen person in the generally enthusiastic crowd shouted "Stop Nixon, stop the bombing."

Accompanied by Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, she later visited a Nixon campaign office and talked by telephone with two voters picked at random.

Later, as Mrs. Nixon was led to her limousine, a young man tried to engage her in a debate about the Vietnam war, saying "the North isn't bombing anybody."

She did not answer but Rockefeller, who was at her side, sprang to the defense of the administration, saying "they're (the North Vietnamese) the ones who invaded on the ground."

"Who asked you?" replied the youth.

The simultaneous canvassing actions across the nation consist of door-to-door and telephone drives for voters in support of President Nixon.

"The two governors who will help us the most are Reagan and Rockefeller," Klein told a news conference, referring to California Gov. Ronald Reagan and New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller.

Nixon backed by Utility Workers

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The executive board of the 85,000-member Utility Workers of America union announced its support of President Nixon for re-election on Saturday and the President promptly telephoned to express his appreciation.

"We feel we have to give the President a chance to extend a hand of friendship to labor," said Harold T. Rigley, national president of the AFL-CIO union.

Rigley said the union's executive board, which has never endorsed a Republican in its history, could not support Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern because of his "complete inconsistency."

"It's a question of trust," Rigley said. "Frankly, after looking at the record of the last couple of months, we have just come to the conclusion that McGovern can't be trusted."

Rigley criticized McGovern for his handling of Sen. Thomas Eagleton's resignation as Democratic vice-presidential nominee and what Rigley described as McGovern's "complete flip-flop on welfare programs."

Rigley said Nixon telephoned him from the White House shortly after the executive board made public its endorsement. "He expressed his appreciation and said he would like to meet with us in the very near future for an exchange of thoughts," Rigley said.

Assistant Secretary of Labor William Usery was on hand to personally accept the board's endorsement.

"NATURALLY, I think it was a very wise choice on their part," Usery said. He predicted that the majority of the organized labor movement would line up behind Nixon before the November election.

Rigley said the 12-member executive board would urge its local unions to follow their endorsement "for the good of the country and for the good of our members."

The union president predicted the membership would also support Nixon because "the programs that McGovern has proposed would probably cause a 30 per cent increase in taxes which could only come from one source — out of the pockets of our members."

The union represents workers from utility companies such as Consolidated Edison of New York and Southern California Edison.

SEN. JOHN TUNNEY
Election Cost $1.9 Million

Owes $106,450

Tunney still has campaign deficit

By ED ZUCKERMAN

From Our National Bureau
WASHINGTON — Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., still faces a $106,450 deficit from his 1970 campaign which cost $1.9 million.

According to reports filed with the secretary of the Senate, Tunney has three committees — two in Washington and one in Los Angeles — which are collecting money to repay the debt and to defray day-to-day expenses which normally accrue to an office holder.

A report filed by the Citizens for Sen. Alan Cranston Committee reveals that Tunney's colleague is in much better financial condition.

Since April 7, when a new financial disclosure law became effective, Cranston's backers have collected $53,330 in contributions and have allocated $21,331 for expenses. The committee had $48,962 in its bank account as of Aug. 31. Part of the surplus is attributable to funds which the committee collected prior to April 7.

One of Tunney's Washington committees — called the Committee to Elect John V. Tunney — has been inactive this year. The other — called Friends of J. V. Tunney — was activated June 15 when it collected $2,650 from 14 Washington area donors.

One of the contributors was identified as True Davis, a bank president who gave $250. Davis was identified as the source for columnist Jack Anderson's erroneous story that former Democratic vice-presidential candidate Thomas Eagleton had a drunken driving record.

The Tunney committees had $11,240 on hand April 7 and, as of August 31, added $19,200 in contributions. It spent $20,335, including $10,000 against the debt, and had $10,100 in its account at the end of the reporting period.

'If able,' LBJ to stump for Demos

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson says that, if able, he will campaign for the entire Democratic ticket.

The former president was asked by the Associated Press to clarify his campaigning plans in view of published reports speculating that his endorsement of George McGovern might not include active campaigning for the Democratic presidential nominee and his running mate, Sargent Shriver.

"There is nothing to clarify," Johnson wrote in a note to The AP.

"If able I will campaign for McGovern, Shriver, Sanders, Briscoe and all the ticket." Barefoot Sanders is running for the U.S. Senate in Texas and Dolph Briscoe for governor.

A speech at Temple Saturday night was Johnson's first public appearance since he was hospitalized for three days late in July after complaining of chest pains and nausea. Doctors said it was not a heart attack.

Johnson, 64, suffered a major heart attack last April, his first since a massive seizure in 1955. He has been hospitalized at least two other times with chest pains that doctors said were not heart attacks.

Johnson endorsed McGovern on Aug. 16 in a release made to two Fredericksburg, Tex., weekly newspapers near his ranch 65 miles from Austin. Johnson said he and McGovern had had differences and might have them in the future but "I shall support and vote for candidates of the Democratic Party."

'White Hat Day' fetes servicemen

Long Beach observed "White Hat Day" Saturday with a ceremonial banquet honoring 53 enlisted men from area Navy, Coast Guard and Marine commands for a year of flawless service.

The White Hats, most from Naval vessels stationed in Long Beach, were hosted as guests of honor by the Independent Business Men's Association at the city's 12th annual banquet for the men who are "the backbone of the service."

Each of the servicemen attending the ceremonies at Rochelle's Convention Center was presented with a nautically-styled plaque for their duty performance during the past year by the new Miss White Hat, Linda Richards, and her princess, Gail Remy.

ABOUT 250 persons, including Naval officers and officials and civic leaders as well as the enlisted men, heard addresses by James E. Johnson, assistant secretary of the Navy for manpower and reserve affairs, and by the Navy's master chief petty officer, John D. Whitet.

Battle lines forming on abortion issue

By SUSAN SWARD

SACRAMENTO (AP)—A pregnant woman driving down a Los Angeles freeway sees a billboard advertising an abortion counseling service and makes the call that puts her in touch with a doctor who will give her an abortion.

Another woman reads a newspaper article about an anti-abortion group forming in San Francisco and contacts the organizer because she dislikes California's liberalized abortion law.

Those women symbolize the battle lines being drawn on the abortion issue in California—a state that for four years has had a law which has had the effect of enabling just about any woman who wants an abortion to get one.

"The battle over the ethics of abortions is just beginning here," said the Rev. Hugh Anwyll, associate director of the Los Angeles Planned Parenthood group in an interview.

"THE debate is going to get much hotter before we're through. Any time we're in an interim stage—as we are now—a lot of people are going to have their value systems challenged," said Anwyll, who reported his nonprofit organization handles the majority of nonprofit abortion referrals in the state.

Anwyll and other proponents of California's 1967 Therapeutic Abortion Act say they have to agree with the vehement opponents of liberalized abortion laws when the opponents say they have "just begun to fight."

The act allows a woman to have an abortion in an accredited hospital if a three-doctor panel OKs her reason for the abortion—mental health problems, physiological problems, rape or incest—and the operation is performed during the first 20 weeks of pregnancy.

Last year 116,750 women underwent legal abortions in California, compared with 5,031 who did so in 1968, the first full year the law was in effect, the State Department of Public Health reports.

ANTI-ABORTION forces have watched these escalating statistics with a grim eye, but so far all efforts to toughen the act have been turned back in the California Legislature.

What galls the opponents is that experts say about 98 per cent of California abortions are performed under the mental health clause—or what the critics call "the mental health loophole."

Gov. Reagan expressed his disapproval of the current situation in a June news conference, saying he is unhappy abortions are available "on demand" as a result of the law he signed four years ago. But he added that he has not considered any specific changes in the present law.

Then in August a nationwide Gallup Poll came out showing that 64 per cent of Americans think only a woman and her physician should decide whether she has an abortion.

Assemblyman Robert Burke, a Huntington Beach Republican who has authored several unsuccessful attempts to toughen the abortion law, said in an interview he is not at all sure the poll accurately reflects Californians' sentiments on the issue.

THE Republican says it is clear that "the intent of the 1967 law hasn't been followed at all."

"I think the idea was that this panel of three doctors would interview the gal, and if she showed signs the pregnancy would be a real hardship mentally, then okay," Burke said in an interview. "But the way it's being used, some people in the medical profession are using the law as a crutch for abortion on demand."

Joe Burke, a San Francisco insurance executive who is no relation to Assemblyman Burke, heads a statewide umbrella group for antiabortion organizations called "Pro Life" which he says has about 60,000 members.

Speaking about the arguments people raise in favor of abortion, Joe Burke said, "The unwanted pregnancy argument hardly seems like a valid reason for taking a human life. There's a very clear parallel with Nazi Germany where the Jews weren't wanted and look at the holocaust that resulted from that."

Sen. Anthony Bellenson, the Beverly Hills Democrat who authored the liberalized law, says that where California moves on the abortion question will depend on who is elected governor in 1974. Reagan has said he won't be running again and there are a host of Republicans and Democrats who will probably be making the dash for the post.

Raid alerts greet POW relatives

By PETER ARNETT

HANOI 17 — The two American women who flew into Hanoi Saturday to escort home their captured loved ones were sent scurrying into roadside bunkers and concrete basements during four air raid alerts in their first five hours in North Vietnam.

"And I was silly enough to think that Washington would stop bombing while we were here," Olga Charles said. She sat hunched in the basement of the Hoa Binh hotel in downtown Hanoi as anti-aircraft guns spluttered into the sky. Mrs. Charles of San Diego is here to reunite with her husband, Navy Lt. Norris Charles, 27.

HANOI also has announced plans to release two other captured pilots, Air Force Maj. Edward K. Elias, 34, and Navy St. Mark L. Gartley, 20.

Minnie Lee Gartley of Dunedin, Fla., is here to get her son Mark. Elias is from Valdosta, Ga. His father had planned to make the trip to Hanoi, then changed his mind.

North Vietnamese officials visited the women at the hotel and said plans were going ahead to release the American prisoners, possibly Sunday.

Mrs. Charles was about to step into a bath after an arduous day of traveling when sirens screamed outside her room and hotel staff members hurried her downstairs.

GRAY-HAIRED Mrs. Gartley joined her on the stairway and both made their way through a labyrinth of back rooms and corridors to a concrete basement room.

This was the fourth time the American women and four peace activists escorting them had run for safety, and the strain was beginning to tell. The first time was at Gia Lam Airport at noon when a polite delegation of welcome quietly escorted the arriving Americans to an underground bunker. The Vietnamese waited outside under trees.

No sounds of bombing or shooting could be heard then but an hour later on the two-mile drive through farming land to Hanoi, a crowd of peasants waiting at a checkpoint began to run as anti-aircraft flak blossomed in the distance and explosions were heard. The motorcade screeched to stop and Mrs. Charles was half-dragged along the road by American antiwar activist David Dellinger to a bunker inside a small military post.

Dellinger cried out emotionally, "Is this Washington's answer to our visit?" But Mrs. Charles was smiling as she stepped inside the bunker and Mrs. Gartley was laughing.

TENSION rose noticeably when sirens again blared as the motorcade approached a pontoon bridge upriver from Paul Danner Bridge, which was hit by bombs two weeks ago and lay crumpled with its center spans down in the Red River.

North Vietnamese officials pushed the visiting Americans into roadside holes and said the bombing was taking place five or six miles away.

By the time the visiting party arrived at the Hoa Binh hotel, Mrs. Charles' flowery version of a Vietnamese traditional dress, the Aodai, was dirty and crumpled.

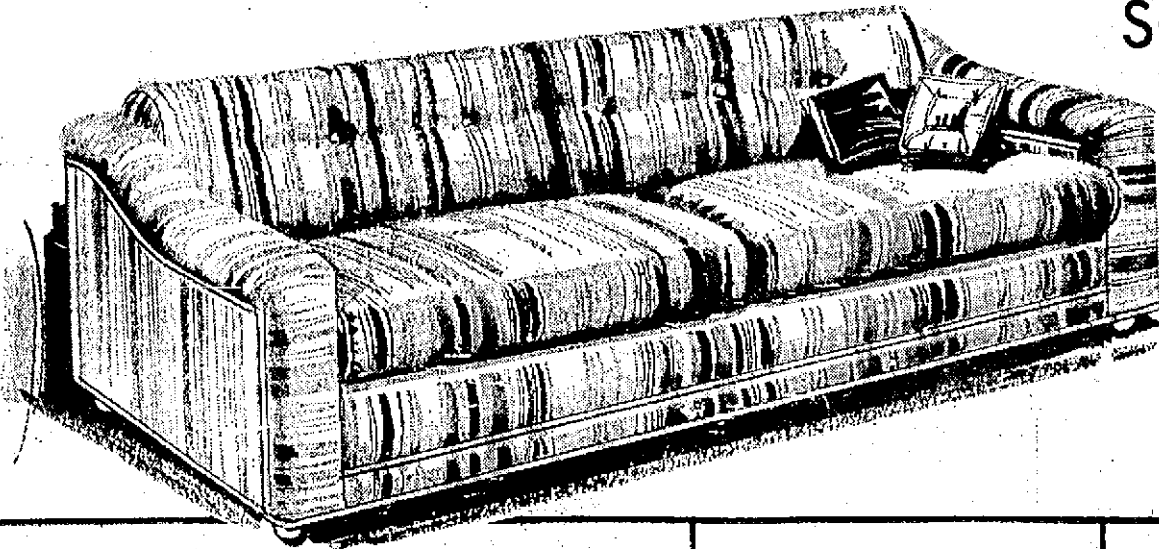

A three-course lunch cooled nerves but no sooner had the visitors moved upstairs for a brief siesta than anti-aircraft began chattering again, and it was a race to the downstairs concrete basement.

Sources in Saigon claimed that U.S. warplanes steered clear of Hanoi on Saturday.

Academy indicts emergency care

New York Times Service

NEW YORK—The National Academy of Sciences has charged that thousands of Americans die needlessly each year because of inadequate emergency health services.

In a report that sharply criticized the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the office of the President, the National Research Council, which is the operating arm of the academy, said that emergency services represented "one of the weakest links in the delivery of health care in the nation."

Accidental injuries impose "a staggering demand" on the nation's health services, the report said, and it termed such injuries, the leading killer of Americans aged 1 through 38.

"Thousands of lives are lost through lack of systematic application of established principles of emergency care," the academy charged.

The report said that many attendants who treated accident victims did not know even the basics of first aid. Other scientists have concluded from studies that as many as 18 per cent of automobile fatalities could have been averted if the victims had received proper emergency treatment.

The urgency expressed in the National Research Council's criticisms reflects growing efforts that private organizations like the American College of Surgeons are taking to try to improve the effectiveness of emergency health care services.

By stimulating better community planning, these organizations hope to raise the level of emergency care in this country to that existing in Eastern Europe, where such training and care are regarded as the most sophisticated in the world. The council said in the report, written last March but released by the academy just this month:

"Federal agencies have not kept pace with the efforts of professional and allied health organizations to upgrade emergency health services."

A spokesman for the National Academy of Sciences in Washington said that an early draft of the report had been sent to the White House before President Nixon delivered his state of the union address before Congress last January. In that message, Nixon expressed concern about the lag in American emergency medical care.

As a result, the academy spokesman said, administration officials have begun to take steps to develop in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare more effective leadership in emergency medicine.

The release now of the academy's report coincides with publicity and legislative proposals by other organizations to dramatize the need for better emergency care.

The American Medical Association pointed out in an editorial in its journal that the association had sponsored legislation that asks for a new department of emergency medicine in H.E.W. headed by a qualified health care professional appointed by the President. The proposed legislation also calls for measures recommended by the National Academy of Sciences to upgrade emergency care by improving the quality of ambulance vehicles and of the first-aid administered by drivers.

Meanwhile, more doctors are taking time to attend symposia on emergency medicine.

Doctors attending such meetings are among the increasing number of American physicians who are specializing full-time in emergency medicine.

The four-year-old American College of Emergency Physicians, an organization of such specialists based in East Lansing, Mich., estimates that 15,000 doctors now qualify as emergency physicians. They are working full-time in hospital emergency rooms, clinics, factories and part-time wherever large crowds gather, such as in sports stadiums. Though comparative figures are not available, officials of the organization say that they believe the present total of such specialists is considerably larger than it was a decade ago.

Explorer space-lab launch set

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — Explorer 47, an 880-pound space physics laboratory, is to be launched into orbit Friday to survey interplanetary radiation, the solar wind and magnetic fields.

A three-stage Delta rocket is to lift off at 9:20 p.m. to propel the satellite, heaviest in the Explorer series, into an orbit ranging from 127,000 to 153,000 miles above the earth.

From this lofty outpost, the satellite is to provide scientists with a more detailed understanding of the dynamics of interplanetary space, expanding knowledge gained by eight earlier satellites in this program, including one which orbited the moon.

MOSCOW (NYTS) — The Soviet Union Saturday launched the unmanned spacecraft Cosmos 519, believed to be a military observation satellite. It was placed into an orbit of 130 by 213 miles at an angle of 71.3 degrees.

The previous spacecraft provided considerable knowledge on the space environment and defined the nature and extent of the magnetosphere, an enormous teardrop-shaped envelope which surrounds the earth. It is formed by the solar wind, a supersonic stream of radiation particles from the sun which strike earth's magnetic field, unable to penetrate and thus flowing around it.

Within the magnetosphere, which extends out millions of miles, complex electrical and magnetic forces interact with one another and with radiation particles, sometimes with turbulent results. After particularly heavy flare explosions on the sun, for example, cosmic rays sweeping along with the solar wind bombard earth's atmosphere to create auroral displays, radio blackouts and magnetic storms.

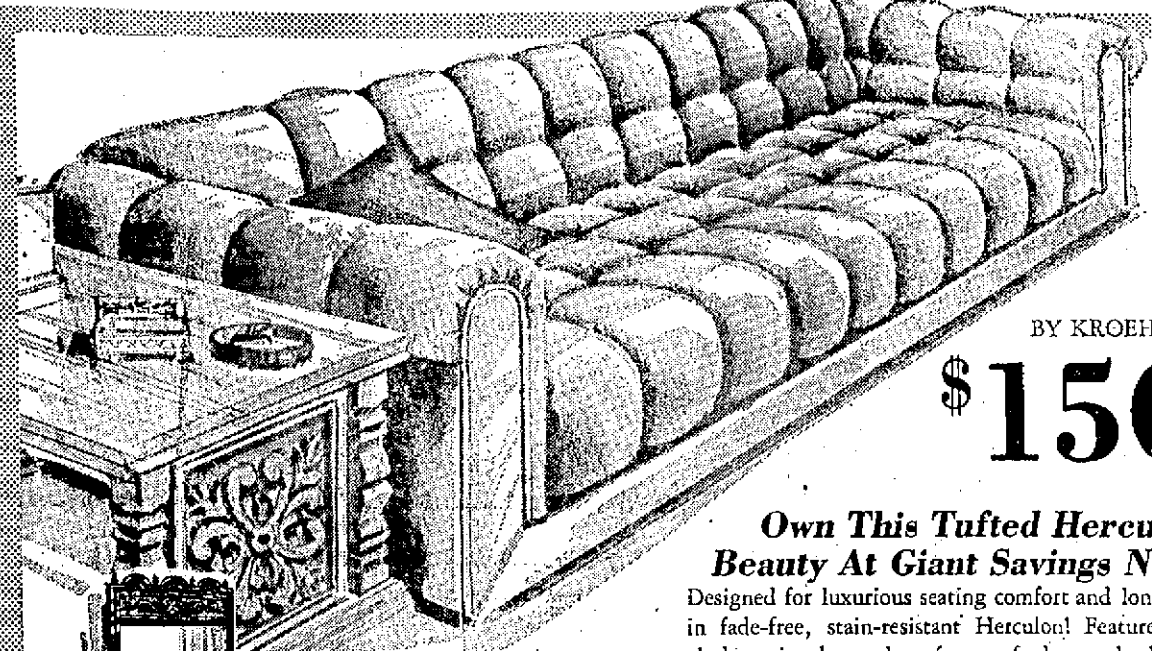

Explorer 47 carries 13 experiments to study galactic and solar cosmic rays, plasmas and magnetic and electrical fields and project officials hope it will provide a better understanding of what happens out there, especially in the magnetosphere.

McGovern offices in S.F. burglarized

And controversial Clean water bill
'tough, expensive'

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — The bill is called the "toughest in history" and it does call for more money than any such legislation in the past but the new federal water pollution control bill is still very much of a compromise.

Even so it is controversial because of both the toughness of regulations and the amount of money involved — $24 billion over three years.

The bill is the product of a House-Senate conference and will come before both houses for action probably in early October just before the planned congressional recess.

"The compromise reached by the conferees is a mixed bag," said Barbara Reid of the Environmental Policy Center and Dave Zwick, author of a Ralph Nader study on water pollution.

The conservationists are delighted with the money proposed with $18 billion going into 75 per cent grants to municipalities to build sewage treatment plants.

The remainder will be split between reimbursement of past municipal costs and low interest loans to industry.

The conservationists, however, warned that John Ehrlichman, a presidential counselor on domestic policy, has stated that the funding amount could be grounds for a veto because of inflationary pressures.

Congress, goaded by presidential complaints about inaction on environmental affairs, is very likely to pass the legislation despite conservationist reservations and presiden-

By July 1, 1977 industry must be using the "best practicable control technology and by July 1, 1983 it must be using the best available technology."

The conservationists will support the bill while warning that the current administration has argued against some of its tougher provisions.

ANALYSIS

tion, will essentially continue their present programs.

However, EPA has the power to step in when the states fail to meet federal guidelines. In addition the agency can shut down industries in a pollution emergency.

A federal system was also approved for fines, set at $25,000 a day for the first day of violation and a $50,000 a day thereafter.

The conservationists, however, complained that "key enforcement requirements of the bill are made discretionary with EPA rather than requiring EPA to prosecute all violators of the law."

"Congress has failed to repair the most serious loophole in the old law — discretionary enforcement. By leaving the government free not to prosecute politically powerful polluters, this bill virtually guarantees 'abusive under enforcement,'" said Ms. Reed and Zwick.

The second major thrust of the bill sets two dates for industry.

Russ may snag U.N. antipollution plans

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Recommendations for new international machinery to stop pollution and save resources are expected to have trouble in the U.N. General Assembly opening Tuesday because the Soviet Union had no part in drafting them.

They come from the 113-nation U.N. Conference on the Human Environment in Stockholm last June. The Soviet Union and close Eastern European allies boycotted that conference because East Germany was barred from participating on an equal basis with West Germany.

Some observers have the impression that they will bargain for some U.N. recognition of East Germany, perhaps the right to have an observer here as West Germany does, in return for going along with proposals that they had no hand in.

The conference report recommends that the 132-nation assembly decide to convene another such conference; designate June 5 "World Environment Day," and establish or authorize the following:

— An elected, 54-country governing council for environmental programs to promote such programs within the U.N. system.

— A small secretariat in the United Nations under an executive director to work on them.

— An environmental coordinating board of executives of the United Nations and related agencies to dovetail the environmental jobs of their institutions.

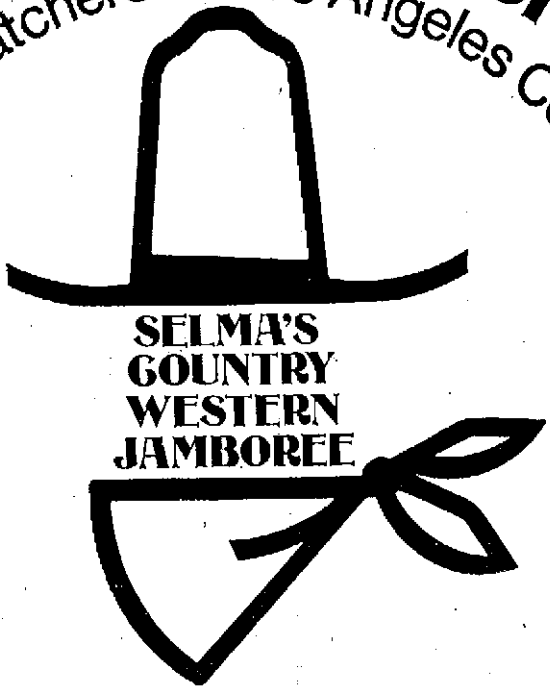

The environment is one of 100 items proposed for the agenda of the assembly's three-month 27th session.

Foreign Minister Adam

Malik of Indonesia, president of the 1971 assembly, will convene the new session Tuesday afternoon and Deputy Foreign Minister Stanislaw Trepaczynski of Poland will be elected president for 1972.

He will sit on the podium with a new secretary-general, Austrian diplomat Kurt Waldheim.

Safety measures emerging to halt collisions at sea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Explosions, fires and grinding collisions in the world's sea lanes are leaving a wake of death, destruction and ecological ruin, but preventive measures are emerging—gradually.

In October, the world-wide Intergovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization will meet again to continue negotiating safety on the high seas.

The U.S. Coast Guard, meanwhile, has turned to writing regulations to stem the tide of death in home waters.

"We're starting to draw white lines in the water," said Capt. Berry Meaux, Coast Guard public information officer.

Lt. Cmdr. Ken Wodman of the Merchant Marine Safety Division added: "We are developing some pretty fancy systems to overcome human error. You still can't run a ship by machine. The ships' masters are the final authority (but) you can improve the way they perform by giving them additional aids."

AND SPRINGING up around the world are dozens of traffic control systems in important and busy harbors and waterways to minimize the risk of collisions and groundings. The aids include the usual bobbing buoys, stop and go signals, fancy radar and computer systems and new minimum personnel standards. But there's more.

Several new U.S. laws have armed the Coast Guard with muscle. To prevent disasters of unknown proportions that might occur in places such as the petrochemical-lined Houston ship channel, for example, the Coast Guard has issued new regulations for vessels carrying dangerous cargoes.

The bridge-to-bridge radiotelephone act, which became law last year, requires vessels of certain size to operate and monitor such ship-to-ship communications by Jan. 1 in another move to reduce collisions.

The Coast Guard is preparing to license the operators, and possibly the engineers, of towing vessels 26 feet or more in length. These regulations were prepared under a law signed by President Nixon July 14. And just days earlier, July 10, the President signed the Ports and Waterways Safety and Environmental Quality Act.

Each act was preceded by one or more serious but avoidable accidents, such as the massive oil leak resulting from the grounding of the Torrey Canyon off the British and French coasts in 1967.

"OIL SPILLS have focused public attention on the need for safety," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Gill Shaw, who was public information officer in San Francisco at the time the Arizona Standard and the Oregon Standard, two oil tankers, collided in the bay spilling 800,000 gallons of crude oil.

The impetus for the ports and waterways safety act came earlier. On Jan. 20, 1970, the USS Yancy, a Navy ship, dragged its anchor in high wind and slammed against the Chesapeake Bay bridge-tunnel causing millions of dollars in damage. On Feb. 5, 1970, Rep. Thomas N. Downing of Virginia introduced legislation to provide for vessel traffic control along with other port safety measures.

The Arizona Standard and Oregon Standard collision came the following year but provided the final push for the legislation. Threaded through the debate, however, was traditional resistance to suggestions that ships' masters surrender any of their authority.

IN THE San Francisco Bay accident, a Coast Guard watch observed the two ships closing on his radar screen. He was in contact with one but not the other on his radio and otherwise was helpless. Under the bridge-to-bridge, radio-telephone act, the masters of each ship would have been able to consult with each other and with the Coast Guard watch.

Under the waterways safety act, the coast guardsman could have recommended a course of action because the new law allows the Coast Guard to "direct the anchoring, mooring or movement of a vessel when necessary to prevent damage to or by that vessel or her cargo, stores, supplies or fuel."

The new laws are especially directed at confined waterways. At sea, the risk is not so great although collisions do occur. And since ships are getting bigger, they will be easier to hit.

AFTER THE Torrey Canyon incident, international attention focused on minimizing oil spills. The Torrey Canyon broke up at sea in March 1967, losing 30,000 tons of crude oil on the southwest coast of Great Britain and the Brittany Coast of France. In November the ship's owner, Barracuda Tanker Corp., and the ship's charterer, Union Oil of California, agreed to $7.2 million in damages to be paid by a consortium of U.S. and British insurance companies to the governments of Great Britain and France.

IMCO has since agreed to limit the size of tanks in tankers without limiting the size of the ship, according to Cmdr. Don Hintze of the Coast Guard's international affairs division. Hintze said that when the agreement is ratified, it will be retroactive to cover ships built after Jan. 1, 1972.

Hintze said tankers now are being built to carry as much as 500,000 tons while some ships exceeding 300,000 tons already are in operation. Explaining the decision to limit tank size rather than ship tonnage, Hintze said it was reasoned that smaller tankers would mean "many more tankers and more chances of collision."

ANOTHER proposed IMCO regulation would require graphic displays in wheelhouses covering just what kind of performances can be expected from the ship. This would give the helmsman such instant information as how long it takes to stop, how the ship will respond if he reverses engines, or how sharply he can turn.

IMCO also produces traffic separation schemes and one covers the Malacca Straits, a lifetime for Japanese oil resources which narrows to six miles with a treacherously shifting bottom.

But traffic separation schemes don't always work. According to Scott H. Elder of the Great Lakes Carriers Association, the separation courses established for the lakes as early as 1911 are "religiously adhered to by American and Canadian vessels (but) this has not been the case with overseas flag vessels entering the Great Lakes through the St. Lawrence Seaway."

IN THE St. Lawrence seaway, collisions were occurring at the rate of one a month for three years until traffic controls were imposed in 1968. Since then collisions have averaged three a year.

Accidents and the desire to prevent them have led to the new laws but, as Adm. W. M. Benkert, chief of the Coast Guard Marine Environment Office, put it:

"I want to emphasize that with all of the sophisticated marine navigational aids now in existence, and being developed for the future, we still require the wisdom of human judgment to make correct decisions."

ECOLOGY MEET MONDAY

MOSCOW (AP) — A group of American environmental experts arrived in the Soviet capital Saturday for the first session of a joint U.S.-Soviet committee for the protection of the environment, established during President Nixon's summit meeting here last May.

The delegation, headed by Russell E. Train, chairman of the Council on Environmental Policy, will open discussions with Russian specialists Monday.

Moves up East Coast

Red tide blamed in 7 poison cases

BOSTON (AP) — A so-called red tide of algae which Massachusetts officials blamed for at least seven cases of shellfish poisoning moved up the northern New England coast Saturday.

Public health officials in Boston described two of the reported cases as "serious" and said both victims were expected to recover. But they warned delay in treatment could result in fatal respiratory paralysis.

Besides illness, the tide of tiny marine organisms carried economic woes. A Massachusetts marine fisheries official said "already we're talking about hundreds of thousands of dollars."

State health officials in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine closed clam flats along all or part of their coasts from the Rhode Island border north to Cape Elizabeth, Maine.

Massachusetts also banned all sale of clams and related shellfish, even imported and frozen clams.

Dr. William J. Bicknell, Massachusetts public health commissioner, said tests of clams dug in the "red tide" area had shown concentrations of toxins more than 100 times the internationally accepted safe level.

He said the Massachusetts embargo on imported and frozen clams was imposed as "a control measure."

"There's no easy way to trace a clam once it comes in," he said.

The Massachusetts ban affects clams, quahogs, mussels, Cape scallops and "sea clams." Lobsters, crabs, deep sea scallops and fish were not affected.

Public health officials say the "red tide" and accompanying shellfish poisoning occurs nearly annually in Maine and eastern Canada, but has not been reported in Massachusetts for more than a decade.

Ships head into port after crash

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — The freighters Republica de Colombia and Transhawaii, which collided off the North Carolina coast Thursday, were en route to ports Saturday with neither vessel in any apparent danger.

The 574-foot Colombian vessel, abandoned Friday with her stern low in the water, remained stable as she was towed toward Norfolk, Va., by a commercial tug. The Transhawaii was en route to Baltimore under her own power.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the Republica de Colombia was trailing a dense string of diesel oil from the gaping hole pierced in her side by the American freighter in the Thursday afternoon collision.

Editor's Note: The National Park System is 100 years old this month and its showing some signs of age and the stresses caused by years of change. The Conservation Foundation has just completed a massive study of the system and it has some startling suggestions, not all of them popular with the National Park Service itself.

By GIL BAILEY
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — One hundred years ago when Yellowstone National Park was dedicated the buffalo still roamed and the skies were not cloudy all day. Today the skies of the national parks are often cloudy with smog and the few buffalo left are contained but motorcycles are not.

As the urban Americans flocked to the national parks, so have the urban problems of America come to the parks—lots, overcrowding, noise pollution, pot and the destruction of the very values the parks were intended to preserve.

"The National Park System can best meet the future needs of all Americans by reasserting its original mission—the preservation and interpretation of natural landscapes and ecosystems," said the Conservation Foundation in its Report on The Parks, a report commissioned by the National Park Service and the National Park Centennial Commission.

The report, released Saturday after a year-long study by more than 100 conservationists, called for a smaller role, not a bigger one, for the Park Service.

In essence the foundation said the Park Service should get out of the urban park business, such as the proposed "Gateway" urban parks in San Francisco and New York and the cultural park, "Wolftrap," near Washington D.C.

In addition the foundation recommended that the use of the national parks be limited, including:

- Banning autos in the national parks;
- Elimination of private concessionaires, hotels, golf courses, bars, shopping centers and other like urban facilities.
- Elimination of most hunting and fishing.
- Park campgrounds should be limited to rustic structures and provide for camping only in tents with tent equipment rental facilities available," the report said.

The report hit hardest at the auto.

"Automobiles can destroy our national park heritage just as sure as they have made our cities inhumane and dangerous to limb and lung and have desecrated much of the metropolitan countryside," the report charged.

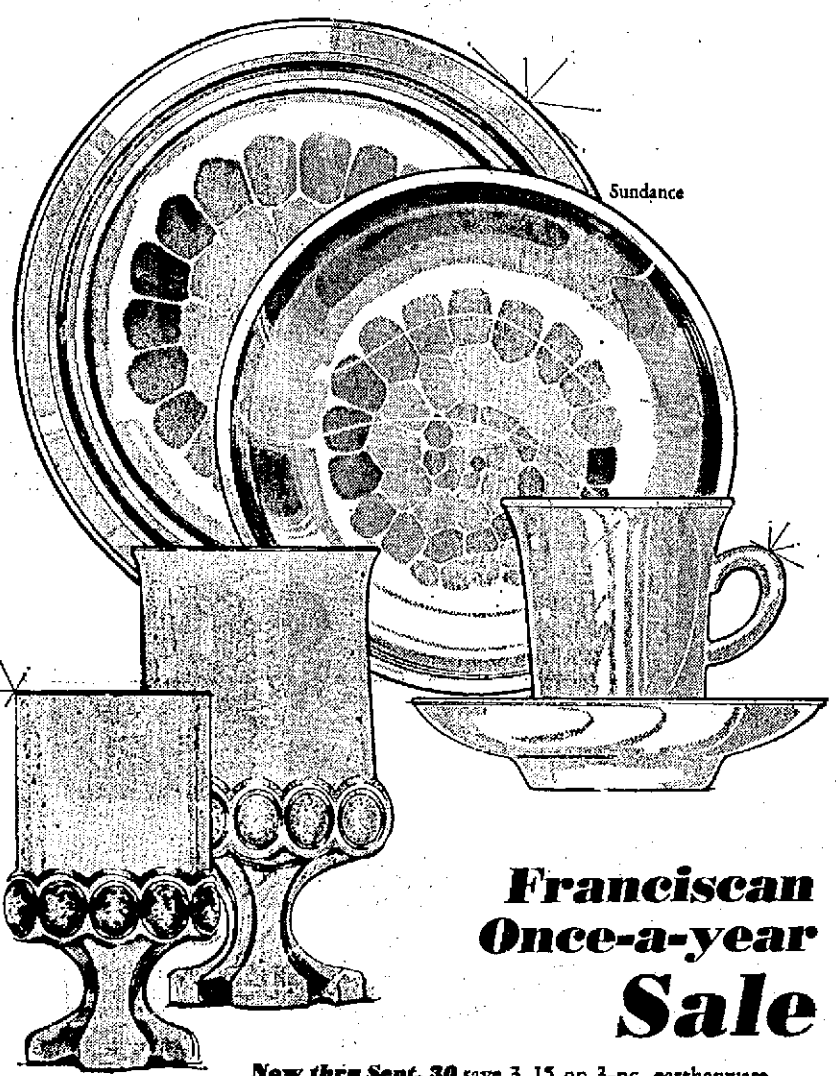

Specifically it recommended "an immediate moratorium on road building, parking lots and other auto-oriented improvements." In addition it suggested Secretary of the Interior Rogers C.B. Morton appoint a special commission "to study the entire question of private automobiles in the parks and alternative methods of intrapark transportation."

While the report proposed that the park service get out of "the Disneyland concept of parks," according to Sydney Howe, president of the foundation, it also called for more parks.

"Our Task Force on the National Park System and Urban America recommended a $100-billion 'Buy Back America' bond program for the purpose of land acquisition, capital development, and improvement of national, state, city and county park systems," the report pointed out.

The money would be used to purchase nearly 52 million acres of land, invest-pocket parks.

New taxes on land sales and a five per cent sales tax on recreational equipment are proposed to help finance the parks program.

While the foundation does not want urban parks such as the Gateway projects which would join federal and state holdings in San Francisco and New York into parks, under the control of the Park Service, it does not oppose the Gateway projects.

Instead of seeking to increase the number of people who can be squeezed each year into the parks, the report stressed the "carrying capacity" of the parks.

"The simplest meaning of this concept is the abiloutside influence and still retain its essence. When carrying capacity is ex-tional parks," the report claimed.

As a result the report called for the elimination of off-road use of vehicles.

"Hunting should be generally prohibited, the stocking of exotic species should stop, and fresh-water fishing activities should be limited to maintain native fish populations at optimum levels (without stocking)," the report also concluded.

The major stress of the report, however, was on the limiting of the role of the National Park Service.

"Efforts to make the system all-inclusive are trifly mistaken: first, such efforts will dilute the interial strength necessary to carry on a vital environmental preservation function; second, they will sap energies and ambitions at other levels of government; third, the American people ought not to expect a single federal agency to give adequate and properly balanced attention to the many separate strands of American society, culture, history and environment,"
the report said,

In narrowing the job of the service, the report suggested that information centers be set up in major cities to teach the city dweller how to live in the wilderness on the wilderness' terms.

Howe, in an interview with the Washington Bureau of the Independent, Press-Telegram stressed the kind of mistakes urbanization of the parks can cause.

"In Yellowstone they built a shopping center in a grizzly bear mating area. That caused problems for more than just the bears," he said.

Yellowstone hosts world park meet

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo. (UPI) — Elephants are making grasslands out of forests in some Kenyan Parks and National Park
Director Perez M. Olindo hopes to find an answer to the problem this week high in the Rocky Mountains

Olindo and 500 other wildlife and park specialists attending the Second World Conference on National Parks opening Monday will consider and debate such problems through Sept. 27.

Tuesday there will be a visit by Mrs. Pat Nixon and U.S. Interior Secretary Rogers CB. Morton for the centennial rededication of Yellowstone, the world's first national park.

Olindo's problem, that of too many elephants uprooting too many trees, is only one that will be discussed.

Aged, lonely, they lie there and die

somebody cares, Dr. Litwack says.

"It was so easy to turn our back because, basically, it wasn't our problem. But we felt if we had one person to coordinate and follow through, we might be able to help."

The Department, through L. G. Esles, the director of the Division of Environmental Health, queried city, county and state officials. The state agreed to sponsor the new program at a cost of $18,556 a year, and Don Cillay, a sanitarian described as "warm, concerned and conscientious" was appointed. (The funding, however, stops in July, 1973)

And the calls from the concerned neighbors or milkmen or grocery clerks began.

A 61-year-old man had always had trouble caring for himself, and suddenly disappeared into his small home on Lime Avenue. He hadn't been seen for several days. He was found alive — but, undernourished and living in filth. He was persuaded to go to Veterans Hospital until he could "get back on your feet." He agreed, but arrived at the hospital in critical condition. His time had almost run out.

A small, 70-year-old woman owned and operated a little-patronized shop on Atlantic Avenue. She had lived in pain most of her life and because of it would spend much of her time in a chair. To move about was difficult and as she grew older she grew confused. Her shop was littered but her living quarters were a "health hazard." It took time and patience, but she was convinced that medical help might alleviate the pain and while she was confined to a hospital, her business could be placed in trust with a local bank. Both the business and the woman survived.

A 68-year-old man was found dazed and wandering around the bus station by a Travelers Aid employee. Through detective work his home was found but his problem not solved. He had difficulty taking care of himself and couldn't stand for long. He was confused. He was happy with the idea of moving into a boarding home, but before the arrangements could be made he was found on the floor of his small apartment, unable to move. Taken to a hospital, he died less than a month later. For him, help came too late.

A 70-year-old woman lived alone in a small apartment on 52nd Street. Although she was able to walk once she was standing, it was almost impossible for her to rise from a chair alone. Her legs, feet and hands were badly swollen, but she refused medical help. When Cillay tried again to talk her into accepting help, he found her on the floor of her apartment. She died two days later.

A 57-year-old woman lived alone in a small apartment on Magnolia Street. She had fallen and broken several bones but had managed to crawl back into bed where she was found by Cillay after neighbors noticed no movement in the apartment for days. She survived.

A 65-year-old woman was chair-bound, unable to move or speak. She had sores on her arm and foot and ants were crawling on her. Maggots were found in several sores on her body. Her husband was with her but was senile. She didn't survive.

A 90-year-old woman lived with her 60-year-old retarded daughter in filth and near starvation. They didn't know what to do.

A former teacher — with a masters degree in education — lives in an alcohol stupor because of an undiagnosed brain tumor.

An 80-year-old man had fallen and broken his ankle, leaving him in the care of his senile wife. Both had almost starved to death before help arrived.

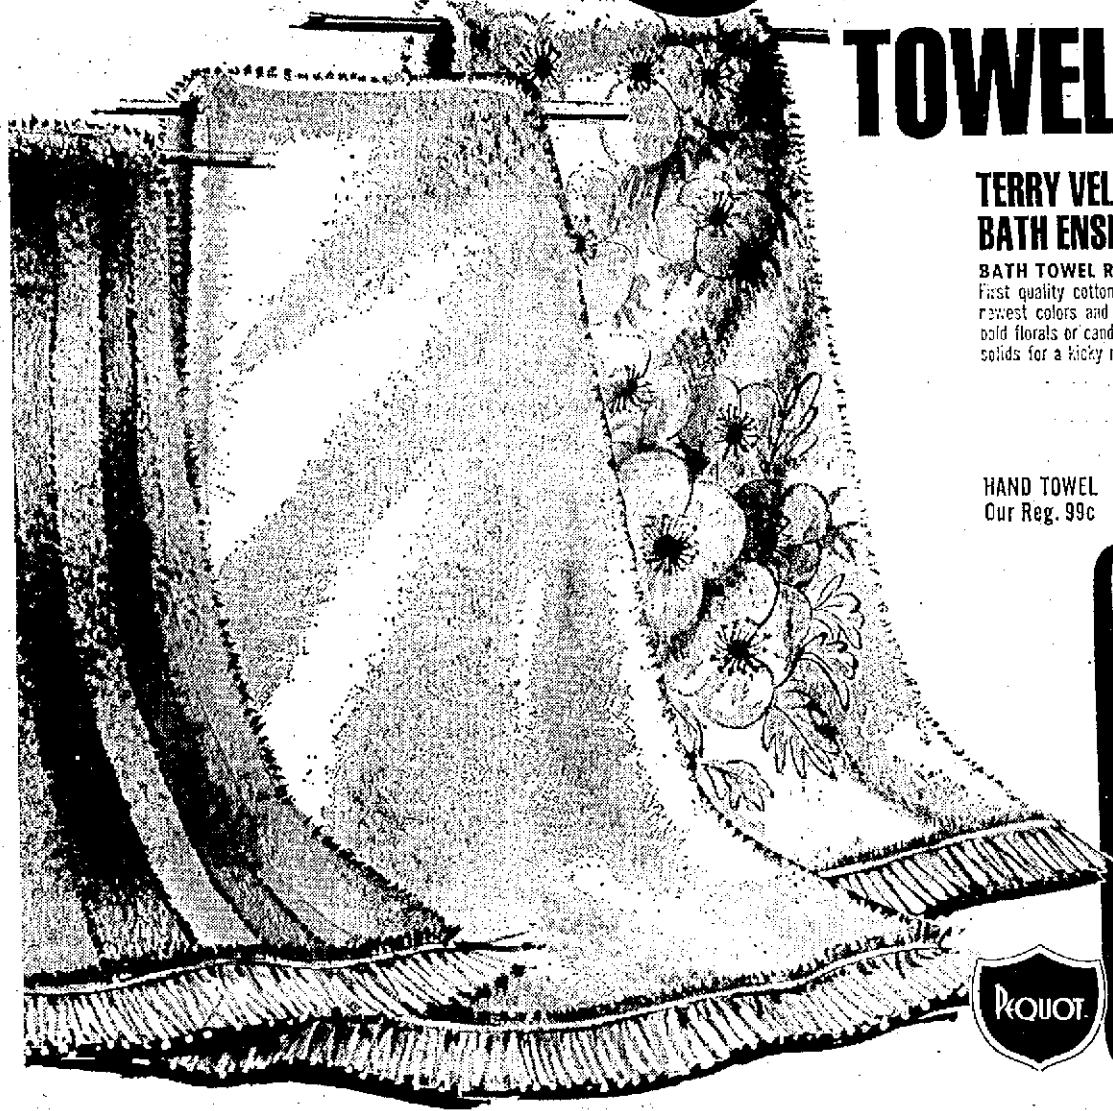

"THERE ARE 50,364 people over 65 in Long Beach — 14 per cent of the population," Dr. Litwack points out. "Someone should be thinking about them — not only the ambulatory ones — the ones that can get to programs set up for them, but those who can't."

The Resources Coordinator, the doctor says, fulfills only a small piece of the needs of the elderly. "There are other needs not met. In Canada they have what they call a 'Friendly Visitor' who periodically calls on older persons. Just to see another person... is as essential as food. There should be some sort of provision for the lonely, home-bound to be visited by someone that's healthy and able to get around."

"Even a telephone call would help."

Felony

When a person is convicted of a felony for drug possession and sentenced to jail, is he still eligible to be drafted? Will he lose his right to vote? L.M., La Mirada.

A prior felony conviction does not automatically disqualify a man from induction nor does it automatically deprive him of his right to vote. In either case it will depend, in part, on the nature and circumstances of the crime, according to spokesmen for the Selective Service System and the Los Angeles County Registrar of Voters. A draftee with a prior felony conviction will be processed for induction as any other draftee and Selective Service will determine if he is available for military service. Then the Armed Forces area command will decide if he is acceptable. If they do not accept him at that time they can either suggest his local draft board call him within the next year for re-examination or label him 4-F and unacceptable. When a former felon attempts to register to vote and admits his criminal record, he will be instructed to register by phone with the County Registrar of Voters. Then attorneys for the county will investigate the facts of his conviction and decide if he will be allowed to vote. If the right to vote is withheld, he can apply to the superior court for a reversal of the decision.

Unit price

I attended college during the first summer session and filed for my school veterans' benefits for that period. I was supposed to be paid for three units' worth of work, but the Veterans Administration sent me a check for only two units. When I wrote the VA to tell them they still owed me some money, I got a reply saying I actually owed them $5.40. Can ACTION LINE help? D.H., Cypress.

By now you have a check from the VA for the school benefits you are owed. A spokesman for the VA told ACTION LINE that "we misinterpreted the information he gave us. We have recomputed his file and will send him a check immediately."

Third and Eliot

I have noticed that the name "Eliot Street" is inscribed on some curbs along Third Street. Was Third once called Eliot Street and if so, why? W.C.B., Long Beach.

What is now Third Street east from Junipero Avenue was called Eliot until about the mid-1920s when extensive reworking and renaming of Long Beach streets took place, according to Mark Houghton, retired chief right-of-way engineer for the City of Long Beach. Houghton, a local history expert, told ACTION LINE that west of Junipero, the street always has been Third. Houghton said he knew of no reason for the street being named Eliot, other than it being the choice of one of the original subdividers of the east half of the Alamitos Beach Townsite. About this same time, several north-south streets which originally followed an alphabetical pattern east from Alamitos Avenue, were renamed to correspond with new streets in the recently-developed areas north of the original tracts. Descanso became Orange Avenue. Independencia was renamed Cherry. Naranja became Temple. Ojai was redubbed Orizaba. Quito became Coronado and Sorbrante was changed to Loma.

On the trail

I would like some information about the bicycle trail along the Los Angeles River flood control channel. Can you ride on the concrete floor or must you stay on the levee? Along the trail near Del Amo Boulevard are lines painted on the floor of the riverbed. What are these lines for? D.K., Long Beach.

Bicycles may be ridden along the top of the levee and on the east side of the channel floor from Imperial Highway to 26th Way and De Forest Avenue, said D.W. Bachman of the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation. Ramps provide access to the channel floor. Cyclists are not supposed to ride on the steep slopes, forbidden, he said. Motorized cycles aren't allowed on the trail. Other entrances to the trail are at Alondra Boulevard and Rosecrans Avenue. An entrance at Del Amo Boulevard is under consideration. The painted lines on the river bed near that street aren't related to the bike trail. They simulate street lines and are used for training bus and truck drivers.

Swedish jet hijackers give up in Madrid

they had been able to end the hijacking without violence.

It was a peaceful end to an odyssey that began Friday afternoon when three of the Croations forced the Scandinavian Airlines DC9 traveling from Goteburg to Stockholm to land in Malmo in Southern Sweden. There, the hijackers released 79 passengers in exchange for six Croations and $100,000. The six had been serving prison terms for their role in the murder of the Yugoslav ambassador to Sweden last year.

The SAS plane landed at the airport at Barajas at noon, some three hours after leaving Malmo with the nine Croats and a Swedish crew of four, including two hostesses. Protracted negotiation with Spanish authorities followed while the plane was kept to one side of the field near the freight terminal, regular airport activity continued as if nothing abnormal was happening with the exception of several busloads of Spanish police.

At one point, a fueling truck drew up to the plane but then drew away almost immediately apparently after the hijackers refused to accept refueling. Later, they agreed to a change of crew after the original one pleaded exhaustion. The hijackers thus gave the impression that they had no clear idea of their course of action. Considerable time passed while the Croats debated among themselves inside the plane.

The hijackers are members of the national Ustashi movement in Croatia and are strongly opposed to the federal Communist regime in Yugoslavia. One factor in the Croats' uncertainty was believed to have been the limited number of countries willing to accept them. Some of them at least were thought to have considered anticommunist Spain, which has no diplomatic relations with Belgrade, as one of the few countries that might grant them asylum.

However, Spain does maintain friendly relations with Sweden and, in addition, is strongly opposed to hijacking. The expectation was that the three hijackers would either be tried here by a military court or else returned to Sweden, as the latter is requesting. The six released prisoners were expected to be handed back to Swedish authorities.

In addition to the money the hijackers had forced Swedish authorities to hand over, the Croations were found to be carrying four pistols. But authorities were understood to have found no explosives, indicating that Friday's threat to blow up the plane was a bluff.

U.S. buys arms detection devices for airlines' use

WASHINGTON (AP)—A $2.7-million purchase of 1,090 walk-through passenger-screening devices and 1,200 hand-held units for added airport security was announced Saturday by the Transportation Department.

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe said the units would be operated and maintained by the airlines, for screening passengers before boarding.

All the hand-held units are to be delivered by November.

The walk-through devices, screening passengers as they pass through an electromagnetic field in a passageway about four feet long, three feet wide and eight feet high, are to be in place by next January.

Volpe said the purchase, under a $5.3-million authorization from the Congress, will provide added protection at all 531 airports served by scheduled airlines.

The airlines already have in service about 700 detection devices

Kissinger cites gains in Soviet talks; not so Viet maintaining differences can be worked out within a few weeks.

—Nixon is approaching U.S.-Soviet economic relationships on a global basis, and a comprehensive economic agreement should be completed before the end of this year. It will be submitted to Congress for its approval.

Included in the package of economic issues are the lend-lease, maritime and trade issues and the proposed granting of most-favored-nation tariff treatment to the Soviet Union.

—The Soviets made a proposal which may lead to a break in East-West stalemate regarding a European security conference and talks on mutual balanced force reductions.

The Communist East European countries have been pushing for a European security conference, preliminary consultations for which are tentatively slated to begin in Helsinki in November. But the Soviets have been reserved about the call by the Western allies for parallel talks on mutual force cuts.

Kissinger said, "The Soviet Union has now made a general proposal" which is "at least worthy of every serious consideration," adding that "a framework for the solution of this problem now exists."

—Kissinger took to Bonn, Paris and London word from Nixon of the President's interest in forming a "new, even more dynamic" relationship between the United States and Europe.

He gave no details but left open the possibility that sometime after the November election Nixon will be traveling to Europe again to promote the tighter relationship.

—Round 2 of SALT is likely to start before the end of the year. Round 1 culminated in the offensive-defensive missile curb pact signed at the Moscow summit in May and just approved by Congress.

Pakistan releases 273 India internees

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan handed over to India on Saturday 273 Indian civilian nationals who were interned from occupied areas during last December's war.

The Indians — 122 men, 85 women and 66 children — crossed into India under the supervision of the International Committee of the Red Cross. India is supposed to repatriate several hundred interned Pakistanis.

Tank-led Israelis sweep 16 villages in Lebanon

said waves of Israeli Skyhawks and Mirage jets smashed bridges across the Litani River 55 miles south of Beirut and bombed Palestine guerrilla headquarters near the refugee camp at Nabattiyeh.

The Lebanese government declared a state of emergency following an emergency cabinet meeting but it did not say how it planned to use its special powers.

The Israeli armed forces chief of staff, Gen. David Elazar, said in a television interview from the combat area that "the infrastructure of the guerrilla bases, the staging areas and bases, were eradicated and destroyed."

The assault was the biggest against Arab guerrilla camps in southern Lebanon in seven months.

Elazar said the attack was aimed at "territory that according to our information held terrorist bases."

The area is called "Fatahland," after the Al Fatah Arab guerrilla organization. The attack came four days after Prime Minister Golda Meir said Israel will hit the guerrillas "with all our might" wherever it can. The Israeli spokesman said it was not Israel's purpose to seize ground and hold it. "We had the terrorists in mind, but the Lebanese army decided to put up a show, a stronger show than up till now," he said.

The military command said earlier that "the clash between the Lebanese army came because the Lebanese units that intervened in the Israeli antiguerrilla action showed opposition and opened fire."

The Israelis, always unhappy with the way Lebanon handles the guerrillas encamped on its territory, have been demanding all-out suppression since 11 Israelis died as the result of an Arab commando raid at the Munich Olympics.

Prime Minister Salam told parliament Lebanese losses were 17 soldiers killed and seven wounded, and eight civilians killed. Army spokesman said three tanks had been destroyed, a gun carrier burned and three anti-aircraft batteries hit.

A guerrilla spokesman said Israeli losses included one plane, two tanks and three military vehicles.

Israeli aircraft first struck deep into guerrilla territory at 8 a.m. (1 a.m. EDT), and five hours later attacked guerrilla encampments on the slopes of Mt. Hermon eight times and another base near Nabattiyeh, the Israeli command said.

The Middle East News Agency said Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine liberation organization, was directing guerrilla operations against the Israelis "from an advanced position in the central sector of south Lebanon."

Damascus radio said Syrian President Hafaz Assad had announced Syrian troops were prepared to help Lebanon repel the Israeli attack. Syrian authorities briefly closed Damascus airport because of fears of an Israeli strike against Syria, but it was reopened later to international civil traffic.

An Israeli spokesman said the Israeli task force, under covering mortar fire, crossed the Lebanese frontier of high green hills in at least three points in a pincer movement that squeezed an area the command said contained about 700 guerrillas.

The force penetrated 12 miles, flushing 15 villages, uncovering big weapons depots, munitions and underground bunkers containing machineguns, the Israeli national radio correspondent said. He said the guerrillas fled to the wadis and hills.

Israeli armor hit two Lebanese tanks, one of which had struck an Israeli tank, the correspondent said.

"The Lebanese army has intervened in the course of the action and, as a result, Lebanese forces were hit," the Israeli command said.

An Israeli military spokesman said at 6:30 p.m. (11:30 a.m. EDT) the raiders had "completed their task and attained all their objectives" with the exception of the Lebanese village of Kafr Goa where fighting was still going on.

"When we are through mopping up and when we finish the job we have to do, we will clear out — the Lebanese will not dictate when we should withdraw," he said.

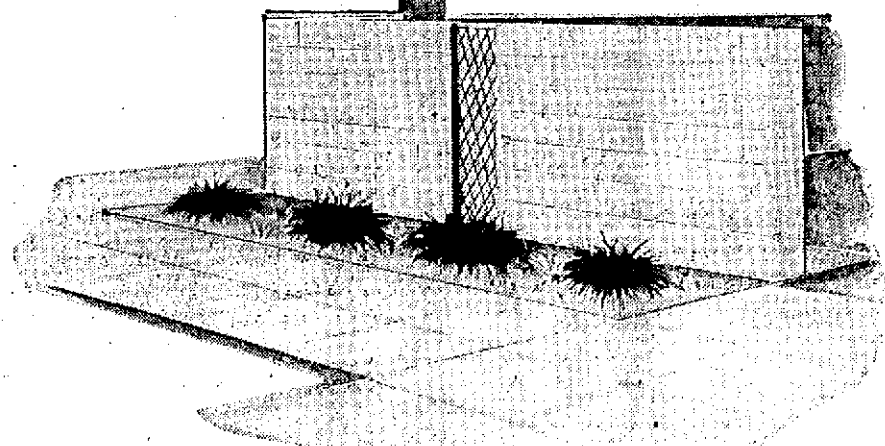

Beirut airport was closed briefly after an Israeli overflight.

The Lebanese foreign ministry contacted "a number of friendly governments, urging them to make efforts aimed at stopping Israeli aggression against Lebanon immediately and the withdrawal of enemy troops," the national news agency said.

Froehlke OKs study of clemency petition for Calley

INDEPENDENT,
PRESS-TELEGRAM—A-19
Long Beach, Calif., Sun., Sept. 17, 1973

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of the Army Robert Froehlke has authorized the Air Forces and Army Clemency and Parole Review Board to consider a clemency petition filed by lawyers for Lt. William Calley, convicted of murder in the My Lai massacre case.

The Army said special action by Froehlke was required because Calley is not yet in prison and "the normal provisions of the board don't pertain to him."

Calley is under house arrest at Ft. Benning, Ga., awaiting outcome of his appeals from a court-martial conviction for the murder of 22 South Vietnamese civilians in 1969.

Calley originally was sentenced to life imprisonment, but that sentence was reduced to 20 years and the Army Court of Military Review is studying his case.

President Nixon directed house arrest, rather than imprisonment, and has said he will review the Calley case after legal remedies have been exhausted.

The Army spokesman said the Clemency and Parole Review Board may consider a petition from Calley at the same time as the normal review procedure is carried forward in a separate channel.

The spokesman said details of the new petition were unavailable this weekend.

However, The Oklahoman of Oklahoma City said in its Sunday editions that the board was asked to waive the requirement that Calley serve one third of his 20-year sentence before he can be considered for parole. The paper said the board was asked also to develop a tentative parole plan, to name a subsidiary board at Ft. Benning before which Calley can appear, and to permit or suspend further confinement.

Last month, the Army filed a 247-page brief with the Army court of military review, rejecting as unfounded allegations that command influence figured in the lieutenant's conviction. The Army contended Calley received a fair trial.

The Army's brief replied to an appeal filed with the court April 30 in which George Latimer, Calley's chief attorney, claimed the Army was guilty of 32 errors in the court-martial which resulted in the only conviction in trials tracing to the My Lai case.

The Oklahoman report by Jack Taylor said that in the clemency plea, Calley is described as a model prisoner who has suffered enough punishment for not only his own guilt but that of the nation and the Army as well.

The petition from Calley's lawyers was supported by a letter from correctional authorities at Ft. Benning, who described him as a model prisoner, Taylor said.

"There can be little doubt that this young man has suffered," Calley's lawyers said in the petition, according to the Oklahoman report. "He has been billed as a savage, barbarous maniac. He has been exposed to worldwide public scrutiny ...

"He is the only one who has received any punishment of consequence for what happened at My Lai. Yet, he has been responsible for only 22 of the lives taken there while estimates of the dead range from 100-700, depending upon the source."

Barred from VA hospitals

Drug-addicted vets get little help

By JOHN T. WHEELER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

By the tens of thousands, GIs are returning to civilian life with the double burden of serious drug problems and discharge papers that brand them as "junkies" or misfits — or both.

Many of these men hold undesirable, bad conduct and dishonorable discharges which the head of the Veterans Administration drug war says bar them by law from treatment at VA hospitals for their addiction.

The problem, paradoxically, is becoming ever more acute even as the ground war in Vietnam has ended for American GIs. More than 100,000 discharged servicemen are said by federal officials to be addicts or heavy users of drugs.

Their ranks are swelled by hundreds more each month, a Pentagon source said. These men have not been able to lay aside their habits with their discarded uniforms on re-entering civilian life. They face battles that will be fought for years to come in hospitals, clinics, jails and the inner hell of an addict's own mind.

SINCE drugs can kill as surely as shrapnel and bullets, many of the lonely personal campaigns will end at graveside. Some will have taps played over a coffin draped in the American flag promised every man who dons a uniform in his country's defense. Some will go unknown to pauper's graves.

Although barred from VA treatment, many men have been able to seek out help from civilian agencies. But for those with drug discharges, even if they kick their habits, building a normal life poses a monumental problem, since their discharge papers label them as drug users and high risks to prospective employers.

Dr. S. A. Kaim, head of the VA's Alcohol and Drug Dependency Service, said the military's system of identifying men discharged for drug use was "a tragedy." He said he believed the system violated that portion of President Nixon's drug war strategy giving drug users anonymity and a chance for a clean start after conquering

The war is over for many Vietnam veterans. The war has just begun for others. They're battling on two fronts: drugs, and a system that counts them as losers even if they win the drug fight.

Their habits. The Pentagon disagrees.

DAVID, 22, a decorated ex-Marine, put it more strongly. "Hell, for a long time I thought my life was over. Now I'm sure of it. When I got out, you know, I was clean (drug free). Really clean. I went to the man (civilian business personnel offices), they took one look at my discharge, see that SPN 384 and it's all over. A couple of months like that and it was back to shooting horse (heroin) for me.

"Know how I got on drugs? I was up on the DMZ and in a big fire fight the medic got killed. I was so scared that I got the morphine out of his bag and used some. I was on my way. Then I got hit and went to a Navy hospital. It was like awash with drugs. So I just kept going. And now that damn discharge is a permanent blot on my future. It jams my mind. Hope? Hell, I left all that behind a long time ago."

The blot Dave talks about is the Separation Program Number, which is SPN 384 for those some 20,000 discharged for drugs, including 2,500 or more men with honorable discharges. The SPN numbers cover all reasons for discharge. The key is available to anyone who bothers to write and ask for the list. A Pentagon spokesman said he assumed all personnel offices in large companies, schools and other interested parties had their free copy. Depending on the severity of the drug discharges, vets also may be barred not only from VA drug treatment but job training, school financial aid, unemployment benefits and other provisions in the GI Bill of Rights.

IN TALKS with more than a score ex-GIs with SPN 384s, some fighting their habit, some resigned to addiction, probable prison terms and possible death, hope was a rare quality. Even bitterness had burned itself out in some men.

One vet said he lost two buddies last year from overdose deaths after they had applied for treatment and were turned away by a VA hospital because of their discharge and by civilian agencies who said waiting lists were months and even over a year long.

"Maybe it was fated," Jerry said over a beer in Harlem. "Like they were supposed to buy it. The Charlies (enemy soldiers) missed them and they went out on drugs. If it wasn't fate then it don't make much sense, does it?"

Sympathy for the veterans' plight had been voiced from virtually all segments of the political and social spectrum. But so far, say those piloting the assault on GI and ex-servicemen drug abuse and addiction, little more than scratched. The task is staggering.

Upwards of 200,000 Vietnam era GIs and ex-servicemen officially are said to have drug problems. An unpublished federal survey indicated as high as 700,000 have at least played around with dangerous drugs. Depending on which federal figures are used for the national problem, ex-servicemen and active duty GIs make up from 20 to 40 per cent of the national drug crisis.

Although the Pentagon reports some 20,000 discharges have been meted out for drugs, this may be only the tip of the iceberg some officials concede privately.

INTERVIEWS with military sources and ex-GIs indicate a large number of men with drug problems are given undesirable discharges on other grounds to get them out of the services.

Still others are given undesirable or dishonorable discharges for crimes growing out of their drug addiction. Stealing, for instance, is common to get money to support drug habits. An addict on a high is not always responsive to military discipline. The Separation Program Numbers for these men tag them as being misfits or felons making them unlikely prospects for jobs. This and employers' fears that ex-GIs too often may be on drugs, no matter what their discharges say, contributes to the disproportionate jobless rate among veterans. In some areas it is double the national average.

All men now in service are subject to a routine urinalysis to see if they are using heroin and certain other dangerous drugs.

Brig. Gen. John Singlaub, the Pentagon's chief drug fighter, says this has been a key in reversing addiction trends in the military. The compulsory tests technically cannot be used to bring a man before a court-martial on constitutional grounds. Those found on drugs are referred to base programs on a voluntary basis. Those who don't quit narcotics usually wind up with less than honorable discharges, the Pentagon says.

Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, chairman of the Senate alcoholism and narcotics subcommittee, says civil rights or no, he suspects the military has used the tests to identify men the service wants to be rid Interviews with those dealing with vet addicts and with addicts and users themselves tend to confirm this. A Pentagon source said, without confirming or denying the practice, "We are responsible for national security and to accomplish our mission we have to have reliable men."

CRITICS of the military drug war say the urinalysis has proved less than infallible. One congressman said one sampling showed 47 per cent of drug abusers were missed. One civilian agency said their experience with urinalysis had been roughly the same. Once urine from a pet dog was sent along with samples from patients and the dog was tabbed as a heroin user.

In what was presented as a compassionate move, the Pentagon announced last year that it would review on request discharges of men turned out of the service for drug, as opposed to drug related, offenses. In the program's first five months, the latest statistics available show 976 men requested review, 50 were favorably acted upon and 60 more turned down. The rest were still pending. The Army, at latest report, was clearing its backlog at 50 per month.

Even if discharges are upgraded (or recharacterized as the Pentagon prefers) the SPN 384 will stay with the men even if they get that most favored discharge, honorable.

CAN A NEWSPAPER CARRIER GROW UP TO BE PRESIDENT?

Certainly! Many ex-Presidents of the United States and presidents of a great many corporations are among those who started their business careers as newspaper carriers.

Being a newspaper carrier is great training for any young person. As independent merchants, carriers learn responsibility, gain added confidence. They learn the knack of dealing with and getting along with people. Carriers pick up a bit of bookkeeping, take pride in their work and their parents are proud of them.

Being a newspaper carrier would be great training for your youngster. Talk it over, then phone or write the Circulation Manager of the I.P.T. It could start your child on the long road to the Presidency.

Two strikes against returning vets

indicate they were told waits of a year or more might be required until review action was taken.

There have been pointed congressional suggestions that review of drug discharges be made automatic, especially in view of the thousands who do not qualify for VA drug treatment with their current discharges and the number of vets who are so vehemently antimilitary that they refuse to even try to have their records bettered.

Several cases have been filed asking that drug addiction, if contracted in the service, be treated as a service connected disability. New York City backed one such suit which failed.

The idea was that drug addiction be considered no different than a bullet wound, psychiatric problems, or disease traceable to a man's time in service. The VA stand is that only if drug addiction can be traced to heavy use of opiates, for instance, in treating wounded can such a claim be honored.

The military sometimes is criticized for having sent men with drug histories to Vietnam, particularly during the heroin epidemic which the Pentagon says is abating there. The military replies that it cannot do otherwise else it face an even larger use of drugs by men wanting to escape unpleasant duty.

However, some GIs said known drug users sometimes are put in positions both a home and overseas where they have ready access to drugs, mostly morphine and barbiturates.

ONE VIETNAM veteran said he was drafted out of jail where the FBI found him after the youth fled his draft notice. In his rap sheet, the vet said, were drug charges. Given the choice in court of the draft or jail, Patrick said, he took the draft. He was made a medic and sent to the war zone where his access to drugs was almost unlimited and what had been "dipping and dabbling" or casual use of drugs became a hard habit.

Sent to the stockade pending his court-martial, Patrick said he found a ready supply of drugs, some of it pushed by guards. Privately military sources and VA hospitals have said drugs are often available in military jails and in military and VA hospitals.

Patrick got an undesirable discharge and an SPN 384. He left the Army, dried out on drugs and tried to get a job. His first stop was a New York State Employment office where the clerk looked at his discharge papers and advised him that unless he was ready for a $40 a week paycheck he should apply for welfare. Patrick did and went back on drugs. Busted, jailed and now once again on the streets, Patrick said his probation officer told him to concoct some story that would permit him to lie about ever having been in the service.

"I went clean after jail," said Patrick, formerly of the Seattle, Wash., area. "I could see drugs were screwing up my life, and I figured I had to make a break. But break to what? I don't see myself ever getting off welfare."

SOB, 23, an Army draftee, was caught up in a stockade riot in Vietnam when inmates rebelled after one of their number died of what they believed to be a drug overdose. "They offered me an undesirable discharge to get rid of me," he jumped at it, man. He "that was out of the green machine. I applied for jobs but it was all the same. The telephone company told me, 'We don't hire junkies.' I said, 'Well, I'm not offering you a junkie. You got them on the payroll already. I'm offering you an EX-junkie.' The guy just said, 'Don't let the door hit your back as you walk out.' I was still clean then and you straights can't know what that cost me. But then I gave up and went right back to heroin."

Bob is trying again now. He is in a 24-hour-a-day therapeutic program in New York City where half the nation's drug addicts are said to live and where about half of the ex-GI addicts and abusers are reckoned by VA officials to be as well.

Federal law has moved far ahead of private corporation policies, but only in the past year. Now rehabilitated drug users are officially assured equal treatment in applying for federal jobs except for the CIA, FBI, and what a White House drug war spokesman called "other sensitive jobs."

President Nixon, in launching his drug war a year ago, showed a major compassion for the nation's addicts. For the first time the federal government has considered addiction a medical and social problem rather than simply another crime statistic. Veterans have been the subject of many sympathetic speeches in Washington.

"PEOPLE get the idea that now that the president is lacking this everyone can sit back and relax," says Roger Hurley, head of New York City's Addiction Services-Agency veterans section. "It is not true."

Hurley, an ex-Green Beret with Vietnam duty, quarrels regularly with Washington, as do other city officials, on money matters.

With perhaps 100,000 ex-GI users, abusers and addicts on the streets, the city claims Washington will not fund meaningful programs of its own and will not underwrite those already in existence and funded by the city and the state. New York state, Hurley notes, spends more on treatment and rehabilitation than the entire Veterans Administration. VA hospitals in the city handle about 500 patients while the city, with no reimbursement so far, is treating some 3,500 veterans and claims a waiting list of 2,500 more. Under heavy pressure, the VA agreed recently to contract through the state for treatment of 1,100 more addicts and users in the New York City area.

Hurley charges, and at least one VA hospital official agreed, that VA treatment relies almost overwhelmingly on detoxifying men on drugs and then putting them into methadone maintenance programs that are "funded for failure," according to the head of one civilian agency treating vet patients.

The argument is that without heavy doses of therapy, addicts stop methadone or turn to other drugs. One VA hospital in New York reported that one-third of the men in the methadone program there are on drugs "more powerful than marijuana and hashish." City programs also are plagued with methadone drop outs.

STRATEGIES, not all strictly local, have been resorted to by several agencies to get funds rolling into nonfederal veterans programs. SERA, a nationally recognized drug program in New York City's Bronx section, opened a live-in drug center for ex-GIs called the DMZ, not for Vietnam's Demilitarized Zone but for Drug Mending Zone. Of 75 men now under treatment about 20 per cent have drug related discharges. There is neither city, state nor federal money available, so the vets go on welfare and their checks help run the program. For the rest, says program director Frank Marero, funds are diverted from other SERA programs paid for by the city and the state.

"We operate on the theory that the vets are a terribly urgent problem. Let them put us in jail if they want to. The program will go on."

Jobs, Marero says, is a bigger program than funding. Graduates, or those "re-entering the real world," often rate anything from cool correctness to hostility when they apply for jobs since almost all DMZ patients have less than honorable discharges. SERA is trying to create jobs and has opened a gas station manned by seven ex-addicts. Next may be a carpentry shop.

A SEEMING contradiction is that while city and private programs are inundated with requests by vets seeking help, slots in New York City VA hospitals go unfilled. Of those in VA drug programs, some 23 per cent served prior to the Vietnam War.

Dr. Kaim said forcing addicted veterans to spend an average of one month in the hospital rather than treating them as outpatients after detoxification has proved a strong deterrent to many ex-service-men with drug troubles. Dr. Kaim and other VA officials say many ex-GIs fear the VA is just another arm of the Pentagon and that the "green machine," as GIs call the military, might sail them away in obscure wards indefinitely. The VA has pushed a strong publicity campaign to counter this view.

Both the Pentagon and the VA have warned that the pullout of U.S. ground combat units in Vietnam will in no way mean the end of the drug problem in the services. Bases in Europe and the United States also have serious drug problems.

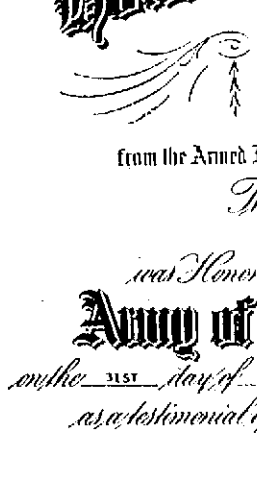

Julia, 23, and Jimmie, 22, never saw service in Vietnam but plunged easily into the drug culture. They claimed discrimination (Julia is Puerto Rican, Jimmie black) and a long list of gripes about service that led them into narcotics.

"ARE THEY telling the truth? Who knows, probably in some extent," a drug counselor said.

"What is it, they buckled under the same pressures that cause kids who never saw a uniform to buckle. But there is a difference. If they get straightened around, then they've got that damn discharge with the SPN 384 on it. They're condemned losers, most of them. Black, under educated, drugs on their service record. Who wants them?"

"We can dry them out, we can treat them, we can return them to society. But if they get hit on the nose every time they try to rebuild their lives with a job and all that, well... I just hope someone is thinking about how much it will cost society if these guys keep breaking down and coming back. The ones that make it back. You know I look at a room full of vets and sometimes I ask myself which ones will die. Because some of them, maybe 5 per cent, are going to overdose out someday. That is if we're lucky."

Manny, 22, said, "No matter what happens, a college degree or what, our lives are over. We'll never get out from under that paper. We can rehabilitate ourselves and still the world will dump on us."

Dick, also 22: "There is no second chance. If I do time in jail for stealing, then they wipe the slate clean. But this damn piece of paper is tattered on my chest. It ain't never coming off."

Sears announces Cartridge Television for home or business.

1. Now you can view hundreds of pre-recorded programs and feature films in full color, any time you want.
2. Now you can create your own TV "shows" with your own TV camera—for fun or business.
3. Now you can record important TV programs you would like to see, even if you're not home or asleep—then play them back later at your convenience.

With Sears Cartridge TV you'll be able to turn your home into your own private TV studio. No longer will you be limited to what stations broadcast, when they broadcast it. Now you'll be able to choose what you want to see, when you want to see it, with no interruptions other than those you want to make.

Cartridges are simple to use... simply snap into place.

Simple to operate.

Sears Cartridge TV is an electronic system that lets you play prerecorded visual images and sounds on a normal TV screen.

The prerecorded material can be information of all kinds or packaged entertainment, including some of the best pictures Hollywood ever produced. (See list below.)

It comes in cartridges which play from about 15 minutes up to 112—nearly two full hours, with no interruptions. You can buy or rent them. Most are in full color.

The cartridges are simple to use. They're like audio cassettes. Simply snap them into place. That's it. You're ready! There's no threading or tearing of tape to worry about.

You can also buy blank tape to use with your own special TV camera to shoot your own TV "shows," the same way you now make home movies. But instead of having to wait days or weeks for development, you can see the playback in seconds on your own TV screen.

These blank cartridges can also be used to record important TV programs you would like to see, such as a moon landing—even if you're not home or asleep.

You can play each cartridge up to 100 times. Or you can erase the tape to record other programs.

Invaluable for businesses.

Sears Cartridge TV has many uses for business, particularly in salesmen training.

By putting salesmen on tape, and showing them the playback on TV, they can then see themselves as others will see them. They might discover quite a few ways they could improve their "pitch." By shortening it. Organizing it better. Or just by putting some plain "life" into it.

Sears Cartridge TV is also an up-to-date way to present training programs. You can put the entire program on tape. It then has a lasting quality. Should someone miss a point, he can simply play the tape back again. Again and again, as often as he wishes. Or even weeks or months later to refresh his memory.

Black-and-white TV camera weighs 2 1/2 pounds, comes with 14 feet of cord. (Longer length, optional.)

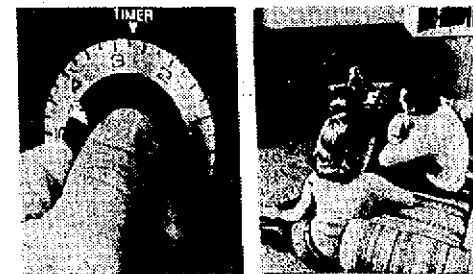

Candles out at 1 P.M. birthday party on TV at 1:05.

There are countless ways you can use Sears Cartridge TV in your business organization.

Buy it on Sears Easy Payment Plan.

The complete Sears Cartridge system includes a superb color TV console (25" diagonal measure picture) plus videotape player-and-recorder. Black-and-white TV camera is optional. You can buy it with the system now. Or, if you prefer, at a later date.

Individual cartridges with prerecorded entertainment cost about $12.98 to $39.98 each, depending on type and length of entertainment. Full-length motion picture classics rent for about $6 per single showing.

Set RECORD-OFF-AIR timer, go out...next day, see show you wanted.

Blank tape cartridges for home recording cost about $36.98 for a 100-minute length—only a fraction of what you pay for 8mm or 16mm film running the same length of time.

You can buy the complete cartridge system, or any of the components, on Sears Easy Payment Plan.

What about service?

Sears Cartridge TV is well past the shake-down stage. Sears knows that it works. Our laboratories have been analyzing it for over a year.

Sears Cartridge TV can live up to Sears reputation for selling good products that work. We service what we sell—and service it no

SEARS GUARANTEE

If, within 90 days, any part or tube should fail due to defects in materials or workmanship, Sears will replace it free. No charge for service, part or tube. matter where you move in the U.S.A. A point worth considering with so major a purchase as cartridge TV.

What does it all add up to?

Cartridge television will turn your home into a private entertainment center and turns your TV into a personal TV station where you alone choose what you want to see, when you want to see it. With no interruptions except those you want to make.

"Cartridge television," as Fortune magazine pointed out recently, "would seem to coincide with the growing demand of people to do their own thing."

Come in and see how Sears will help you "do your own thing."

MAYO CLINIC TO TEST NEW ANTIDRUG DRUG

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — The Mayo Clinic will admit its first drug addict today to begin testing a drug researchers say may block withdrawal effects of heroin and other opiates.

Mayo researchers have said the drug, alpha-methylparatyrosine (AMT), is nonaddictive and is well tolerated by man. They believe it will be a much more satisfactory treatment for heroin addiction than substitution of one addictive drug for another, such as is done in methadone treatment programs.

Dr. Robert Morse, a Mayo Clinic psychiatrist, reported Saturday that the addict would be admitted to a 24-bed alcoholism treatment unit at Methodist Hospital. He said the patient is from Minneapolis and is now on a methadone program.

Ancient tower, giant catapult unearthed
DOVER, England (AP) — A 1,700-year-old tower that carried a catapult capable of hurling blocks nearly a mile has been uncovered by archeologists working in the center of this English channel port.

The tower, probably once 25 feet high, dominated the wall of a Roman shore fort.

Parents plan school boycott

United Press International

Antibusing forces in Las Vegas, Nev., made plans Saturday to boycott schools when classes open Monday for 30,000 children, and striking Philadelphia teachers and officials maintained hard lines — once again deadlocking negotiations.

"We are saying that our sixth grade students will not be on the buses Monday and that they will never get on a bus in violation of our constitutional rights," a group of Las Vegas parents called Bus Out said in a statement.

Bus Out had stalled forced busing — and the opening of schools — in Clark County for more than a week with a state court ruling forbidding officials from using busing to racially balance schools.

But the Nevada Supreme Court Thursday cleared the way for some 52 elementary schools to open by staying the state court ruling and leaving in effect a busing plan approved last August in federal court.

Bus-Out leaders said they hoped the boycott would force the U.S. Senate to "recognize that the problem here in Las Vegas is critical."

In Philadelphia, where 285,000 students have been affected by the two-week-old labor dispute, suggestions by teacher leaders that negotiators bargain around the clock met with strong resistance from the school district.

"It's naive to believe that a resolution of issues can be achieved by putting people in a room together for 24 hours," said school district negotiator Jack Soloff.

State mediator Edward A. Feehan also said continuous talks would be fruitless if both sides continued their hard lines.

The next meeting is scheduled for Tuesday. At the last session, Friday, little if any progress was reported. The 13,000 teachers are seeking a 34 per cent across-the-board pay raise. The district has offered a 4 per cent raise.

Teacher strikes meanwhile continued in two suburban Philadelphia districts and in western Pennsylvania 34,000 pupils awaited the end of strikes in 11 districts.

In other disputes:

—Rhode Island, strikes continued in Smithfield and Burrillville, affecting 7,500 students.

—Massachusetts, 300 teachers in Taunton threatened a work slowdown and negotiations in a strike by 500 teachers in Somerville produced "good progress."

N.Y. prison reforms

'inadequate,' critics say

New York Times Service

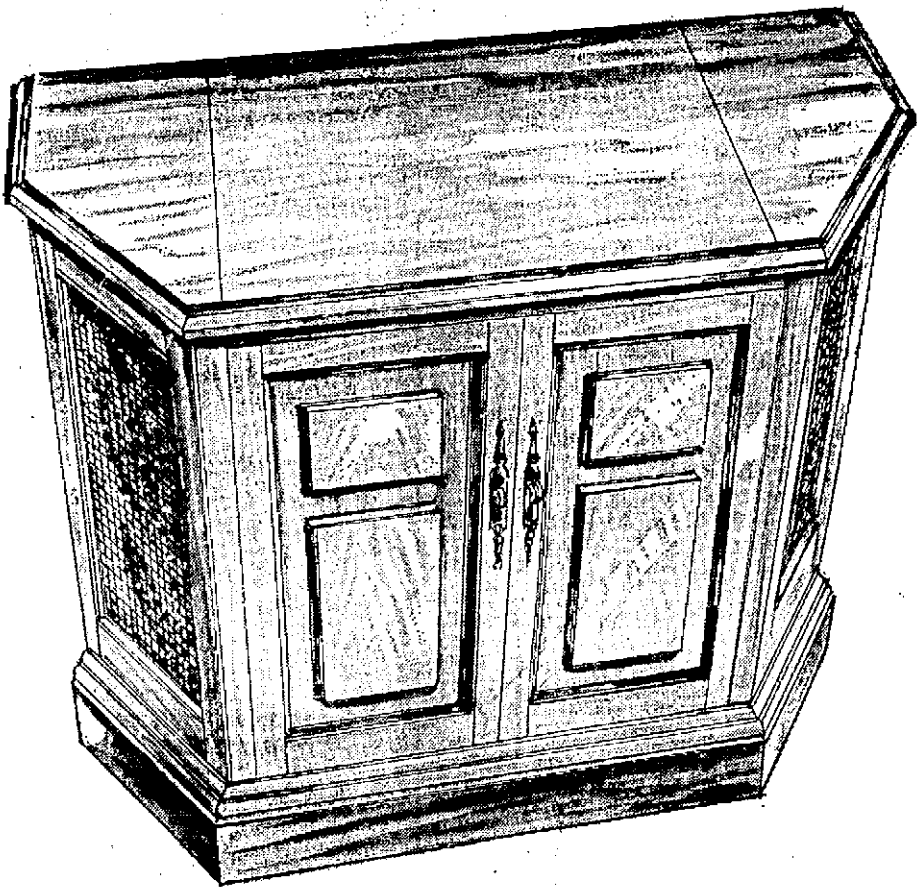

NEW YORK — Members of a joint legislative and citizens committee were sharply critical Saturday of what they said had been inadequate reforms made during the last year in New York State's prisons.

Legislator John R. Dunne, Republican of suburban

Nassau County and chairman of the Senate Committee on Crime and Correction, asserted that the improvements since the inmate rebellion of Attica had been merely "cosmetic changes." That rebellion took 43 lives.

TIRED OF ALL THAT DRAB OLIVE CASH?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman has proposed the gradual replacement of green cash with brightly colored and different-shaped folding money to help tell the denominations apart.

Rep. Bertram L. Podell, D-N.Y., says his proposed bill envisions bright reds, blues and yellows instead of today's olive-drab cash.

The proposed new currency, Podell said in a statement Saturday, would crimp the style of counterfeiters and tax dodgers.

"As the old bills disappear," he said, "so will the millions of dollars in counterfeit money now in circulation.

"Fortunes in unreported income concealed from the prying eyes and the hungry grasp of the tax man will be lost forever," said Podell.

Texas to put trade fair on big liner

New York Times Service

AUSTIN, Tex. — The Queen Elizabeth 2, one of the world's largest luxury ships, has been booked for an unaccustomed 1974 journey by businessmen from Texas.

The Texans will convert the liner into a floating trade fair, and for two months the ship will visit African, Middle Eastern and European ports to promote sales of Texas products.

Plans for the 60-day fair were announced by the Texas Industrial Commission, R.J. Tuttle of International Enterprises Inc. and James Rooney of Cunard Lines, after the commission had approved the plans.

Chester Wine of Corpus Christi, chairman of the commission, said the exposition would enable major industries represented in Texas to display their products in ports that represent vital markets in U.S. international trade.

MORE than 500 exhibition booths will be set up on six decks. The public rooms on the ship will become industrial pavilions and the staterooms and suites will house many of the exhibits.

A scaled-down Astrodome — the domed stadium in Houston — will be built on the top deck to house exhibits. An oil drilling rig will be set up on one of the lower decks.

Tuttle said that the venture would cost an estimated $14 million, to be borne entirely by the industries that participate. Large exhibition booths will cost a company about $40,000, a fee that will include two suites for exhibition personnel and all food costs. Smaller booths will cost about $25,000, Tuttle said.

THE CRUISE will cover "the most lucrative markets in that part of the world," Tuttle said. The tentative itinerary includes North Africa, the Soviet Union, Greece, Italy, Portugal, The Netherlands, England, Turkey, Romania, Yugoslavia, Spain, France and Germany. Three days are planned in each port.

Tuttle said that contacts with the Soviet embassy had been good, and that a visit to the Soviet Union was approved. The port of call would be Odessa on the Black Sea.

The trade cruise will begin with conversion of the Queen Elizabeth 2 in New York, where crews will embark on Oct. 15, 1974, on a three-and-a-half-day trip to Galveston, Tex., to erect the exhibits.

At Galveston, a cruise is scheduled for government and industrial leaders and the exhibitors. A five-day Atlantic crossing is planned.

Pope warns local churches on dangers of separatism

New York Times Service

UDINE, Italy—Pope Paul VI, addressing a huge crowd attending the Italian National Eucharistic Congress in this city near the Yugoslav frontier Saturday night, made an impassioned plea for worldwide unity of the Roman Catholic Church.

The Pope warned local churches that they would face "a sad fate indeed" if they were to yield "to the temptation of separatism," of self-sufficiency and eventual schism.

The pontiff, flanked by 16 cardinals and more than 100 bishops in an outdoor rite, was clearly understood to be alluding to criticisms of Vatican doctrinal decisions and policies by the liberal sector in the Dutch Roman Catholic Church, and to other groups of discontented and restless Roman Catholics in various parts of the world.

POPE PAUL gave his homily during mass in Udine's vast First of May square. He arrived here in a helicopter from Venice and the small, historic town of Aquileia on the last leg of his first major trip outside Rome since his 10,000-mile journey to Asia.

Australia and Oceania 22 months ago.

Italian government authorities, fearing possible terrorist attacks, had concentrated 3,000 army soldiers in Udine, closing the city center to all vehicular traffic.

Uniformed and plainclothes men from police organizations throughout northern Italy also had been moved into Udine.

Security precautions were tightened after some graffiti had appeared on housewalls earlier this week reading "Power nuns and more fedaycen!"

The official Italian Communist Party, instead, had issued a statement respectfully welcoming Pope Paul to Udine.

Police officers estimated the crowd attending outdoor mass at between 100,000 and 130,000. The organizers asserted that a quarter of a million people had been in the square. Hundreds of priests wearing white stoles over their surplices distributed communion to several thousand worshippers during mass.

THE POPE personally gave communion to 50 children, and administered confirmation to 100 more.

Earlier Saturday, during a five-hour visit to Venice, Pope Paul told its inhabitants that he knew how seriously their city was "threatened in its physical ability" and warned that "Venice, city of ideal beauty, must never be corroded by manifestations of aesthetic and moral decadence."

The first pontiff to visit the lagoon city in 172 years, Pope Paul was understood to be alluding to art and films shown earlier this summer during Venice's biennale exhibition and cinema festival.

The Pope addressed the people of Venice in Saint Mark's Square two hours after arriving by air from Rome and making a solemn entry into the city by motor launch and gondola.

In his speech Pope Paul praised Venice as "one of the key cities in the history of civilization" and, referring to air and water pollution and other environmental threats, exclaimed: "Venice must live."

After high winds, downpours and what looked like the beginnings of Venice's dreaded "high water" (flood) emergency until late Friday night, the weather was calm Saturday and the sun came out just as the papal jetliner was circling over the city.

Japanese greet first top Briton

TOYKO (UPI) — British Prime Minister Edward Heath arrived in Tokyo Saturday for the first official visit ever made to Japan by a prime minister of the United Kingdom.

His press secretary, Donald Maitland, said Heath would discuss the emerging "multipolar world" power structure with Japanese Premier Kakuei Tanaka, and world economic problems.

Heath is scheduled to begin talks Monday with Tanaka and Japanese Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

Heath was greeted at rainswept Tokyo International Airport by Tanaka. A typhoon working its way up the Japanese Pacific coast threatened the prime minister's scheduled visit today to Nikko, a beauty spot in the mountains 90 miles northwest of Tokyo.

Typhoon smashes Japan, killing 13

TOKYO (UPI) — Typhoon Helen struck Japan's Pacific coast Saturday with 100-mile-an-hour winds, cutting a swath of destruction across the main Japanese island of Honshu.

The National Police Agency said at least 13 persons have been killed by the storm, which churned for 24 hours off the coast before coming ashore 230 miles west of Tokyo.

One other person was missing and 13 persons were known to have been seriously injured.

Winds of 100 miles an hour were recorded in Tsu city in Mie province, near where Helen came ashore. Tsu, a city of 127,000 population, suffered a total electric power failure. There were also spotty power failures in the big industrial city of Nagoya.

Moving north-northwest, the storm was expected to work its way across central Honshu and blow out into the Sea of Japan today.

The government meteorological agency warned of heavy downpours for the Nagoya and Tokyo areas.

Ten of the deaths came

Friday night when a landslide smashed into nine houses at Kochi city on Shikoku, smallest of the four main Japanese islands.

Train service throughout Japan, already crippled by a work-to-rule slowdown by employees of Japan National Railways (JNR), was disrupted.

At Tsu and Nagoya, high tides created by the storm threatened ships tied up at wharves.

Scientists warn of thugs' nuclear blackmail danger

LONDON (U)—The Mafia or Arab terrorists, holding the world to ransom with their own nuclear bomb?

A warning to world governments of just such a threat has come from 220 leading scientists representing 45 countries of East and West, meeting at the 22nd Pugwash Conference.

They ended six days of talks in Oxford last week.

A physicist who worked on the American atomic bomb before Hiroshima put into plain terms the conference recommendations.

"As more countries go nuclear there will be greater chances of people or groups accumulating, by hijacking or stealing, enough plutonium to develop their own atomic capacity," Prof. Joseph Rotblat said in an interview Saturday.

"Then they can hold the world to ransom."

Rotblat, 63, is secretary-general of the Pugwash Conference which brings leading world scientists together to swap ideas about how best to make life in the nuclear age safer. He heads the physics faculty in the medical school attached to St. Bartholomew's Hospital in London.

"Scientists from various countries including the United States presented papers suggesting some sort of Mafia-type organizations could develop their own atomic capacity," Rotblat said. "It was during discussion of this that the blackmail factor emerged."

"There have been cases when airlines have paid out blackmail money to hijackers using toy pistols. To scientists it is by no means inconceivable the same sort of technique could be used in the context of atomic bombs."

The Pugwash scientists want a new world body to deal with the peril.

Rotblat and other participants reported the Pugwash scientists advanced this broad argument:

Civil nuclear power stations, like the fast-breeder experimental reactor at Dounreay in Scotland, could become targets for saboteurs, criminals or political fanatics. These reactors produce more plutonium than they consume.

Soon they are going into commercial production and more and more countries will be using them.

For a small country to obtain enough plutonium for a nuclear bomb it would need to divert only one per cent of a fast breeder's annual output.

Unless security arrangements are ironclad, Mafia-type or terrorist groups could steal enough plutonium from stockpiles, or hijack or capture it.

"Once groups like these get hold of enough plutonium their method of exploding it need not be very efficient — but it still would be a nuclear explosion," Rotblat said. "It would be an explosion in the order of the Hiroshima bomb."

The professor stressed this sort of hazard was unlikely — but not impossible — in the short term because the nuclear powers still are guarding their secrets and installations closely.

"It is, however, a serious prospect for the long term," he said.

The Pugwash scientists called for the establishment of an international nuclear energy institute for the purpose of evaluating all the risks and to formulate acceptable controls over the security of all fissionable material.

Ruly Protestants march in Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (U)—About 20,000 parading Protestants, many of them in paramilitary uniforms and wielding cudgels, brought traffic to a standstill in this Northern Ireland capital.

The march was the first show of strength by Northern Ireland's three main Protestant groups since they recently decided to form a common front in the face of violence by the Roman Catholic oriented Irish Republican Army.

Police and troops were out in force as the demonstrators choked the capital's streets but the parade passed without incident.

The marchers were members of the paramilitary Ulster Defense Association, the hard line Protestant Vanguard Movement, and the Loyalist Association of Workers.

Until last week the three groups functioned separately—the Defense Association as a vigilante force, the Vanguard as a political movement and the Loyalists as a labor union grouping.

All three are determined to keep Northern Ireland under British rule in the face of the IRA's campaign to make it part of the mainly Catholic Irish republic in the south.

British troops patrolling the border area near Forkhill in County Armagh found a bomb which they said contained 150 pounds of explosives.

The bomb, inside two gasoline drums, was detonated in a nearby field by Army experts.

British troops battled with a Catholic mob in Strabane while soldiers in Londonderry skirmished with guerrilla snipers.

More than 100 rioters in Strabane hijacked autos and set fire to them. The trouble erupted when army bulldozers tore down a street barricade. No casualties were reported.

Raiders net 2 in deadly cafe blast

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI)—Two young men wanted in the firebombing of a Montreal nightclub which left 37 persons dead were arrested early Saturday in a narcotics raid on a local residence.

Joseph Marc Boutin, 24, and James Michael O'Brien, 22 were detained on a coroner's warrant issued in Montreal in the blaze at the Blue Bird cafe.

Although the two men had been sought nationwide since the fire, police said that prior to the raid they were not aware the men were at the house.

Six persons were in the house at the time of the raid. Only three were taken into custody—Boutin and O'Brien and one other. They were charged with possession and trafficking of marijuana and possession of a deadly weapon, a spring-loaded switchblade.

Medieval ghetto Hassidics doing their own thing

By KENNETH LUCOFF

JERUSALEM (UPI) — A stroll through the Mea Shearim quarter of this holy city is a trip back through the Jewish history of medieval times.

The once-walled ultra-orthodox Jews who lead the lives their forefathers did 300 years ago in the ghettos of Eastern Europe.

Immersed in the study of the Jewish scriptures, the Hassidic (pious) Seel dresses in 17th century garb — the bearded men in long black caftan topcoats and wide-brimmed black hats, with sidecurls flapping against their ears.

Women follow the orthodox code of law and dress in floor-length print dresses and cover their shaven heads with wigs or babushka scarves.

"These clothes make us an exception so we won't blend in with the rest of society," explained Rabbi Mordechai Zonnenfeld, one of the thousands of rabbis who spend their days teaching the scriptures to rabbinical students at Talmudic schools.

"We want to remain apart," he added, "at least not go in the same direction as those nonbelievers."

Rabbi Zonnenfeld and his fellow followers of Hassidim believe strictly in the literal word of the Bible and Jewish commentaries.

SO WHEN the Old Testament commands "be fruitful and multiply," they understand it to impose a ban

Hassidics keep old customs

on birth control. Rabbi Zonnenfeld's family of nine children is not uncommon in Mea Shearim.

A visitor to this Jewish ghetto within the Jewish state sees Judaism practiced in its strictest interpretation. Taking pictures is forbidden because "thou shalt not make graven images."

TOURISTS ARE warned by signs:

"Our Torah requires Jewish women to be attired. In modest dress:
sleeves reaching below the elbows. (slacks forbidden), stockings, married women having their hair covered are the virtues of the Jewish woman throughout the ages."

Violate the warning and you risk being stoned or spat upon by the quarter's residents.

The neighborhood is a maze of twisting alleys and row after row of closely built stone apartments.
No official count has been made of the synagogues, but there is at least one on every block — and often three or four.

The houses are built in long rows, with many families living in each two-story structure.

"This is our protection against infidels," a housewife with 11 children said.
"Once we had to be fearful of physical violence from people outside. Today it works to keep us all together as a single family of God."

HER CHILDREN, the boys in knickers and the girls in long dresses and wearing heavy stockings even in summer heat, are not allowed to venture out of the quarter.

"They have their life here," their mother said.
"They won't learn the bad life" of cinemas, newspapers and forgetting God."

Many of the residents of Mea Shearim do not recognize the State of Israel —
"we can't accept this as the Jewish kingdom until the Messiah comes," a teacher, M. D. Strom, said. They do, however, call on the city for essential services, electricity and water.

"It's like buying from the goyim (gentiles) like we had to do in the old country," said one of the quarter's storekeepers, with a shrug.

On the Jewish Sabbath, beginning at sundown Friday and lasting until sundown Saturday, Jerusalem policemen stand guard behind steel barricades at the entrances to the ghetto to keep out cars, tourists and nonreligious Jewish youths.

YET THE solemn observance in Mea Shearim does not prevent some of its residents from walking to other parts of the city to scold children for playing on the Sabbath or to stop traffic in protest against the drivers' nonobservance.

"They're not observing the Sabbath and keeping it holy," said Shlomo Stearn, 21, a rabbinical student who patrols the streets outside the entrance to the quarter's Sabbath square.
"So we have to force them to keep it."

Pitched battles between stone-throwing nonobservant youths and Mea Shearim residents such as Stearn are not uncommon during the 24-hour holy day.

"What can we do to stop them?" asked a policeman shortly after he tried to break up a Saturday afternoon fight between about 25 T-shirted and sandaled Jerusalem children and a similar number of Hassidic youth in fur-trimmed Sabbath hats.

"They believe they have God on their side," the policeman said.

NATO war games off Norway set

By BUCK LANIER
Military Editor

LONDON — The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) is putting its best foot forward — it hopes — in a show of solidarity and military effectiveness in peacetime.

American and European newsmen fly to northern Norway today to see for themselves if 11 of NATO's 15 members can get it all together in the most far-flung of any NATO exercise, "Strong Express."

It includes reinforcement of the vulnerable northern flank (Norway), carrier support for the Allied Command in Europe and convoy operations in the North Sea, the southwestern approaches to Europe and the American eastern seaboard.

BEFORE "Express" ends, a Norwegian horse brigade, the attack carrier USS John F. Kennedy and procedures with tactical nuclear weapons, will have come into play.

The scenario is simple. Orange forces representing aggressors, or if it were real, the Russians pouring in from Murmansk, will attempt to establish beachheads. Striving to hold their position, the Blues will include U.S., Netherlands and British marines. Their goal is to link up with the Allied Mobile Force that has been alerted to assist the marines.

Called the "Fire Brigade," the AMF is a seven-nation force geared to speed to flank areas in case of trouble.

Norway's 4,000-man Northern Brigade is the Orange Force and knows the rugged terrain in the Tromsø area far better than the incoming AMF and marines.

UNDERSEA opposition will be led by two U.S. nuclear attack submarines.

NATO's antishubmarine posture, was punctured with glaring weaknesses in a major operation four years ago. Officials maintain now that these forces will do better.

Watching the activity will be many units of Russia's northern fleet, surface and subsurface. They are not expected to disrupt the operations, just be keen observers.

NATO's secretary general, F. H. Luns of the Netherlands, told 130 members of the world press Saturday that the alliance has to face the Soviet Union that today possesses a concentration of military power that goes far beyond her reasonable requirements for national security and the defense of her borders.

"We know their navy has expanded to all corners of the globe and her air power is substantially larger than ours. I believe in showing our military effectiveness, capability and solidarity is the way to move closer toward any agreement with the Soviet Union," he said.

SOME shadows hang over NATO's solidarity, however, Denmark's role in the alliance is crumbling. Iceland still is skittish about the big U.S. air base at Keflavik, and the specter of the U.S. withdrawing a substantial number of its 400,000 Europe based troops is a contingency planner's nightmare.

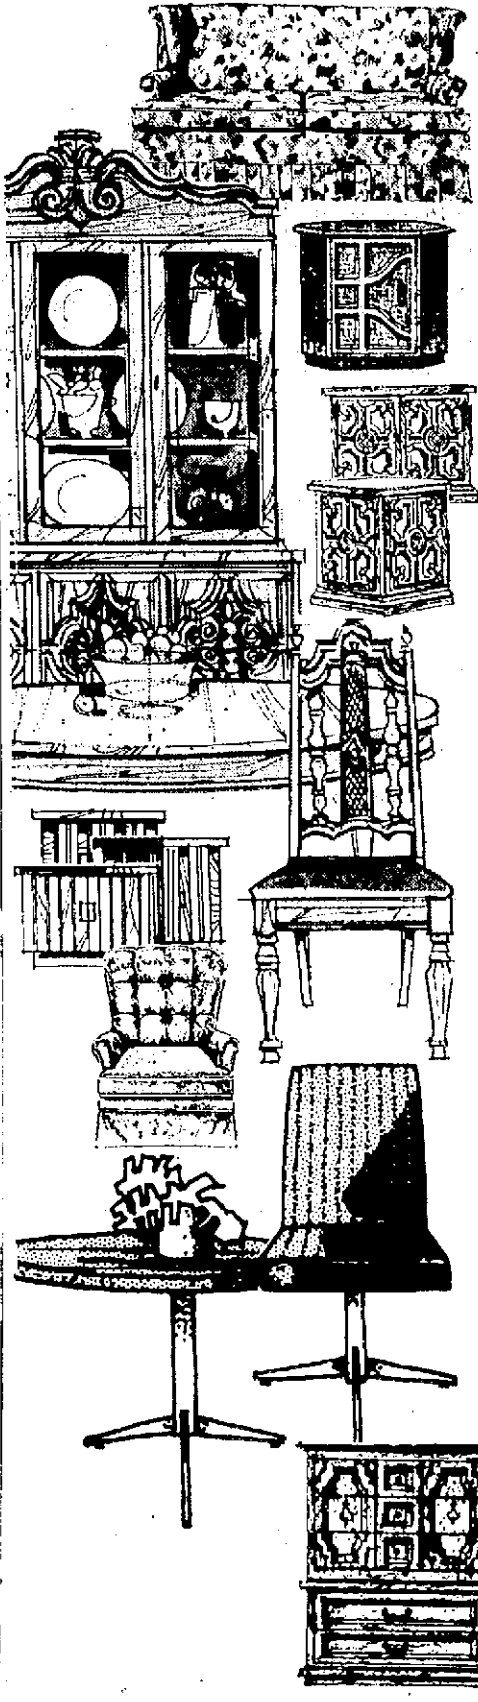

These problems will be ignored this week as the Orange Forces launch an attack across the simulated border. Blue will respond with the major attempt to knock out Orange, scheduled Wednesday (Thursday if the weather is too bad).

In all, there will be 307 ships, 700 aircraft and 64,000 men taking part. Turkey, Greece, Denmark and Iceland are the four members not participating.

Doctor, your sex hangups may be showing

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Doctor, when it comes to giving information about sex to your patient, you'd better not generalize. That's risky.

You'd do well, too, to listen carefully to the patient. Don't be too hasty to ask questions.

You'll do better by your patient if you consider sociology before you counsel him. When it comes to sex, the matter of culture is as important as the science of medicine.

And, doctor, keep your own sexual hangups out of it.

Those are some of the suggestions given in a medical lecture Thursday by Dr. Sherwyn M. Woods, associate professor and director of graduate education in psychiatry at USC school of medicine.

Dr. Woods told doctors at Pacific Hospital of Long Beach that the public looks to physicians as experts on sexuality.

"They think you're omnipotent on the subject," he said. But if you're not, hang in there, doctor. You may not be asked about sex much longer.

"Our kids and our kids' kids may not have the sexual problems we have today," he said.

But most of today's population is a different story. There are plenty of sexual problems. And guess who has some of the most? Medical students, he said.

So what, you say. Well, it just might affect what a doctor tells you about YOUR sex life.

Dr. Woods and his associates have conducted research on the problem. They found, for instance, that a medical resident who has a high frequency of sexual activity may tell a heart patient:

"There's no reason you can't rapidly resume your sex life."

On the other hand, a medical resident with a low frequency of personal sex activity may tell the patient:

"Look, your heart is in bad shape. Better hold off for six months."

Is all this good medical practice? No, it isn't, said Dr. Woods. The doctor is projecting his own sexual practices into advice for others. What the doctor should do is ask the patient about the patient's previous sexual activity. Counseling should be based on the patient's life style.

Dr. Woods said that one thing they don't tell you in medical school is about the enormous differences in attitudes, values and behavior of persons in the lower socio-economic classes and those of the educated upper middle class.

For there are differences in sexuality in these classes.

For example, the male in the lower socio-economic class looks upon sexual performance as a mark of masculinity. His attitude toward the female is usually one of exploitation.

Then there is the attitude of the upper middle class. The college student looks upon sex in terms of "mutuality" — as a means of "forming closeness."

Physicians — and they sometimes forget this — come from the upper middle class.

"A large group of your patients have a different value structure than you do," Dr. Woods stated. What frequently happens is that the physician tends to superimpose his own value structure on the patient when sex is discussed.

If you insist on doing this, doctor, you're going to turn off the patient, he said. As Dr. Woods put it:

"There will be no effective therapeutic dialog."

More than anything else, people fear humiliation and shame, he continued.

"That's why they keep their mouths shut about sex," he explained.

Consequently, if they do broach the subject, listen carefully, he advised. Don't ask too many questions.

Dr. Woods has studied "medical students' diseases" — those that students think they have but haven't. It turns out that a student's medical complaint may be a "calling card." That means that the student is actually struggling with a problem other than his complaint.

In one study, it was learned that 60 per cent of a group of medical students had problems of sexuality. Fifty-five per cent were concerned about impotence or frigidity. Thirty-five per cent of the married students had sexuality problems. Forty per cent were concerned about masturbation. And 40 per cent were concerned about homosexuality.

Actually only one or two students in any one medical class may be homosexual, Dr. Woods said. But the great concern of the 40 per cent stems from homosexual dreams or fantasies. Curiously, sex may not have anything to do with it.

Homosexual dreams or fantasies may have to do with dependency, which one may view as unmanly — thus, feminine. Or it may have to do with the issue of power and dominance. A businessman who has been crossed by a business partner could, for instance, have a homosexual dream. But it would be dollars, not sex, at the root.

Dr. Woods had the following comments on three major sexual problems: frigidity, impotence and homosexuality.

More frigidity is cured by a considerate and tender husband than is ever cured by a physician, he said.

"A woman is not a mini-man," Dr. Woods said. In other words, her physiology is entirely different from that of the male.

Frigidity can often be cured merely by a doctor giving a woman permission to be sensual and sexual.

"Our culture is changing," he said. "The previous attitude was that a good girl does not have sensuous, sexual feelings."

As for impotence, an occasional episode is normal, Dr. Woods said. Its most common cause is fear of failure of performance. But it may be more complex. It may be anger — anger at the wife for a nonsexual reason.

"The marital bed becomes a battleground," he said.

In essence, the husband, without realizing, withholds sex from his wife.

As for homosexuality, it is "very curable," he said, provided that the patient is motivated toward cure. It is a myth that homosexuality is incurable.

Finally, Dr. Woods, in speaking of sexual desires, said that there are "enormous physiological differences between people."

So what's normal? A good question.

Pros, cons of evaluating City College instructors

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

In-depth evaluations of how well Long Beach City College instructors do their jobs begin here — as at other California community colleges — this fall.

And predictably enough, emotions on campus are strongly mixed by these state-mandated studies which ran result in dismissal on suspension without pay for poor classroom performance.

One one hand:

"A primary objective in this evaluation business is to raise educational levels even higher than they already are," declared Academic Vice President William G. Millington.

But on the other:

"It's a sudden-death way to get rid of people on the administration's blacklist," snorted a respected faculty member who for obvious reasons, prefers anonymity. "Black" was not the word used with "list," by the way.

Millington vehemently denied the allegation.

Junior college faculty members are unhappy about it all, being — in their opinion — singled out by the Legislature for what many believe to be a misdirected punitive measure. For UC and California State University and Colleges faculties were not included within the Rodda Bill, which calls for the LBCC evaluations.

"OUR CAMPUS was quiet (during student turbulence of recent years) but we're being punished for what happened at the four-year schools," said the teacher quoted earlier.

For the record, it should be noted that many CSUC campuses — including Long Beach — currently require favorable student evaluations as a condition for professorial promotion. While unfavorable judgments may create problems, currently at least they are not reason enough to cause a firing.

Faculty participation in preparing evaluation procedures was a key requirement of both the Rodda and Stull Bills, another measure calling for evaluations. At LBCC, a committee of teachers, administrators and students brought out a plan built round the guiding principle that:

... evaluation procedures are based on the premise that the faculty of Long Beach City College are professional, competent people. The primary purpose of evaluation criteria and procedures then shall be to improve the instructional program ...

STANDARDS for evaluation were established—subject knowledge, effectiveness of communication and instruction, teaching methods used, acceptance of responsibility, professional growth and conduct.

Those being evaluated this year — 144 teachers, including many "stars," nine administrators and nine counselors — begin by filing personal statements of goals, methods and philosophy. Throughout the fall semester, evaluation teams comprised of a "peer" teacher and one administrator will probe further into the evaluatee's strengths and weaknesses.

Student viewpoints, as determined by a written classroom analysis, will be added in as well.

By early 1973 the procedures are expected to be complete. All remains well when all reports are favorable. But, to quote an official document, "if the evaluation team recommends nonretention, or if there has been no unanimous agreement, these items are to be submitted to the president.

Jews mark holiday

Yom Kippur, most sacred of the ancient Hebrew holidays, will be observed by Jews in the Long Beach area and throughout the world from sundown tonight until sundown Monday.

Climaxing the 10 days of self-examination and repentance which began with the Jewish New Year, the unbroken 2,000-year-old observance is often marked by a 24-hour fast.

The opening prayer at tonight's services, Kol Nidre, a plea for forgiveness written in the seventh century, is intoned to music which is considered by many to be among the great works of religious liturgy.

HELEN GURLEY BROWN, as every schoolgirl knows, rediscovered sex, which was invented by Eve.

The editor rescued it by vamping Burl Reynolds into posing on a bare skin rug in Cosmopolitan.

That inspired a willing group of San Francisco women to create "the world's first all-male nude calendar for liberated females."

They call their outfit Bo-Tree Productions in honor of the bo tree under which Buddha sat to contemplate his navel.

The $5 calendar is titled The Ladies Home Companion.

RECRUITED FROM all walks of life, the male models include everything from a hippie down to a columnist.

L.A. pickpockets out of touch

By MIKE JELF
Staff Writer

"There's no safe pocket," said police Sgt. Oscar O'Leary. "If they really want to get a wallet, they'll get it."

He should know. O'Leary is Southern California's preeminent authority on pickpockets.

Under his direction the Los Angeles Police Department's pickpocket unit has driven the crime in Los Angeles down 63 per cent over the past 10 years, while pickpocketing has increased 91 per cent nationwide.

While the crime has declined in Los Angeles, Long Beach Detective Sgt. William Haynes reports "there's been very little in Long Beach lately—not even worth mentioning."

What caused the drop in pocket picking in the Los Angeles area?

"I've worked it really hard, for one thing," says O'Leary, who cites his record of 1,000 arrests over the past decade.

Another reason, he says, is that several years ago Los Angeles courts started imposing high bail—$5,000 to $50,000—on persons arrested as pickpockets. Also, judges started sentencing foreigners convicted of pocket picking.

This isn't to say the Southland is free of pickpockets. There are still plenty of American-born pickpockets, or "dips," who move from one city to another, following the warm weather or the racetrack seasons.

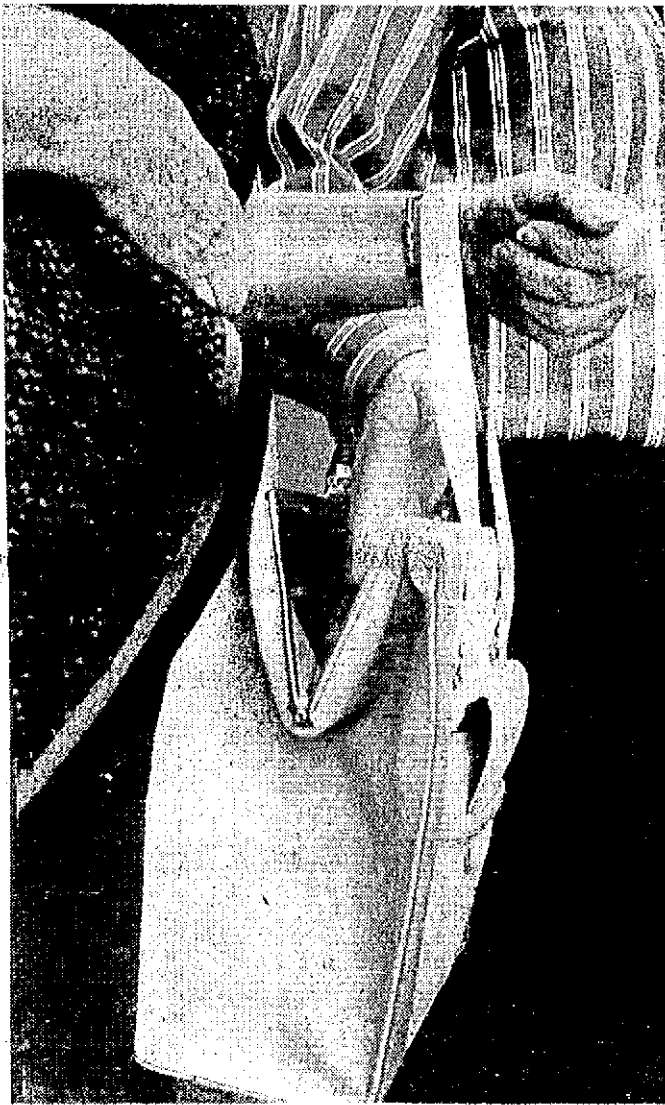

And purely local talent sometimes crops up in someone else's pocket or purse. "Two weeks ago," O'Leary says, "I picked up a 10-year-old kid who was one of the best pickpockets I've ever seen." The boy had developed his technique by practicing on a dummy in his back yard, O'Leary says.

Pickpockets like to ply their trade in places with lots of people and lots of money. The race track is a favorite haunt, because it has these two required commodities plus an opportunity for pony-loving dips to gamble.

Banks are favored by some, while buses, sporting events, parades, and department stores are other choice hunting grounds.

Sgt. Haynes says a few pickpocket cases turn up during each Christmas shopping season in downtown Long Beach.

Wherever he works, the pickpocket usually works with a partner or two, and depends on distraction to lift his victim's wallet unnoticed, the well known "jostle," for instance.

POLICE PERSONNEL SHOW HOW IT CAN HAPPEN
—Staff Photo

A far more common crime than pocket-picking proper is purse picking, says Sgt. William Leslie of the Long Beach Police Department's theft detail.

Purses are easier to get into than pockets, and some women make it ridiculously easy for thieves to steal their billfolds, he says.

Women, he said, should always carry their purses with the purse straps around an arm (or over the shoulder), and the arm wrapped around the purse, he says. This not only makes it hard for anyone to lift the billfold, it discourages purse snatchers.

Men should never carry a wallet in their rear pants pocket, even if the pocket's buttoned. Sgt. O'Leary says. "The pickpockets call this the 'sucker pocket,'" he says.

The safest pocket is the inside coat pocket, O'Leary says. A pickpocket doesn't like to go into this pocket because it gives the victim a good look at his face.

However, if the pickpocket knows a man has a lot of money on him, he'll go into any pocket, O'Leary says.

And a good dip will usually get what he's after. "I was working on some buses once," O'Leary says. "Two of them (pickpockets) tried me, and if I hadn't been in the business I would never have known it."

When someone discovers their wallet or checkbook missing, they should notify the police department immediately, then call the credit card companies and bank. Sgt. Leslie says.

The name of the group is Beau-Peep Productions and it, too, is producing an all-male calendar.

MRS. T. S. SAYS:

"The men in our calendar wear most of their clothes. We believe that a tease is better than a strip. Something should be left to the imagination."

For instance, January is a hot carrier in real life. He is shown letting one strap of his overalls dangle, with a tantalizing glimpse of his shirt.

February is an account executive in the process of unfastening one cufflink.

A used car salesman posed for March. He is pictured on the job in slacks and a sports shirt, exposing his upper chest as he leans forward to pound on the hood.

Bride rode horseback to her wedding

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

Lloyd Callahan and Joanna McGranahan were married Saturday in an informal ceremony in Compton's South Park. He arrived astride a motorcycle; she, a horse.

That's how they met a year ago, he explained, and that's how they decided to be married. But circumstance, the police and tradition stepped in at the last minute and made them stand on their own two feet.

The police were first to question the unusual ceremony. In the name of public order, they honked and drove at a crawl through a crowd of frightened horses to find out who was responsible for the chaos.

Horses were everywhere, whinnying and stomping and there were strange people about, strange for the park's neighborhood, anyway — biker type young men and women in denim and T-shirts on their cut-down, lowdown Harley Davidson motorcycles.

But the bikers didn't care, they had come for a wedding. And the residents of the neighborhood just stood — disbelieving.

It also was discovered that it really is impractical for the bride to be seven feet off the ground on a saddle while the groom slouches on his cut-down motorcycle inches from the ground.

So they stood, side by side, in front of the Rev. Rex Powers from the Queen Mary's Chapel by the Sea, and recited their vows without too much interruption.

Powers was unflappable. Callahan stood motionless, dressed in a clean T-shirt, now Levi's held up by a motorcycle drive chain, and his colors — a sleeveless, unwashed denim jacket over a leather jacket.

The former Miss McGranahan was a bit more nervous as she shifted from foot to foot in her western boots.

But it was done, finally, and the Rev. Powers notified them that they were wed, for better or worse.

The Callahans plan to honeymoon "not too far away," as Lloyd put it.

Tram in accident

Two tourists suffered minor injuries Saturday afternoon when the clutch slipped on the tram they were riding at Marineland of the Pacific.

Brenda A. Pill, 24, of Barstow, and Abbeil Theodore, 59, of Medford, Mass., were treated for minor injuries in San Pedro Community Hospital and released following the 4:10 p.m. accident.

The most daring exposure is offered by July, posed by a Long Beach marine safety officer, or life-guard.

His shoulders are silhouetted behind a glass shower door.

On a wall hook his sweatshirt is hanging suggestively.

The calendar is completed through September and Beau-Peep is recruiting models for the rest of the year.

Mrs. T. S. suggested that I might be willing to pose.

"We would like to have a columnist, since Bo-Tree Productions has one. I think one of the winter months would bring out the real you."

Look for me as December. I'll be taking off a mitten.

MY TOWN AND YOURS

The Beau-Peep Secret

ion, regardless of its current popularity, is a passing fad.

It is based on a false presumption on the part of Bo-Tree Productions.

The San Francisco women assume that sex is here to stay.

It seems to me that it can't last much longer at the rate it is being used.

It is lavished in wholesale lots upon books, plays, movies and even the TV commercials.

Where will it all end? It is obvious that unless the trend is reversed we are in danger of losing a priceless national resource before the end of this century.

SEX OUGHT to be rationed.

Court reforms and justice

One reform that is proposed from time to time in the interest of speeding up court processes would turn over to the judge the job of questioning prospective jurors to see if they are prejudiced.

More than time might be gained.

Uncovering bias is only the ostensible purpose of the questioning. When it is conducted not by the judge but by the rival attorneys — as it is in California's state courts — it customarily becomes part of the effort to win the case.

THE ACTUAL QUESTIONS are often almost incidental to the lawyers' statements of what the law is and their suggestions of what facts will be brought out in testimony.

One lawyer is entitled, for example, to hammer home the point that the jurors must not let sympathy enter into their verdict. The other lawyer is entitled to do anything he can to arouse the jury's sympathy — so long as he does not admit that this is what he is doing.

Later, the lawyer will probably cry.

"TEARS HAVE ALWAYS been considered legitimate arguments before a jury," the Tennessee Supreme Court once observed. "If counsel has them at his command, it may be seriously questioned whether it is not his professional duty to shed them whenever proper occasion arises."

It is no wonder, then, that lawyers occasionally overstep what tradition allows in questioning prospective jurors. The judge in the Juan Corona mass murder trial decided that this happened when defense attorney Richard Hawk asked a prospective juror if he thought the district attorney would have "jerked Ronald Reagan out of his bed at 4 a.m." as Hawk said had been done with Corona.

Hawk's response to the judge's rebuke, which was delivered in chambers, was to say that he "will be just as persistent as I have to be to get the truth before the jury."

In theory, getting the truth before the jury is supposed to wait until the jury has been chosen and the trial has started. In practice, lawyers have always seized the opportunity afforded by questioning members of the jury panel to try to persuade them that the truth is on the side the lawyer represents.

THE CORONA CASE points up another problem with the present system of selecting jurors. Since it is a problem that runs throughout trials, however, it would not be solved by letting the judge handle the interrogation of prospective jurors. This is the problem of juries that try the lawyers rather than the parties to the case.

Hawk advised one prospective juror not to let the prosecutor "kid you that he isn't involved in a popularity contest."

Lawyers customarily don't admit to juries that such a thing goes on. They are at pains to get prospective jurors to say that they won't let their opinions of the lawyers influence their verdict. But lawyers admit to each other that part of their job is winning courtroom popularity contests.

AS ONE BOOK ON trial technique advises lawyers, "Without realizing it, the jurors allow their opinions of the evidence to be swayed in favor of the side represented by the lawyer they like."

Developments in the Juan Corona trial may bring some of the problems of jury trials forcibly to the attention of the public, the Legislature and the courts. This will be all to the good if the result is to bring courtroom practices more nearly into line with the ideals of justice.

The return of posthaste

The Long Beach Post Office has a small sign advising postal patrons to try special delivery.

That may be excellent advice. We confess to some skepticism, prompted by the recent statement of Postmaster General Elmer T. Klassen that the postal service's record in handling special delivery mail was "really a disgrace."

Maybe his thought is that the service will improve if it gets more practice.

Aside from that grumble, it is only fair to say that we think we discern some improvement in mail deliveries lately and that we are pleasantly surprised by Klas-sen's announcement that a planned one-cent increase in first-class mail rates won't be needed. The price hike was scheduled to take effect at the beginning of next year, but Klassen says it won't be needed, largely because attrition has cut the postal service's work force by 33,000 persons.

Bureaucracy still reigns in the postal service — as it does in most large organizations, public or private — but Klassen's conscious effort to tighten the operation is beginning to work. We trust he won't be halted by rain, snow or the gloom engendered by his service's 200 million critics.

Israelis master spy game

The Israelis have outmaneuvered the Arabs not only on the battlefield but in the bazaars and back alleys where Middle Eastern intrigue has been practiced for centuries.

Israeli agents — immigrants whose families had lived in Arab lands for generations — have a perfect knowledge of Arab dialects and customs. They have been able to infiltrate Arab governments with ease, gaining access to the innermost circles.

EGYPT'S PRESIDENT Anwar Sadat, for example, seldom makes a move that goes unreported to Israeli intelligence. The death of his predecessor, Gamal Abdel Nasser, was known in Tel Aviv before it was announced in Cairo.

The Israelis are also skillful at exploiting Arab rivalries and turning Arab against Arab. The Kurdish tribes, for example, inhabit the mountains of northern Iraq. Every month a secret Israeli envoy slips into the mountains from the Iranian side to deliver $50,000 to Kurdish leader Mulla Mustafa al-Barzani.

The subsidy insures Kurdish hostility against Iraq, whose government is militantly anti-Israeli. The Central Intelligence Agency, reporting on a typical tryst, gives this secret account:

"AN ISRAELI intelligence officer . . . went to al-Barzani's headquarters at Hajji Umran to deliver to al-Barzani the Israeli government's monthly subsidy. . . .

"(The agent) regularly delivers to al-Barzani Israel's $50,000 monthly subsidy. Upon his return to Tehran, (the agent) reported that al-Barzani was continuing to gather men and equipment together in anticipation of a probable encounter with the Iraqi army."

On at least one occasion, Gen. Zvi Zamir, the Israeli intelligence chief, called on al-Barzani in his mountain stronghold.

"One purpose of General Zamir's visit," the CIA reported, "was to discuss the possibility of having al-Barzani assist Iraqi Jews to emigrate from Iraq. General Zamir also was seeking assurance from al-Barzani of continued Kurdish hostility toward the Iraqi regime."

THE NAVAL ACADEMY has produced hundreds of heroes whose deeds have stirred the nation. This is the saga of a graduate, dishonored by the Navy, who demonstrated a different kind of courage.

Lt. Grant Kimball came out of the academy more troubled than enthralled by the military profession. He had the courage to renounce his teachings, turn his back on war and declare himself to be a conscientious objector.

This was such heresy for an Annapolis man that he has been keelhauled for three years by the Navy. But a man of peace, in his own way, can also be a hero.

WHILE KIMBALL WAS awaiting his conscientious objector status, he refused to fight in Vietnam. He signed an acknowledgment that he had received orders to go to Vietnam. But first he asked for a lawyer to advise him.

The Navy refused him legal counsel, and then charged him with "desertion." His signature was used as evidence against him.

Facing a 10-year prison term for desertion, he was provided with a Navy lawyer, Lt. James Toms, who supported the Vietnam war. But he still was determined to give Kimball a good defense.

In an affidavit in our possession, Toms swears that the court-martial judge, Capt. John Gleeson, told him "that if I persisted in my vigorous advocacy in this case, he had a good mind to hold me in contempt of court and place me in the Treasure Island brig for a few days."

THE CAPTAIN ALSO told Kimball outside the courtroom, according to the affidavit, that he was "disloyal to the Navy and deserved condemnation. . . ." Gleeson added that "the type of thinking Lt. Kimball represents would, if supported, bring about the fall of the American Republic."

Gleeson then secured a one-page leaflet on the fall of the Roman Empire and ordered Kimball to read it. Toms attests.

During the court-martial, Kimball's

MERRY-GO-ROUND

lawyers were refused essential documents. Some of their requests for data were later discovered in the prosecution's file folders. One court-martial member, who swore he had no prior knowledge of the case, actually had custody of the pretrial investigation reports.

EVEN BEFORE Kimball's court-martial, Adm. Elmo Zumwalt, then Vietnam naval commander and now the Navy chief, expressly said he didn't want Kimball in Vietnam. But Zumwalt's message was not allowed into evidence.

Such rulings convinced Kimball he was before a hanging court, which might lock him up for 10 years. So he reluctantly agreed to plead guilty to lesser charges on the premise there would be no prison term.

NOW HE IS CITING prejudice by the Navy in an effort to get the Navy Records Corrections Board to wipe out his dishonorable dismissal. When he sought Navy records for his appeal, the Navy at first refused many of them. Sen. William Spong, D-Va., got some data cut loose.

Clearly, the Navy prefers war heroes to peace heroes.

Footnote: Captain Gleeson has retired from the Navy and moved to Rome. We sent him a copy of the pertinent parts of Toms' affidavit asking for comment. But we received no answer. The Navy has said it has "carefully, deliberately and impartially weighed" the evidence in the Kimball case and was sticking to its guns.

Mansfield takes aim at Humphrey

By AL EISELE
I, P-T Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Mild-mannered Mike Mansfield, who gives the appearance of wearing the mantle of power easily, apparently is finding it as hard to let go of power as any of the other venerable old bulls in Congress.

The 69-year-old Montana Democrat gave a clear signal to any ambitious would-be challengers last week that he intends to stay on as majority leader in the new 93rd Congress that convenes next January.

Denying recurrent speculation that he is getting tired of his job after 12 years as Democratic leader, Mansfield told a reporter he has "no intention of withdrawing." He said he will serve again as leader if his colleagues want him to.

Mansfield, whose easy-going manner and egalitarian style of leadership contrast sharply with that of the hard-driving man he succeeded in 1961, Lyndon Johnson, also took a not-so-subtle swipe at three of the four men who have served under him as assistant majority leader.

HE PRAISED HIS current whip, West Virginia's colorless but efficient Robert Byrd, by saying that "you can depend on him — he's there all the time." But he added, "For eight years, you know, I was doing most of it alone."

According to Senate insiders, Mansfield's remarks were aimed primarily at Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota. Humphrey, who was Mansfield's whip from 1961 to 1964, is being talked about as one who might challenge Mansfield next year or at least try to succeed him when he finally steps down.

Although Mansfield's remarks also were partially directed at two other ex-whips, Louisiana's Russell Long and Massachusetts' Edward Kennedy, Mansfield was clearly aiming at Humphrey.

He is said to be particularly resentful toward Humphrey because he feels Humphrey was more loyal as whip to then-President Johnson than to Mansfield.

HUMPHREY, FOR HIS part has made it clear, both publicly and privately, that he doesn't intend to challenge Mansfield if the taciturn Montanan runs for leader again. However, he isn't ruling himself out as a possible successor to Mansfield if and when he retires.

Humphrey, whose presidential hopes finally were crushed this year, isn't exactly fond of Mansfield — whom he privately refers to as "Old Stoneface." Aides recall how he often exploded in frustration while serving as Mansfield's whip, and felt Mansfield treated him shabbily while serving as vice president. Their cool relationship wasn't improved any by Humphrey's long absences during the presidential primaries this year.

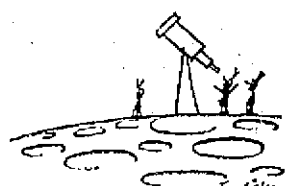

Mansfield's apparent support of Byrd as his eventual successor does not sit well with many liberal Democrats. Most senators agree that Byrd has worked tirelessly and conscientiously at his job as whip, but they shudder at the thought of the conservative Byrd someday becoming the national spokesman for their party.

FORMER SEN. Eugene McCarthy once compared the whip's job to being equipment manager for a football team, but it has always been a good stepping stone to Senate leadership, and Byrd seems to be using it for just that purpose. Although Byrd's super-efficient manner has been too much for even some of his southern colleagues — Mississippi's powerful James Eastland was moved to call him "a little pipsqueak" after Byrd nagged him about missing a floor vote — nearly everyone agrees he probably will be the next majority leader.

Since Senate liberals tend to be an ambitious and jealous bunch who always have found it difficult to agree on a candidate of their own, Byrd looks like the best bet to become the next majority leader of the Senate. And apparently that's just fine with Mike Mansfield.

Watching the pollsters watch us

DEBRIEFING

"Wait a minute, All I thought we bought these vacation homes to GET AWAY FROM IT ALL!"

(Editor's note: Ray G. DiPiazza, marketing research director for these newspapers, here reviews Leo Bogart's "Silent Politics: Polls and the Awareness of Public Opinion," published by John Wiley and Sons. Before he joined the I. P. T., DiPiazza was director of media research for an independent marketing research firm. He has directed a wide variety of consumer and opinion studies. Bogart has directed opinion polls for many of America's leading corporations and has been a consultant to several government agencies. He has been president of the American Association for Public Opinion Research and has headed the consumer psychology division of the American Psychological Association.)

By RAY G. DIPIAZZA

At a time when awareness of public opinion polls is highest (as it certainly is in this presidential election year), even professional pollsters reflect on the power, reliability and effect of the published opinion studies.

Dr. Bogart says, "The politicians' sensitivity to polls reflects their high and growing visibility. Polls are a form of mass entertainment, with large and steadily increasing attention devoted to them in the press and on television."

READERS OF THIS newspaper could hardly deny the latter part of that statement. We have become most cognizant of the latest popularity reports of Nixon and McGovern. The "scores" are reported and discussed among campaign watchers in much the same way batting averages and other statistics are studied by baseball enthusiasts.

In this pre-election period observers of survey results must be admonished to reflect upon inherent problems in polling as a way to calculate the election result.

Predicting election results from polls has brought disaster to large and small opinion survey firms. It's no wonder. As Bogart points out, part of the problem is in "the difficulty of determining who will cast a ballot on Election Day." National election predictions are complicated by the fact that the presidential office is finally determined on a state-by-state basis through the American Electoral College system. And polling is subject to the statistical laws of sampling and margin of error. To be reasonably certain of reliability would require a budget nearly 50 times that of a national poll.

WHILE DEVOTING relatively few chapters in the book directly to polls themselves, Bogart offers a considerable amount of study of the forces that change public opinion — and cause it to occur at all. What he says in other chapters will have more interest for people dealing with opinion either as reporters or as social and political observers. Still, every chapter is significant for anyone desiring a fuller understanding of public opinion and public opinion reporting.

Interest today, however, is so centered on the results and reporting of polls that Bogart's treatment of the phenomena deserves emphasis. Bogart points out that press coverage of opinion surveys sometimes fails to distinguish between technically good surveys and those that are technically bad. He particularly criticizes techniques such as street corner interviews, so-called random telephoning, and the radio or television technique of soliciting mailed or telephoned responses to "timely" questions. Such surveys are inherently fallacious and cannot even purport to reflect opinion beyond the actual people interviewed.

"The syndicated pollsters who release their results for publication generally abstain from private polling on behalf of candidates, since this would represent an obvious conflict of interest," says Bogart; but he goes on to point out that some, at times, have worked as private contractors. Although he doesn't specifically say so, there is the implication that private work need not, and probably doesn't, affect the reputable, syndicated pollster.

The point can be argued, but my experience generally supports the view that only occasionally does bias creep in: If the reader of published polls concerns himself with the more easily identifiable bench marks of good polling — sample size, question context, and the method of interviewing — he can better evaluate the veracity and reliability of the findings. Space is too limited to review the ramifications of the above and other technical points of good polling, but observers would be well advised to pursue these areas, critical conditions of good survey research noted throughout this book as well as in others.

EVEN WELL-MEANING newspeople are apt to imply competence; where none exists, to surveys taken by themselves or others, much to the consternation of professional researchers.

Bogart repeatedly articulates the position that the forces molding and changing opinions and attitudes are manifold, complex and divergent. It would be difficult (even if one wanted to) to dispute the general thesis (he doesn't state it as an hypothesis); with a little introspection we can easily see the veracity of what he says within ourselves and among friends and associates.

The author makes the reader aware that individual opinions can be weak or strong and may be rationalized. The state of individual opinion, then, may affect the response given an opinion surveyor. Bogart says our opinions can be categorized as public or private opinions — publicly held opinions being those to which we feel committed because we have expressed them to a number of persons. Such opinions are not likely to change unless another position becomes overwhelming among the general public. Bogart cites the change in attitude toward the Vietnam war as a striking example.

Opinion samplers are frequently called upon to study ideas or issues about which little public knowledge or opinion seems to exist. Bogart concludes that "perhaps the most important and accurate thing surveys can tell us is the extent of public knowledge."

The thought appears most significant because it may result in a high percentage of "don't know or no opinion" responses. If conclusions are drawn from such a survey, a subsequent study may incorrectly appear to reflect a change of opinion.

The author points out that lack of information probably reflects selective inattention to subjects that may be well covered by the news media. "Topics of conversation do not focus on subjects of public concern, but revolve more around personal interests"; hence we sometimes find no opinion to measure on the subjects at first interesting to sociologists and politicians.

THOUGH POLLS measuring the popularity of candidates will remain at the forefront, Bogart has some interesting points to consider on issue polling — particularly establishing the fact that most public issues are made by the press and its awareness of potential issues, and by polling organizations through their selection of survey subjects. Bogart maintains that that provides the opportunity for public debate, which should be one purpose of opinion studies.

If you choose to read "Silent Politics," you may find solace in many of Dr. Bogart's positions, or you may be antagonized by his sometimes obvious sociopolitical point of view. Nonetheless, it ought to be required reading for politicians as well as for anyone else who has an opinion — and that's just about everyone.

Those who begin reading Dr. Bogart's excellent book intending to ascertain, simply and quickly, the extent to which published polls affect political and social opinion shortly learn it's not that simple, even when the author concludes by saying, "Polls (are) a factor in the political process rather than merely an account of it."

Living a rich life in Japan

YAMANASHI CITY, Japan — My father, who was born in this little town in 1884, was intensely interested in English literature, even as a high school student. After high school, he went to America, following the fashion of ambitious young men of his day. He worked in and around San Francisco, mostly as a domestic servant. His most memorable job was as a mess attendant on the U.S.S. Pensacola, stationed as a training ship at Goat Island (now Yerba Buena Island). He remembers being paid $25 a month in $5 gold pieces and going in to San Francisco to celebrate.

His celebrations were quite intellectual. He went to the office of a Japanese language newspaper, "Shin Sekai" (New World), to which he was a contributor. He recalls publishing translations of selections from Emerson's essays and Sir Walter Scott's "The Lady of the Lake." He was especially proud of his Japanese version (from the English) of Heine's "Die Lorelei." Unfortunately the files of "Shin Sekai" were lost shortly thereafter in the San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906.

BEFORE THE earthquake father had left for Japan to fetch his bride. They landed in Vancouver, B.C., where father held a succession of jobs, among them representing Japanese workmen, most of whom spoke no English, in business transactions and court cases. I was born in a small rooming house on Powell Street in 1906. Father was then 22.

For whatever reason, we kept moving around. I remember living above a grocery store in Cranbrook, B.C., and on a farm outside the town. We also lived for a time in Raymond, Alberta. Father has since told me about Raymond. He was working as a labor contractor there and engaged 60 men to work on a sugar beet farm. A premature freeze wiped out the crop and the hope of compensation for father and his men. Father moved on, but many of the laborers remained to work on other farms. More than 60 years later, the descendants of those Japanese have remained to become prominent citizens of that area.

At the outbreak of the First World War, we were in Calgary, where father ran a grocery store. I remember it as pretty magnificent, although it couldn't have been much, since I don't recall more than two clerks being employed there. But it was during this period that father got into the business that was to occupy him the rest of his career.

THE WAR HAD cut off imports from Germany, which up to that time had supplied many things from Christmas ornaments to surgical instruments. In these areas Japanese imports replaced German, and father got his start as an importer. We moved to Winnipeg — a trade center for the Canadian West — in 1917. I graduated from elementary school in 1919. I had started in a new school every September since the first grade.

In the 1920s father began to take long buying trips to Japan, leaving me, young as I was, with many responsibilities, since mother never learned to speak much English. In the late 1920s father moved his business to Osaka, leaving me in college and my brother Fred, then 17, in a Canadian headquarters in Montreal. Mother and my two sisters moved to Japan at that time.

It wasn't until 1935 that I saw my father and mother again. That June I got my Ph.D. in English at the University of Wisconsin. Having buried myself for so long in Shakespeare, Milton and T. S. Eliot, I felt I owed it to myself to find out something about Japan. So I took off right after commencement.

BY THIS TIME father was prospering. Besides his head office in Osaka, he had branches in Kobe and Nagoya. He had customers all over the world — in North and Central and South America, in Europe, Africa and the Middle East. I recall a big, crowded office in Osaka with 25 or 30 employees bustling about, taking care of mail in 20 different languages.

I was not to see father and mother again until well after World War II. The war completely destroyed father's business. The bombing of Osaka, Kobe and Nagoya left him with nothing but 15 typewriters, which he tried to save by shipping them out to the country by truck. But a crippled American bomber, unloading its bombs in an attempt to gain altitude, dropped one on the truck, leaving father completely wiped out.

For five years after the end of the war, father worked for somebody else — a situation so intolerable to him that in 1950, at the age of 66, he decided to go into business for himself again. He raised a little capital and wrote to me asking me to suggest a name for his new company. Remembering his motto, "World Unity Through World Trade," I suggested "Unitas Trading Company." He was delighted.

BY THE TIME father retired at the age of 82, the company, while not large, was firmly established. It seems to be doing a lot of business with Taiwan, as well as with the United States and Canada, Europe and Southeast Asia.

But father no longer cares. Bored with having little to do and at the same time frustrated by the fact that he is no longer able to do very much, his mind turns inward to aches and pains. I am visiting him in Yamanashi. I wish I could tell him how much I admire him for his rich and fully lived life. But he won't listen.

Time-Life Books started its fabulous series with the decade of 1900-1910. No, we're wrong; there was a backward glance as a sort of hors d'oeuvre — covering 1870 to 1900. Each of these large, handsome volumes is a sourcebook of history, early a work of the finest pictorial art, with countless photographs that make the decades come to life again. The two new volumes carry on the grand tradition of their predecessors. One should possess them all, but any one volume in itself stands as a dazzling record of its own decade. —N.

L.A.C. Says Constitution Week starts today

By L.A. COLLINS SR.

It was 185 years ago today the Constitution of the United States was signed in Philadelphia. George Washington presided over the convention. Today the patriotic organization Daughters of the American Revolution DAR is asking all Americans to join in a week's observance and appreciation of what that great document has meant to this nation.

With great turmoil in our present society, with widespread disregard of its guarantees of freedom and law and order, it should cause each of us to be grateful rather than complacent about what it has done for us. It was, and is, a document that is essential to the maintenance of the principals that have made us the most free and prosperous nation ever known in history.

THE FOUNDATION of the United States since that 17th of September 1787 has been based on those principals. Later the Bill of Rights was adopted which were 10 amendments added to the original Constitution. Since then there have been a total of 26 amendments approved by the states. The last one was in 1971 when the voting age was reduced to 18 years of age or older.

The great British statesman William Gladstone referred to it as "It is the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man." It has survived during the many wars we have fought and while most nations experienced periods of tragic rule of dictators with all freedoms lost by their people.

Today we are faced with many groups who would deprive us of those freedoms. They have attempted to change our system of government by violent methods. We have those who promise amnesty to men who have fled the country to evade military service for their country which under the Constitution they were called upon to give.

OUR SUPREME COURT is the final arbitrator of what is constitutional. But Congress with the approval of the states has made 26 changes to conform with changes in our society. The people elect their representatives to Congress and have the right to re-elect or recall them if they fail to carry out the people's wishes. It is a right denied the people in many of today's governments in other nations.

Our greatest danger in the United States is the apathy of our people in appreciation of the great protection they are given under the Constitution. There are little more than half of them who vote in a presidential election. There are many who take part in street demonstrations in violation of the rights of others and the safeguards spelled out in the Constitution.

The rights to protest are guaranteed to all our people. But they do not have the right to use violence or refuse to abide by the rules set out in the Constitution. Unless we live by its provisions and the Bill of Rights we are faced with anarchy, which means no laws to protect individual rights. The observance of Constitution Week should mean each of us pledge ourselves to live by the rules of that Constitution which has given us so much.

Columnists on the opinion pages are chosen to represent diverse viewpoints and do not necessarily reflect the editorial position of this newspaper.

We TIP seeks allies against pushers

Representatives of Garden Grove civic organizations are being asked to join a citizen self-help program aimed against narcotics pushers, a project that has resulted in more than 900 arrests in a six month period.

Started in the Ontario area, the "We Turn in Pushers" program has spread to many other communities, including Anaheim and Buena Park.

Officials of We TIP, a nonprofit program supported by civic groups and interested residents, appeared before a combined service and civic convention hosted by the Garden Grove Kiwanis Club Thursday evening at the Mr. Angelo Restaurant.

PRESENT were leaders from other Garden Grove service groups, Mayor Bernard Adams, Police Chief Donald Gurney and Chamber President Bill Barker.

Speakers were former Anaheim police officer Lloyd Lowry, retired Los Angeles County Sheriff's deputy Bill Brownell, coordinator chairman, and Smith Miner, editor of a We TIP publication.

In essence, the We TIP program encourages anonymous tips on narcotics pushers and offers rewards of from $100 to $500 for convictions.

THE PROGRAM was conceived by a special enforcement task force in Tampa, Fla., and brought to Southern California by a group of concerned community leaders.

It has now spread to several dozen cities in California.

The 'Informants' date is filled out in triplicate. One copy of "the tip" is sent to the police department in the area, one to the sheriff's department and the other to the We TIP central file for periodic review.

Nancy Yoshima, Norwalk, Jim Burger, Lakewood, and Janet Fruwirth, Artesia, were among the more than 170 student delegates attending the first Youth and the Law Conference at Stanford University.

It was sponsored by the California Jaycees and the state Attorney General's office.

We TIP cloaks informants in secrecy to protect them from retaliation. Each informant receives a code name and number by which he will be known by We TIP and police.

Not all people contacting We TIP seek rewards, some are only interested in stopping the pushers but are fearful to make a complaint to the police department.

WE TIP officials said that the information provided by the program is a tip and no more, and departments have to conduct their own probes and build their own cases. An anonymous call does not constitute legal grounds for police to either search a house or automobile or arrest a suspect.

Some attorneys have questioned this probable cause area and have also expressed the fear that the group might become a vigilante committee.

The We TIP officials claimed that 75 per cent of all the crimes being committed are directly or indirectly traced to narcotics. They said many programs had been organized to help rehabilitate users of narcotics but that We TIP efforts were aimed directly at the pusher, the person who makes money from the sale of drugs.

"WE'RE NOT really interested in the user, the pusher is the person we're after," Brownell said.

Requested from the local community is an initial contribution of $500 for reward money, manpower from the service organizations to promote the project in the city, plus continued support from civic groups.

While there has been some controversy over the program, it has the support of such agencies as the U.S. Department of Justice, the State Bureau of Narcotics, Los Angeles District Attorney Joseph Busch, Governor Ronald Reagan, Assemblyman John Briggs of Orange County, and many other officials and agencies.

The We TIP officials said an information office had been established in Orange County — 772-1880 — and persons may write to Regional Task Force Information Center, P.O. Box 876, Anaheim, California, 92805.

NARCOTICS pusher tips are taken by phone via a special line that has been established for this purpose. The telephone number from this area is 983-9611.

The way the system works is that anyone with knowledge of a drug pusher is asked to contact the We TIP number.

A specially trained operator tends the switchboard from noon to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Summary of rewards offered by I, P-T

As part of these newspapers' Secret Witness program, summaries of all cases in which rewards are offered are printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Thursday and Sunday. The summaries follow:

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Mrs. Linda Sue Smith, 18, who was strangled in her Santa Ana apartment at 2319 Bristol Ave. on July 26, 1972. Mrs. Smith's body was discovered by her husband, Eric Smith, when he returned home from work at 11 a.m.

—A reward totaling $4,000 will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Mrs. Velma Harris, 44, shot to death in her Long Beach home at 5020 Centralia St. on Aug. 17, 1971. Her body was discovered by her husband, Ralph K. Harris, 47, when he came home from work at 11 a.m. Mr. Harris has posted a $2,000 reward in the case, and this amount is being matched by the Secret Witness service.

—A $1,000 reward is being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Jan Marsh, 14, of Lynwood, who was strangled on the night of Nov. 3, 1969. Her body was found lying on a residential lawn in the 400 block of Virginia Street in Lynwood early the following morning.

—A $7,000 reward, the largest thus far offered, is guaranteed for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers of Cyril and James Ball on Dec. 23, 1970.

The father-and-son businessmen were shot numerous times in the head in an "execution type" slaying in their Long Beach sporting goods store at 345 Long Beach Blvd. shortly after 4 p.m. The killers took about $1,000 cash and more than 20 handguns before fleeing. Witnesses told police they saw three young men in or around the store at about the same time.

The first suspect was described as between 18 and 21 years old, 5 ft. 7 in. tall, weighing about 145 pounds, "curly and dirty" blond with shoulder-length hair. He wore glasses and had on a buckskin jacket with fringe on the back and blue jeans.

The second suspect was described as 25 to 30 years old, with short, wavy blond hair and "always smiling." He wore a tan coat and dark trousers. The third suspect was described as between 22 and 28 years of age, thin, with long brown straight hair and a full, bushy moustache. He wore dark clothing.

—A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrests and convictions of the members of a Long Beach area auto theft gang who steal cars from throughout the Southland and then, at one of a number of auto repair shops, strips them for parts.

—One thousand dollars are being offered as a reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Vicki Lynne Miller, 16, of Buena Park, who was bludgeoned to death in late October or early November of 1970. Her body was found in Coyote Creek about a mile from her home and a mile from her school on Nov. 15 of that year.

—A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the man who killed Gary Wayne Callow, 25, a Fullerton Junior College student, in the all-night Stop N Go Market in Stanton where he was working as a clerk on July 12, 1971. At about 1:40 a.m. Callow was shot once in the back by one of two men seen running from the store. The suspects, both white men in their early 20s, were clean cut in appearance. One was between 6-foot-2 and 6-foot-4 in height, thin of build with light-colored hair, and the other stood between 5-foot-2 and 5-foot-4, was thin, had dark brown or black hair and tattooed arms.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the men who fatally beat, tortured and burned disabled World War II veteran Clarence Huigar, 53, of 1366 Peterson Ave., after breaking into his home at about 10:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 19. Huigar died of his injuries 25 days later, on April 13. The men are described as Negroes in their mid-20s, one 6 ft. tall, weighing about 180 pounds, with a medium-length Afro hair-do, and the other 5 feet 4 inches, weighing about 150 pounds.

—A $2,000 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Mrs. Marguerite June Makeig, 50, shot in the head and killed when she returned to her home, 10608 Felson St., Bellflower, on the afternoon of Aug. 11, 1971. Mrs. Makeig had been shopping. When she walked into her living room, someone armed with a small-caliber handgun fired once, the bullet striking her in the head.

—Two thousand dollars are being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the men who killed Elliot C. Lawson, 38, during a hold-up at the Atlantic Inn, 1854 Atlantic Ave., at about 1:10 a.m. on July 15, 1971. The killer is described as a Negro, about 25 years old, 5-foot-7, 130 pounds, with a two-inch Afro hair-do. The man has a slender face, large eyes, a slender nose, and a smooth, medium complexion. He has a deep voice, is straight in posture, and is well-groomed.

—A $2,000 reward is in effect for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of cab driver Michael A. Miller, 27, of Downey, who worked the night shift for the Southeast Taxi Co.,

Compton. Miller was found dead at about 11:20 June 8. He had been shot twice in the back of the head in the 200 block of East Reeve Street.

—A $2,000 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Independent Press-Telegram pressman Frank M. Schiavone, 41, and his wife, Shirley, 44, who were shot from ambush May 9 upon returning to their home in Westminster after an evening out. Westminster police are seeking to question a man believed to have been the last person to have seen the Schiavones alive. The man was with them in Woody's Bar, Springdale Avenue and Garden Grove Boulevard, Westminster, shortly before he is described as a white man in his mid-20s to early 30s, from 5-foot-10 to 6-foot-1 in height, with wavy, dark brown hair, a medium-dark, olive complexion and a pock-marked square face with high cheekbones.

How you can be a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of other criminals. For this purpose, a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and convictions of a criminal, or the capture of a fugitive, in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information resulting in arrests and convictions in cases not published by Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2528 from 8 a.m. to midnight weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. Do NOT give us your name. Or, write to Secret Witness at the following address: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name for yourself ... my name, as long as it's not your own ... and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.

Tear off and keep a corner of the last page, with the same code name and number on it. Mail your letter to "Secret Witness," P.O. Box 67, Long Beach 90844.

CONSUMER NOTES

Starting today, the Independent Press-Telegram presents "Consumer Notes" as a public service. The weekly digest is prepared by our staff reporters with information from various agencies and other news sources.

On the move

The Interstate Commerce Commission is currently investigating consumer complaints about companies that move household goods.

Transportation officials suggested in a petition that ICC regulations may not provide a sufficient remedy for consumers who are inconvenienced by late pickup or delivery of their household goods.

The Transportation Department (a government agency) wants the ICC to require moving companies to pay penalties for unexcused late pickups and deliveries or to make the companies file alternate rates providing for reductions each day a shipment is late.

Transportation officials also condemned the practice by which moving companies pay estimators or salesmen on a commission basis.

The petition said that this practice encourages salesmen to underestimate the total cost of the move so as to make as many sales as possible. It was suggested that salesmen be paid a straight salary.

The suggestion was also made that a regulation be proposed forbidding moving companies from charging more than 10 per cent above any estimate they give a consumer.

Deceptive demonstrations

The Federal Trade Commission has prohibited American Home Products Corp. and its advertising agent, Cunningham and Walsh Inc., from using allegedly deceptive television demonstrations for several of American Home's products.

For example, American's Black Flag commercial: cockroaches are placed in separate containers — one treated with Black Flag, another with a "leading brand" of insecticide.

The roaches in the Black Flag container die after a quick spray. The roaches in the other container crawl happily around their glass-enclosed home. End commercial.

What the advertisers forgot to mention is the fact that the roaches in the leading brand's container were known to have a resistance to the competitive product's active ingredient.

Or if you walk out of the room while the roach commercial is on, you may have watched the advertisement where a half a window is sprayed with American Home Product's "Easy - Off Window Cleaner" and half with the leading brand.

Both are allowed to dry. The Easy-Off's half is spotless. The leading brand's half looks like a case of terminal acne.

If the leading brand's half had been wiped as directed, it too would have been spotless.

The same goes for American's crystal bowl performance — one filled with Aerowax dries clear while the one with another wax dries cloudy.

Aerowax is a polishing wax and the other a cleaning wax, and therefore, not to be compared.

The FTC has also accused American Home of using a loaded deck in the "Easy-On" spray starch antiscorch act.

The FTC complains that if the shirts in both commercials were ironed under the same conditions, the competitor would prevent scorching, too.

Child-proof packaging

Child-proof packaging of aspirin which went into effect Aug. 14, will soon be required for all narcotics, stimulants and sedatives, the Food and Drug Administration reported.

The cutoff date for child-proof packaging for all drugs administered orally — which is 72 per cent of all drugs prescribed for home use — is Oct. 24 under the Poison Prevention Packaging Act.

FDA statistics show that each year more than 100,000 ingestions of drugs and potentially toxic household products were reported, with children under the age of five involved in 70,000 of these accidents which often resulted in death.

Wise home buying

A major problem facing a prospective homeowner is deciding how much he can afford to spend.

Two ways of estimating ability to meet house payments are: 1. the home should not exceed 2½ times the annual family income, and 2. the homeowner should not pay more than 25 per cent of income for monthly expenses, including house payments, utilities, repair and maintenance.

Before purchasing a home, the buyer should have the cash necessary to meet the down payment and closing costs. Closing costs include mortgage service charges, title search and insurance, and transfer of ownership charges.

Additional hints for prospective homeowners are available in booklet form, "Wise Home Buying." Produced by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the booklet may be obtained free from Consumer Product Information, Washington, D.C. 20407.

Land development

Housing and Urban Development Department's Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration has begun nationwide hearings into problems faced by consumers in dealings with land developers who advertise and/or sell across state lines.

The hearings are part of a campaign by HUD to protect consumers who buy undeveloped land at "bargain prices" from fast-talking salesmen.

Many consumers buy land—intending to build a vacation house or retirement dwelling on the land or to keep it for investment purposes — but fail to inspect it personally.

The Bureau of Consumer Affairs reports that after purchasing the property, the buyer may find that the land lacks essential features such as paved access roads, flood protection, sewage facilities, utilities and medical facilities.

Interstate Land Sales Administrator George K. Bernstein said that land sale abuses are widespread and not unique to any part of the country.

A Federal law, which went into effect in 1969, requires interstate land developers to provide each buyer with a property report describing limitations of the land.

For more information on interstate land sales and on HUD's consumer protection efforts, write to Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration, Housing and Urban Development Department, Washington, D.C. 20410.

Earl Wilson Elly hates music—in wrong place

NEW YORK — Considering that sparrow-like little Elly Stone is acclaimed by many as the American Edit Piaf, it's remarkable that she hates music. Or maybe it isn't. She hates it in elevators, hotel lobbies, airplanes, trains and restaurants, when it's piped in. She's almost as devoted to her campaign against the muzakization of America as she is to her determination to make a Broadway success of "Jacques Brel Is Alive and Well and Living in Paris" which has moved uptown to the Billy Rose Theater. She will undoubtedly be the wonder woman of the new season. ELLY STONE has been known to confront a dour train conductor and demand that he turn off the Muzak. "Many people hate it but don't speak out," she says. "I hate it and speak out. I don't know anybody who says 'I just love it.'"

"You're usually trapped. The conductor on one train said, 'Listen, this company spent $500,000 — maybe

ELLY STONE

Before that, she was more concerned just getting a job. "When I was very young here in New York, I got a job playing my guitar in a strip show in a carnival. I wasn't a stripper. I just played for the girls to parade around. I wore a long gown I'd had made to sing 'The Messiah' in and I had long braids. "The reaction of the men out front was 'This is a switch'; they expected me to strip. They yelled, 'Take it off.' And when I didn't, they yelled, 'Take HER off!'"

"I lasted one night." MARRIED, as they say, "at an early age," she and an early husband hitchhiked to Oklahoma, stole corn from the fields in Kansas, slept in used car lots, went to Florida and Atlantic City where he was a magician and she was an alleged handwriting expert. She later married Eric Blau, a poet who collected the ob-he said $500,000 — 'to put this in, and I'm not turning it off.'" But she has bullied some conductors — she weighs about 100 and is early thirtysix but capable of being waspish — into turning it off. "Nobody complained that it was off!" Miss Stone first hated piped-in music when she worked in a factory that made lipstick cases where the music and the metallic sound of the lipstick cases didn't harmonize.

scure works of Jacques Brel. She got hysterical reviews from critics who said it was madness not to regard her as the greatest merchant of melancholia since Piaf. Miss Stone is an experience. "There are some nights in a theater when you feel nobody in the audience is reachable," she said. "Much of the time it's you. The whole thing about vibes is a cliché but I think some of it's true. "There are times when you're in an inexplicably bad mood. I got off a plane in Los Angeles and I was very depressed. It was my first time there, but I was depressed. Of course it happens to me in New York, too. Did you ever have days when you wake up and wish you didn't have to get out of bed that day?"

Today's Best Laugh: Harry Hershfield says he's had a highball every night for 30 years. "to celebrate the fact that, with me, drinking has never become a habit."

and, well, you get the idea. But the organization under the leadership of Norman Prescott and Lou Scheimer is mending its ways. Not this season with "Fat Albert and the Cosby Kids." But soon.

Filmation will make 20 "family classic" musicals, the first three of which will be "Oliver Twist," "Treasure Island," and "Huckleberry Finn," in conjunction with Warner Bros.

THE CATCH is that each of the 90-minute animated features will be shown in theaters before they wind their way to the tube.

"For years we sold a lot of shows for the wrong reasons," said Prescott, "but the right kind of shows couldn't get on the air."

"We're like custom tailors," Scheimer added. "We make the kind of shows the sponsors or the networks want."

Prescott admitted that until now their product has fallen somewhat short of "War and Peace." But not because they haven't tried: "We've been thrown out on our ears whenever we tried to sell the idea of classics done in cartoon form. Studios and networks wouldn't even listen to us."

Prescott and Scheimer are youngish men of great determination. A third partner, Hal Sutherland, is another driving force in the company.

"When Warner Bros. came under new management," Scheimer said, "they agreed to go along with us. We are gambling on the longevity of the popularity of these shows. We're putting all our assets into them."

In the beginning, both men agreed, their desire to improve children's television was altruistic. Now they believe the project is realistic and profitable.

"WE SET OUR minds to it because you can go crazy doing Saturday morning stuff," Scheimer said.

"For years people have bastardized the classics for money," Prescott said. "You can't squeeze 'Treasure Island' into a 30-minute show. We're taking an hour and a half for each one."

"And the cost will be between 1/2 million and $1 million per picture."

"Oliver Twist" is due for release in theaters next summer. Others will follow at the rate of two or three a year.

"We're geared for mass production," Scheimer went on. "Our films won't be fully animated and we'll be introducing animal characters into the films. It adds a touch of fantasy."

"Fantasy is fun. You can't cut out a kid's imagination just because there's action and perhaps a little violence involved."

Prescott picked up: "We are young enough to set standards we believe we can see accomplished in the future. We're also bright enough to see the handwriting on the wall."

"Parents and organizations are objecting to the level of children's programming. It's not too late for us to change it."

Isaac Hayes, partners sponsor housing project

ST. CROIX, Virgin Islands (AP) — Singer-composer Isaac Hayes has announced that he and a group of black businessmen have undertaken the sponsorship of a $100-million housing project for low-income families in the United States.

It is considered the largest and most ambitious project of its kind to be initiated entirely by black financial interests. It will be garden apartments in various parts of the country, aimed at housing more than 20,000 persons within the next five years. Specific cities have not been announced but Hayes says he wants most of them to be in the South.

12 mile limit OK, U.S. fishermen say

10 minesweepers to be turned over to Mexico; use aimed at poachers

Ten surplus U. S. minesweepers this week will be turned over to Mexico which indicated the steel-hulled craft will be used to stop poachers from fishing for tuna and shrimp within Mexico's 12-mile limit.

While the American Tunaboat Association showed little concern over Mexico acquiring the mothballed minesweepers, the transaction did prompt a reaction from John J. Royal, executive secretary-treasurer of the San Pedro-based Fisherman's Union, Local 33.

"IF MEXICO uses the boats to protect their sovereign rights within the 12-mile limit, that's OK. But if Mexico tries to claim rights out to 200 miles as does Peru, Ecuador and Brazil, then we are headed for trouble," Royal said.

Royal, a member of a tuna fishing advisory group to the U. S. State Department, is to meet with Mexican officials in Mexico City later this month to discuss Mexico's recently enacted fishing laws. The law will allow foreign fishing boats to fish within the 12-mile limit providing half the boat's crew are Mexican nationals and that the owner of the boat pay for a short-term license.

The planned two-day meeting will be the third between U.S. and Mexican officials. The tuna industry has advised the State Department "It can't live with Mexico's new law."

Royal theorized the minesweepers will be used to enforce Mexico's new fishing laws.

At present, Mexico claims jurisdiction of the sea out to nine miles. But when the current fishing treaty between Mexico and the U.S. expires Dec. 31 it is expected Mexico will claim jurisdiction out to the 12-mile limit.

August Felando, general manager of the American Tunaboat Association, said only 14,000 tons of the 180,000 tons of tuna caught by U. S. boats last year were taken within 12 miles of the Mexican coast.

He noted that the last time an American tuna boat was seized for fishing inside Mexican waters was in 1970.

The 10 World War II minesweepers of the Auk class are to be turned over to the Mexicans during a ceremony Wednesday at the San Diego Naval Station. About 400 Mexicans are to be trained by Americans to operate the minesweepers.

THE SPECIFIC sum involved in the sale of the

JOHN J. ROYAL
New Mexico Laws at Issue

215-foot warships has not been revealed other than "it was a friendly price." Negotiations are reported under way for Mexico to acquire 20 other minesweepers. Purchase of the 10 minesweepers is the latest acquisition by Mexico which has steadily been upgrading its Navy.

In June 1971, Mexico acquired two World War II destroyers of the Fletcher class and six destroyer escorts. One of the latter went aground in a fog off Ensenada and was lost.

In September 1971 the Mexican Navy purchased two U.S. 335-foot tank landing ships for conversion to disaster relief work on both coasts, in addition to two floating dry docks plus some other smaller vessels.

$3.5-million five-man sub reported sold for $100,000

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

The five-man submarine, Beaver Mark IV, built by North American Rockwell and launched in Long Beach in 1968 at a cost of $3.5 million has been reported sold for $100,000 to a New York firm, by Undersea Technology, one of the country's leading oceanographic trade publications.

The magazine reported the sale price was "rumored" to be $100,000 but noted that Andre Galerne, president of International Underwater Contractors, was restrained from disclosing the sale price in the agreement with NAR.

The New York company employs 30 to 40 divers and is currently engaged in offshore oil projects in the Persian Gulf and off Karachi, Pakistan.

The deep-diving workboat was christened by Mrs. Nancy Reagan, who had to take several swats with the traditional bottle of champagne when the undersea craft was christened Sept. 26, 1968 at the former Navy Landing.

The shift in ownership of the Beaver Mark IV recalls memories of a plot conceived by the two pilots of the minisub during the launching. The craft was launched from a barge into the Navy Landing's sheltered waters and proceeded under its own power to a nearby floating dock. The pilots planned to open the conning tower hatch, and as TV cameras zoomed in while 300 invited guests watched, dump a bucket of water overboard.

But when company executives learned of the plan, they torpedoed the gag.

THE BACK-TO-BACK ports of Long Beach and Los Angeles, usually at odds in their competition for port business, have shown some togetherness in coming out against the same thing.

The Long Beach Board of Harbor Commissioners this week followed the lead of their counterparts on the Los Angeles Commission in denouncing Proposition 20, the California Coastal Zone Conservation Initiative, appearing on the November ballot.

THE PROPELLER CLUB will resume meetings Sept. 27 aboard the SS Princess Louise Floating Restaurant with Capt. George F. Thometz Jr., Chief, Operations Division, 11th Coast Guard District, discussing the new Ports and Waterways Safety Act of 1972.

He said he would also "touch on" traffic control systems, changes in Coast Guard methods in dealing with hazardous cargoes, pollution controls, and sewage discharge facilities.

Nowland C. Hong, assistant city attorney serving as legal counsel to the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners, said the initiative "has the potential of paralyzing improvement of the Port of Los Angeles."

Classes in boat handling offered

Free fall classes in small boat handling offered by the Long Beach unit of the United States Power Squadrons will open at two city locations starting this week.

Monday at 7 p.m. the first of twice weekly classes will be held in the cafeteria of Hill Junior High School, 1100 Iroquois Ave. The class also will meet Thursday evenings during the 13 session course.

The same course material will be offered Wednesday only at 7 p.m. at Millikan High School cafeteria, 2800 Snowden Ave.

Course material to be covered includes handling of boats under normal and adverse conditions, sea-familiarization, and required running lights and other mandatory equipment. Other subjects to be discussed are boat trailering, river boating, mariner's compass and piloting.

"The instruction is oriented to outboard, inboard as well as sail," Lt. John Cady, squadron education officer, said.

The Long Beach unit also takes students on cruise aboard a squadron member's boat.

"It is during this cruise that the student gets to put to practical use the knowledge gained in the classroom," said Cady.

Certificates are awarded to those students taking and passing a final examination. Passing of the examination is a prerequisite for membership in the 600-member Long Beach unit, however there is no obligation to join the squadron, according to Cady.

The squadron offers other free boating classes for members including Seamanship, Advanced Piloting, Celestial Navigation, Sailing, Engine Maintenance, Marine Electronics, and Weather.

The basic boating class is open to any resident, men and women of teenage or older living in Los Angeles and Orange counties.

Several other Southland cities offer the basic course, including Lynwood which conducts its free class at John M. Simms Park in Bellflower starting Monday.

Information regarding classes held throughout Southern California can be obtained by dialing the toll free number, 800-213-6000.

Orange County reviews liquor ban on strands

Orange County should end its ban of liquor at its beaches and parks, and at some other publicly-owned facilities such as golf courses and marinas, the county's Board of Supervisors will be told.

The amendment will be suggested by the Orange County Harbor, Parks and Beaches Commission, where a 5-to-1 vote decided to place the issue before the supervisors.

The commission conceded that liquor cannot be sold or consumed in some public parks because of deed restrictions, but claimed that the prohibition against liquor in the county harbors and golf courses is a detriment to business operations.

Supervisors are known to be divided on the no-liquor issue and the harbor commission recommendation is expected to generate spirited discussion.

TAKES HIS REVENGE

CAMBRIDGE, England (UPI) — Reginald Jakes drove his new sedan to the police station, took careful aim and rammed the car into the building's steel-plated front doors.

Then he reversed the car and did it again, again, and again.

Before police arrested him, Jakes, 38, told them he did it for revenge. He said police had thrown him out of a pub several days earlier after he smashed some whisky bottles.

"My 14-day hospital bill alone came to $1636.25."

Los Angeles law student, Ron Javor, "would have been sunk" without Blue Cross. His explanation is typical of thousands.

Q: Exactly how much did Blue Cross cover?

A: "The hospital bill came to $1636.25. They paid $1300.42 of it. My doctor bills were $1703.00. They paid $1162.40. It was spelled out in my policy."

Q: Did the cost of care surprise you?

A: "Not really. I'd heard it was a lot. But you don't want to think about it. Then it happens. Then it really hits you."

Q: Do you feel young people need health plans?

A: "Obviously I do now. I was never sick before. For a while my doctor wasn't positive what the trouble was. I sure hadn't saved any money for an operation. Without Blue Cross, I would have had to drop out of law school for sure."

Q: How'd you come to have Blue Cross?

A: "My folks always had it. I never really thought about it. But they encouraged me to take it."

They enjoy facilities which are beyond the reach of many other home owners. There are separate men's and women's sauna baths and gymnasiums, a therapeutic pool and a heated swimming pool.

There is a large recreation area with game rooms and a kitchen which may be used for large groups or converted into smaller rooms for meetings and other activities. Outside is a big patio area with a cabana and barbecue facilities.

THE condominium complex, located at 12300 Montecito Road, has two and three bedrooms on one, two and three-story plans. Each unit has its own balcony or patio for traditional Southern California indoor-outdoor living.

Prices range from $38,950 with conventional, FHA

Presley's popular Plan 102 is being offered at Diamond Bar, available in several different variations

Parkside Estates, located in the country-like atmosphere of Diamond Bar, is easily accessible from the Pomona and Orange freeways. It is a 35-minute drive to Los Angeles civic center, 25 minutes to either Ontario Motor Speedway or Disneyland and 10 minutes to Frank Bonelli Regional Park where facilities are available for swimming, fishing, picnicking, camping and sailing.

Presley Development Company, listed on the American Stock Exchange, currently has more than 20 residential communities under development in Southern and Northern California, Arizona, New Mexico, Illinois, Maryland and Virginia.

Gas in sands

ELIZABETH, N.J. (UPI) — National Exploration Co. said it has found natural gas in the Wilcox sands in the McGaskill Field in Karnes County, Texas.

Five wells flowed at a combined total of 98 million cubic feet a day.

Already 47 per cent of Americans believe the quality of new housing is worse than a decade ago, according to a 1971 Louis Harris poll.

A government investigation last year of 672 new houses found 28 per cent with poor workmanship or inadequate materials. The defects were serious enough in 10 per cent of the cases to affect "the safety, health or liveability of these properties" built under federal subsidy programs.

A cross-section of city building inspectors interviewed by The Associated Press said the level of housing quality has declined in many respects.

Real boom in housing; also in consumer woes

By G. C. THELEN JR.
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like that of countless other angry homebuyers, Russell L. Merrifield's "invasion of a lifetime" has become a nightmare.

The roof of Merrifield's new house in Fairbanks, Alaska, leaks. The wind whistle through ill-fitting doors and windows. The floors, separated from their underplannings, squeak.

Mrs. Laddie Shaw of Idaho Falls, Idaho, shares Merrifield's frustration with new houses.

Two days after she and her husband moved in, their basement flooded with sewage. The living room sank 1 1/2 inches; a warped joist. The family waited a year for promised rain gutters, carpets and attic insulation.

In Delaware, Ohio, the basement floor and walls of Lewis A. Zimmerman's new $34,000 house cracked after six months. A new roof is needed: the original is blowing off shingle by shingle.

The builder promised corrections, Zimmerman said, "but as yet these corrections have not been made."

Merrifield, the Shaws, Zimmerman and hundreds of thousands of other home seekers have produced — and some fallen victim to — an unprecedented boom in housing construction, now running at more than two million units a year.

THIS BOOM, many specialists say, makes for a seller's market, strains the supply of skilled workers and supervisors and encourages corner-cutting and shoddy workmanship.

Homebuyers are showering government agencies and consumer organizations with complaints about late delivery of promised houses; about defects in materials and workmanship; about the reluctance or slowness of some contractors to set things right.

Temper frayed, some owners have hoisted protest signs to embarrass builders into corrective action.

Others go to court. Judges in 16 states have ruled recently that all new houses are covered by an implied, if not formal warranty of quality.

Spurred by homeowner complaints, Congress and many state and local governments are weighing legislation that would extend and fill some loopholes in existing, one-year warranties that now cover at least half of all new houses.

Homebuilders acknowledge the rising tide of buyer protests which they blame on the building boom's strains and on growing consumer activism in all fields.

Eugene A. Gullidge, the federal housing commissioner, described workmanship as a foreordained casualty of the boom. But many components of new housing are better than ever, he said, mentioning concrete, air conditioning and electrical systems.

WHILE defending the over-all quality of their product, homebuilder organizations are moving to create arbitration committees for settlement of consumer complaints.

Still, the experience of too many buyers of new houses "can only be called a nightmare of epic proportions," said Virginia H. Knauer, consumer adviser to President Nixon.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader predicts that buyer nightmares will make housing the No. 1 consumer issue of this decade, comparable to auto safety in the 1960s.

SPACIOUS KITCHENS... popular at La Jolla Townhomes, Garden Grove

La Jolla homes draw quick sales

Early signs indicate La Jolla Townhomes in Garden Grove will be another "success story" just like Montecito Townhomes, which the new project was patterned after by Showcase Homes, developer of both communities.

Montecito Townhomes in Garden Grove sold out all 87 units in 120 days.

The $4 million, 140-home La Jolla project is located on Westminster Boulevard, just west of Brookhurst Street.

Nearly 50 of the new one and two-story, two and three-bedroom townhomes have been purchased prior to and during the grand opening.

The new project, conceived and implemented by William J. Krueger, president of Showcase Homes, features amenities typical of his company.

FEATURES include two and two-and-a-half baths, central hall plans, carpeting throughout, kitchens with all built-ins, one-piece enclosed tubs and showers, private fenced patios, enclosed double garages with service areas.

Construction and exterior features are also of great advantage to buyers and include pre-wired television and telephone jacks, double wall construction, insulated ceilings and walls, common area walkways, garage areas lighted with mercury vapor lighting and a 62-car guest parking area.

Twenty-five exterior elevations are offered in a variety of superbly blended, imaginative facades of old Southwest and modern Mediterranean.

Recreational facilities at La Jolla Townhomes are extensive with a large heated pool, therapy pool, completely equipped clubhouse, gas barbecues, putting green and children's play area.

ALL EXTERIOR maintenance of the grounds and recreational facilities are professionally administered as provided by the homeowner's association.

Conveniently located near schools, shopping areas and parks, La Jolla Townhomes are less than one-half mile south of the Garden Grove Freeway.

Children residing in the community will walk just one block to the local elementary school and junior high school while the high school is just three blocks away. Garden Grove City Park, with its famous "Atlantis" play area, is only four blocks away and two golf courses are less than five miles from the community.

Furnished models are open daily from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Price reduction at Casa Del Amo

New homes in the Casa Del Amo community in Cerritos have now been made available at a $2,000 price reduction.

The 200-home community has been sold out for some time according to Bob Solomon, head of SIK Development Company and builder of the homes.

"But" he said, "we have had a late credit rejection and two situations in which personal considerations have forced buyers to cancel their purchases."

"As a result, we have available two Cabrillo Plan homes and the model of our Cortez plan. All three are being offered at $2,000 under their previous selling price."

The Cabrillo homes, previously priced at $33,750 and now reduced to $31,750, are single-story homes with three bedrooms and two baths. Each also has a kitchen, family room, living room with fireplace, formal dining room and two-car garage.

LUXURY features include an electronic air cleaner, luminous kitchen ceiling, deluxe range with double oven, dishwasher and disposal, dramatic fireplace, fenced rear yard and concrete driveway.

The Cortez model is also a single-story, four-bedroom, two-bath home. It has a living room with fireplace, family room, kitchen and two-car garage.

In addition to the amenities available in the Cabrillo homes, the Cortez is also equipped with air conditioning, patios and landscaping, shag carpeting, draperies, paneling and wallpaper.

Casa Del Amo is centrally located to five major arteries — the Santa Ana, Artesia, San Gabriel, Garden Grove and San Diego Freeways. They provide rapid access to the vast array of recreational, educational, employment and shopping facilities in the Los Angeles-Orange County area.

The office for the special sale of these homes will be in one of them, at 20008 Teresa Way, just west of the corner of Eckelson Street and Bloomfield Avenue, one block north of Del Amo Boulevard in Cerritos.

Mammoth Lakes in UCLA study

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Residents of the Mammoth Lakes area in the High Sierra have several choices open to them for the development of the region — ranging from a virtual standstill in construction to high density development with a greatly increased population.

But whatever choice is selected, the community must move promptly to create guidelines and controls if the development is to be anything but haphazard.

This is the finding of a six-month study undertaken by a group of specialists at UCLA under the sponsorship and funding of the Friends of Mammoth, a group of citizens concerned with the area's environment.

The study, released this week, cited rapidly increasing population — both seasonal and permanent — and "overzoning" of the unincorporated Mono County community as being the major factors affecting the once wilderness area.

The community has a resident population of some 2,000, but another 14,000 persons crowd into it on busy ski weekends, most from the Los Angeles area.

Under the existing zoning regulations, the study said, the weekend population could climb to some 82,000 — providing the area with a density not much different from that of New York City.

THE STUDY group concluded that "regardless of which future the community finds most desirable, the community must move rapidly to organize itself if it wants to achieve meaningful local control."

The report said a number of options are open, ranging from the creation of a Mammoth Advisory Committee to deal with planning matters to incorporation of Mammoth Lakes so that zoning could be more handily determined.

The study, entitled "Facing the Future: Five Alternatives for Mammoth Lakes," said, "The effect of overzoning on a community such as Mammoth Lakes is that it means there is no truly effective land use control."

"The haphazard land use patterns existing today in Mammoth can, in part, be attributed to this."

ONE CRUCIAL factor in the development of the area the study concluded, is whether the Mineral King recreation area planned by Disney Productions Inc. is completed.

The Disney project, or a similar one on the other side of the Sierra, about 120 miles to the south of Mammoth, could attract enough weekenders so that the population of Mammoth Lakes could remain more or less stable, the study said. If the Mineral King project fails to develop, housing needs could grow to accommodate another 35,000 persons.

The Mineral King project had been stalled by a suit filed against the U.S. Forest Service by the Sierra Club, but the club lost the case on appeal and the Supreme Court refused to overturn that decision. The project is now waiting completion of a federal "environmental impact" study. Just when it might be completed is unknown.

The Mammoth study was completed by UCLA's School of Architecture and Urban Planning and the Environmental Science and Engineering Program.

The Chrysler-Plymouth Spectator will feature a story keyed to the autumn season — Tailgate Picnics — in its premiere edition, out in late September.

The Spectator bows with a cover story on Hawaii that is tied in with an eight-day tour being offered to members of the Chrysler-Plymouth Owners Club. Other stories include consumer advice on roadtesting your new car, a youth feature, a woman's feature, and the 1973 cars.

Other travel stories cover Chesapeake Bay's last oyster sailing fleet and a piece on going north for a winter vacation that is oriented to outdoor sports.

The youth feature is on the ancient art of rubbing — reproducing images by rubbing a pencil across a paper covering a bas-relief surface. Another story asks "Who owns the ocean?"

There is a special section on the outstanding buys available to Club members in sports, recreation and hobby equipment; and another on the new 1973 Chrysler and Plymouth cars, and a look at the classic Chrysler Airstream.

Famed Auto Editor Brock Yates has a special story for the "Spectator" on "How to Radiotest the New Car You Buy."

The Chrysler-Plymouth Spectator, one of Chrysler Corporation's new Owner Communications magazines, is a 32-page, four-color publication in the news magazine format and will boast a circulation of approximately 1,000,000.

MOTORHOME CENTERS, the "largest motor home complex in the U.S.," according to Motor Home Centers President Bob Bozzani, has just opened in the City of Industry.

Located just south of the junction of the Pomona and 605 freeways, MotorHome Centers will be unique in recreational vehicle operations. The motor homes will be displayed in naturally-landscaped, parklike surroundings. Each a vehicle will appear in its own setting and miniature garden spots will be scattered in a seemingly-random pattern around the five-acre site.

MotorHome Centers will display a big array of motor homes with the Winnebago, leader in motor home sales, as the main attraction.

Bozzani indicates that not only will a prospective motor home buyer be able to view a wide line of vehicles, but the current home owner will be able to get complete servicing of his vehicle, or browse through an extensive selection of motor home accessories.

Most motor home dealers, says Bozzani, are merely sales lots, and when the new motor home owner looks for service, he finds he must go elsewhere. At the new MotorHome Center the motor home owner will be able to get full factory-trained servicing from the dealer.

Company officials noted that the present location will be only the first of a chain of such full-service motor home facilities that the MotorHome Centers management team intends to open throughout the West.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM

Great slow-down device: pay balance due on bill

By DON G. CAMPBELL.
You were probably under the impression that the greatest "slow-down" device in the world is the reminder to a 10-year-old that he has to go to bed as soon as his home work is completed. If it doesn't stop his mental processes dead in their tracks, it at least slows them down to a plodding walk.

Here's another great "slow-down" device: pay the balance due on a bill outstanding!

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

After reading your article in our Sunday paper, my husband and I wish you would answer a question.

Last October, we paid a $100 deposit, and nine days later, paid the balance of $4,100 for a lot in a nearby mountain resort area. At that time we were told to wait about four weeks for the deed. Six weeks later we checked at the court house, but no deed was registered. Later that day we were told to wait about two weeks. Early in February I wrote to the land company and we received a letter stating that because of vacations there was no office routine until now. Is it routine for a large corporation to be five months late with their office work? Especially when they wanted their money within nine days? Shall we go to a lawyer about getting our deed to the parcel of land? My husband will retire this month and we are worried about the money paid and the fact that we still have no deed. Mrs. E.L. (Allentown, Pa.)

ANSWER: Somebody is being awfully cute with you, and I don't blame you for your frustration. No, it certainly is NOT routine for a corporation — big, small or in-between — to be five months late with its paperwork. I would suggest that you write to the land company, via registered mail, and tell them that you consider this five month delay a definite breach in the contract between the two of you and that you expect delivery of either the deed or your $5,000 refund within five days of receipt of the letter.

If you haven't flushed any action out of them at the end of five days then I would turn the matter over to a good lawyer. There's no excuse for this sort of nonsense.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I have been a widow for some time. My home is paid for, but it has not been taken off the records at city hall. Does this make any difference? Mrs. A. Mc. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: As long as you are holding title to the property, free and clear, it shouldn't make any practical difference, but it's always a good idea to keep the records on such matters straight. It should be a simple matter of presenting proof of ownership and having this duly recorded. I suggest that you take care of it as soon as possible.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I have a question I would like to ask. Thirty years ago I bought a piece of ground for taxes. The county gave me a deed for it. There is a street that goes through it and the street, and all, is enclosed by a fence and was when I got it. What I want to know is: do I own this street as my ground is on both sides of it? In other words, the town abandoned it and, if I DO own it, won't the county have to give me a deed for it? Mr. H.M.H. (Indianola, Ia.)

ANSWER: That's a whale of a good question. An even better one is: how come it took you 30 years to get curious about this?

Legally, no one can actually "own" a public thoroughfare so we have to assume that the county abandoned it a long time ago and that you are now the proud owner of a piece of fenced roadway that doesn't go anywhere. I suggest that you examine the county's legal description of the property and find out just what it is that you own.

ANOTHER S.I.R. DEVELOPMENT IN VENTURE WITH U.S. FINANCIAL

Real boom in housing; also in consumer woes

especially workmanship, but risen in plumbing, heating and electrical components.

JOHN HEYN, president of the private National Home Inspection Service, said 10 per cent of the houses his company examines have such major structural deficiencies as faulty floor or roof supports, uneven masonry and mislaid main beams.

Fully 50 per cent of the houses, Heyn said, have significant defects, such as damp basements, improperly connected water pipes and missing insulation.

Heyn listed these areas when he said construction standards have dropped in many instances during the last decade: minimum-weight shingles rather than long-lasting slate roofs; lighter-weight attic rafters; no rain gutters; 24-inch rather than 16-inch spacing between floor joists making for "springy floors and lightweight houses;" no interlocking weatherstripping around windows and doors; little ceramic tile in bathrooms; no finished flooring under carpeting only rough plywood.

YET MANY make the case that housing quality has improved, including 22 per cent in the Harris poll who called today's homes superior to those 10 years ago.

The National Association of Homebuilders says there has been definite improvement in four areas of housing quality: community design, layout and room configuration, styling and materials.

These improvements, the homebuilders say, override any deficiencies in finish workmanship and service, producing an improved over-all product.

Improved quality or not, some homeowners complain that it is increasingly difficult to get builders to make repairs on new houses.

The national homebuilders organization said that while many repair complaints may be justified, certain defects are normal and not the responsibility of the builder to repair. The association mentioned foundation settling producing hairline wall cracks, deflection of floors and shrinkage of lumber.

Herbert Aman, a Washington-area builder, said many buyers of his houses are correct in their complaints about repair delays.

"We've had so much production, we have not had enough people," he said. "If you slow your job down to finish everything 100 per cent, your funds run out."

HOW GOOD, are the one-year warranties on all F.I.A. and V.A.-insured new houses and on many conventionally financed homes?

"Only as good as the builder wants it to be," said John Heyn of the home-inspection service.

Heyn said many builders delay repairs beyond the one-year expiration date. And the fine print in some warranties limits repairs to health and safety hazards only, he said.

Marion Benfield, a law professor at the University of Illinois, described most warranties as "limited and full of loopholes. This has been one of the areas of the law obviously out of step with the times and terribly weighted toward the seller."

The model warranty suggested by the homebuilders association, for example, excludes coverage of any work done for the builder by a "subcontractor or other person or firm."

To enforce warranties, about 40 of the homebuilders' 485 local associations bind participating builders to compulsory arbitration of consumer grievances. Another 140 local associations have grievance procedures that may or may not require compulsory arbitration.

HOW SHOULD the prospective buyer of a new home protect himself?

Step one, say the homebuilders and consumer advocates, is to investigate the builder's quality, product and service.

This is best done by questioning other families in the development, especially about the adequacy of heating-air condition systems. Lending institutions might provide additional guidance, the specialists say.

Step two, say the consumer specialists, is independent inspection of a house and legal advice before any papers are signed. A variation would be an amendment to the contract, making sale and deposit contingent on a satisfactory inspection paid for by the buyer.

Fairfax Leary III, a former Nader associate, recommends that consumers engage a builder or architect friend or hire a building inspection service.

The inspection services, for a fee averaging $65, check the roofing, general exterior, basement, electric, heating and air conditioning, plumbing, attic, general interior and kitchen.

IF POSSIBLE, say the consumer advocates, get the builder's written agreement that all identified and enumerated defects will be repaired before final settlement of the house. In this way, the warranty is tightened.

"Once a consumer takes possession of a deed, he is pretty much at the mercy of the contractor, unless he protects himself at contract signing," said Benfield.

If problems develop after settlement of deed, the homeowner should deal first with the builder, presenting a written list of desired repairs.

If the corrections are not made within 30 days or not made to his satisfaction, the owner can appeal to the local homebuilders association. The location of this association is best found through the local building inspector's office, says the national homebuilders association.

For owners of VA or F.I.A.-insured houses, local offices of the two government agencies are other points to lodge protests.

A final warning from Leary: "Housing is one of the last bastions of caveat emptor—meaning buyer beware."

Settles suit

DALLAS (UPI)— General Portland Cement, Inc., has settled its litigation with Hillsborough County over pollution control at its Tampa mill. The company has agreed to meet the county's demands over the next 16 months.

CARMENITA VILLAGE townhouse condominiums in Cerritos offer air conditioning, drapes, carpeting and numerous other extras in the full price, starting from $19,700. Models, open daily from 11 a.m., are on Carmenita Road midway between Artesia and Santa Ana freeways.

Dripping faucet is a costly nuisance

Drip, Drip, Drip. That sound not only means the loss of sleep at night, but also the needless waste of a valuable natural resource — water.

A faucet that leaks at the rate of 90 drops per minute wastes approximately 310 gallons of water a month.

If the hot water faucet leaks, the continuous dripping places an unnecessary drain on the water heater and the natural gas used to heat it, according to a Southern California Gas Co. spokesman.

For example, he said that a leaking faucet consumes 775 extra cubic feet of gas per month.

This means that two natural resources — gas and water — are being carelessly diminished, he said.

Other methods of conserving water, and the natural gas required to heat it, are suggested by the gas company. They are:

To use your dishwasher for full loads only and when washing dishes by hand, to use a dishpan or stopper on the drain so you won't have to run your hot water continuously.

"Remember," he said, "if everyone does his small part, a greater amount of this country's natural resources will be saved and, as an extra bonus, your gas and water bills will be lower."

CF in growth

CHICAGO (UPI) — CF Industries, Inc., the fertilizer producer, said it will spend $65 million on expansion of its plants at Donaldsonville, La., and Plant City, Fla. A 1,000-ton a day urea unit will be built at Donaldsonville and a 250,000-ton a year phosphate unit at Plant City.

Fisherman's Village sold

Sale of Fisherman's Village, a Cape Cod Style shopping-recreational complex in Marina del Rey, to Real Property Management, Inc. of Beverly Hills, has been announced by Bryant L. Morris and Stan Berman of Marina del Rey Enterprises. The latter firm has been owner-operator of the complex. Morris and Berman are president and general manager respectively of the company.

The five-acre marina development was sold for approximately $2 million. The complex is located at 13727 Fiji Way on the marina waterfront. The center has 38 specialty shops and three restaurants plus extensive excursion, fishing and rental boating activities.

Under the direction of Morris and Berman the colorful tourist center has been developed into one of the most popular and successful operations of its kind in the world. The shopping-recreational complex was opened three years ago and has been fully leased since that time.

Marina del Rey Enterprises has additional developments of a similar type in various stages of planning. The firm is negotiating for sites in San Francisco, San Diego, San Fernando Valley and Mississippi.

EL SEGUNDO (UPI) — North American Rockwell Corp. has obtained $66.4 million in new military contracts, including a $83.7 million Air Force order for Minuteman III missile guidance systems.

Rancho Consultants agent for Glen Oak

Rancho Consultants, Newport Beach, has been named exclusive sales agent for Glen Oak Hills, a new 1,316-acre project under development in the eastern portion of the 95,000-acre Rancho California complex.

Announcement was made by Roger Hall, vice president and general manager of the Kaiser-Aetna property.

Rancho Consultants, which is headquartered in Newport Beach, has opened sales offices in the Plaza Shopping Center at Rancho California. The firm is headed by Dan L. Stephenson, president, and Tom A. Leevers, vice president.

Stephenson, formerly with Coldwell-Banker, formed Rancho Consultants early last year and it became a partnership with Leevers a short time later. Leevers is also an alumnus of Coldwell-Banker.

LOCATED in picturesque rolling terrain on Rancho California, Glen Oak Hills is being planned as a gate-guarded residential-agricultural community with parcel sizes ranging from 2½ to 10 acres.

Stephenson said the Glen Oak Hills development, which will have its grand opening this fall, features some of the most scenic views of any property in the present Rancho California development.

Rancho California is situated halfway between Los Angeles and San Diego, just north of the Riverside-San Diego County line. It features a wide variety of housing, ranch land, equestrian facilities and recreational opportunities.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Western Electric Co. has won a $205.8 million addition to its Army contract for work on the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system.

DOTY was formerly a partner in Abe Doty Realtors and chief executive officer of Vector Equities Company, Oakland, a firm specializing in real estate investment trusts, syndication and venture capital investments.

Prior to that, he was regional director in the northern California area for Carlsberg Financial Corporation. Doty has also been active in the construction and financing of more than 200 single family residences in Alameda County, California.

Los Angeles-based Sunrise Corporation is currently developing the exclusive Benedict Hills residential community in Beverly Hills and four condominium projects in Palm Springs.

ON BOARD

Edward Broida, co-founder and partner of R & B Development Company, has been elected to board of trustees of Larwin Realty & Mortgage Trust.

New for the home

"Neardark" electronic garage light is turned on automatically by auto headlights. The solid-state light fixtures feature a three-phase electronic system to provide automatic night lighting of garage, carport or shed. A photo-electric sensor located at headlight level on garage wall is connected by 4 feet of low voltage wire to the light unit. Headlights activate the fixture. An additional sensor prevents daylight from turning it on. The third phase of the system automatically turns the light off in a predetermined time. (LaVan Electronics, 132 Signal Hill Road, Wilton, Conn. 06897).

Housing slower

Housing starts in California were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 226,000 in June, the second lowest rate during a boom year for construction.

In compiling the latest housing figures, Bank of America economists noted that the slower pace, especially in multiple unit construction, is expected to continue in coming months.

The June rate compares to the year's low of 217,000 in April and to the year's high of 335,000 in February.

Actual housing starts for the first six months of 1972 are almost identical for the same period last year — 133,907 and 133,235.

Rex L. Hodges Realty Celebrates 43rd Year of Real Estates Service

Rex L. Hodges Realty, one of Southern California's fastest growing multi-office firms is celebrating its 43rd year of serving Southern California home owner Real Estate Needs. The year was 1929 and the nation was experiencing a financial turmoil when Rex L. Hodges opened his first Real Estate office in Long Beach.

Most businesses were closing and this didn't seem the proper time to start a new venture, but then Rex Hodges was a level of Business standards and sound financial planning. The Rex L. Hodges Realty Company expanded and flourished.

This solid foundation was further enhanced when Robert C. Westmyer assumed the Presidency, bringing expertise from a state association level as the Executive Educational Director of the California Real Estate Association. Real Estate has always been a part of Westmyer's life. "We truly believe in homeownership" said Westmyer. Buyers and sellers of real property truly need the assistance of a qualified company to provide the guidance and knowledge of property values to make an intelligent decision. Real Estate is today's best means of acquiring a hedge against inflation, besides providing families with a home and shelter.

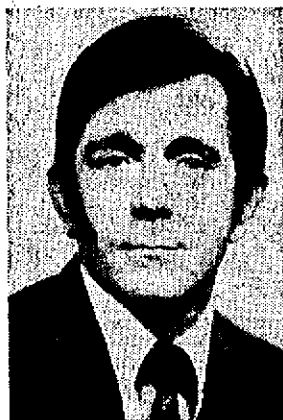

Rex L. Hodges serves 45 communities employing over 200 Real Estate Salesmen who have Real Estate as a career. We are constantly training and re-training. In today's fast-paced world you have to provide the customer with a one-stop service. Today the customer demands many more services than here-to-fore provided by small companies. Rex L. Hodges pioneered the 'home trade-in program' in use today. Payment free equity loans are also an exclusive of Rex L. Hodges Realty. And it all started way back in 1929.

Company Announces Record Sales Promotional Program

As an adjunct to their expansion program, Rex L. Hodges Realty has announced a comprehensive promotional program unique in local real estate history. Newspapers, radio, magazines, merchandising aids, and a publicity/public relations campaign will be used in a multi-pronged effort designed to increase the Hodges sales volume still higher than the current $7 million a month.

Newspaper coverage of Southern California will be supplemented by full page magazine advertisements in Time, Newsweek, U.S. News, and Sports Illustrated. Ads will stress Hodges size and leadership in serving real estate buyers and sellers for 43 years. The radio program on KIIS, KFOX and KEZY will broadcast news of Hodges activities on several major radio stations. Merchandising aids will include a new series of folders and displays for use by Hodges sales people, as well as easel mounted proofs of the magazine and newspaper ads. A free booklet titled, "Secrets of Savings Money When Buying or Selling a Home" will be offered on radio and will also be distributed to the public at all of the Hodges offices in Los Angeles and Orange Counties. A nationally - recognized marketing / advertising / public relations firm will prepare all of the materials to be used. They will also inform the press daily of news developments of all Hodges locations.

Bernie Jones, V.P.
General Manager

Real Estate Is Exciting Rex L. Hodges Realty

"There are no limitations, no clocks to punch when you choose Real estate as your profession," according to Bernie Jones, Vice President - General Manager of Rex L. Hodges Realty. Stop in any Rex L. Hodges Realty office and pick up a copy of "Welcome to Our World" a graphic picture of what its really like to sell real estate with a professional, firm where the door is open for you. The hours are a little longer than usual but the rewards are limitless. Our training program gives a new salesman in one month what formerly took 2 or 3 years and a lot of frustration to learn. A man or woman today can compete and not feel lost for lack of experience, Jones said. At Hodges there are no limits. Salesmen have every tool available such as Guaranteed Cash Sales, Home Trade-In Programs, Payment Free Equity Loans and counseling to prevent sales slump, a long time for all salesmen. Anyone who wishes a copy of "Welcome to Our World" can stop by any Rex L. Hodges office or call (213) 435-6381 or (714) 839-5501 and ask for a copy to be mailed to your home.

What Makes Hodges Realty Different?

In addition to Americanism, Mom and Apple Pie, we at Rex L. Hodges adhere to certain principles and practices which we feel add up to creating a company reputation and image beyond compare.

Here are a few of the features that have made us the leader in the field and permitted us to please 90,000 customers since 1929.

Merlin doesn't like to lose

"There's so many things I love to do, I'm sure if it hadn't been football I would have found something else to satisfy my desire to be competitive. I don't like to lose."—Merlin Olsen.

The license plate frames all over the county say Gabriel-Olsen, and Rod Laver serves to Stan Smith on J.P. Stevens Sports Face.

A 30-second spot between quarters of a pro football telecast states an articulate case against pollution of America's natural environment.

A TV crew wants some time, and a service club wants a speech. Authors, reporters and pedestrian admirers are accommodated in stride.

This is how it is being the brother of Phil Olsen, the famous defensive right tackle of the Los Angeles Rams. After waiting 10 years in the pros, Merlin finally got a chance to play alongside his kin.

"We never thought about it much because we never thought it would be possible," smiles Merlin.

"But our parents are really pleased about it. It eliminates all the confusion about which game's going to be on TV and who they're going to cheer for."

MERLIN JAY OLSEN —car salesman, tennis court manufacturer, family man, concerned citizen, football player. How can one man cope with it all?

"I can't live without being active," he says. "If it hadn't been football it would have been something else. I'll be sorry to leave the game eventually, but I'll find other things to take its place."

"It's not going to be an easy thing to do but I've accepted the fact for a long time that I couldn't play football all my life, so I tried to prepare myself to do other things."

Two years ago Olsen completed work on a master's degree in economics, following a bachelor's in finance. Clearly, his name will never be found on the welfare rolls.

A pro football's Hall of Fame, probably. He has been a unanimous all-pro in five of his 10 seasons and has always been selected to play in the Pro Bowl, although an injury two years ago caused him to send his regrets. He turned 32 Friday. Today, against New Orleans in the Coliseum, he will be starting his 129th consecutive game at defensive left tackle, his familiar No. 74 surviving as the final vestige of the Fearsome Foursome.

Last week he received an honor that meant more to him than most of the others. Coach Tommy Prothro appointing him to be one of the Rams' three captains. Astonishingly, Merlin Olsen had never been a football captain.

"I've always felt the responsibility of leadership," he says, "but I've never had the official responsibility until this year. I like that. It gives me another challenge, something to keep me occupied. I like it."

OLSEN HAS LOST none of his drive nor talent over the years. The money is nice, but the pride is a larger factor.

"The key ingredient," he says. "Without it you can't win. I enjoy taking the best somebody has to offer and trying to be a little bit better."

Offensive lineman John Williams, formerly with Baltimore but now a Ram teammate, talks about his encounters with Merlin:

"I punch a lot, and he said I was holding him. Maybe I was. But I was trying to do a job, just trying to stop him anyway I could. When I played him I played hard, because he's the best."

"We called him 'Merlin the Magician' because he's got all the moves. He doesn't quit. You hit some other guys once on a play and they're all through. Not Merlin."

He sees some similar qualities in his brother, Phil, who is 7½ years younger in his second season as a pro.

"Basically, we're pretty much the same type of people. We weren't terribly close at a younger age because he was too young to be with me. But as he got older — by the time I was in college, say — he was getting old enough to appreciate what was happening. As I got into pro ball we got much closer. He had things he wanted to ask me. Of course, we're very close now."

MERLIN AND PHIL both attended Utah State in their hometown of Logan, Utah.

"Phil and I had a lot of opportunities to go elsewhere," Merlin says. "At one time I had decided I wanted to go away to school, but I worked away from home that summer and was by myself so much that I got lonesome. So rather than go off to school where I didn't know anyone, I decided to stay home where I had friends."

A younger brother, Orem, is now playing at Brigham Young down at Provo, the southernmost city in that line of strongly Mormon communities. There were nine children in the family, of whom Merlin is the second eldest, conceding seniority only to one of his five sisters.

He and Phil are 6-5 and between 285 and 270 and Orem also is good size.

It was an outdoor family, with all the advantages of the West just outside the house.

"My dad's a great outdoors man," Merlin says. "He loved to get out, and he took us with him — hunting, fishing, skiing, water skiing, and mountain climbing. Those are things I enjoyed from a very early age."

"He was a fine athlete in his own right, although he wasn't a football player. He was a track man — not very big but very quick on his feet."

MERLIN LIVES in San Marino with his wife Susan and two daughters, Kelly Lynn, 7, and Jill, 5. With his business interests and football occupying much of his time, he must screen requests for personal appearances.

"Sometimes, if there's enough money involved, I'll go out of my way — but I probably do as many things for nothing as I do for money. It gets to the point where you say, either I'll do it for nothing or give me enough money to make it worth my while."

"If it's a small amount of money I'd just as soon not do it, but if it's a good cause I'll do it for nothing."

One offer he has repeatedly refused is to write a book about himself.

"I've had a lot of people want to do one and, in fact, I thought about doing one this year."

"But I don't want to write just a sports book, I want to make it worthwhile. I've felt up to now that to write it I'd hurt a lot of people, and I don't want to do that."

So the book probably will wait until Merlin Olsen retires, and that could be awhile.

Split end John Carroll, who also kicked seven extra points, scored the first touchdown on a 44-yard pass from senior quarterback Dave Robertson.

Sophomore halfback Grant Burget punched over from the one, halfback Joe Willie completed a 12-yard scoring pitchout and freshman halfback Joe Washington halted over from the one yard line.

Huskers recover, bury Texas A&M

LINCOLN, (UPI) — The Nebraska Cornhuskers, their 32-game unbeaten string snapped a week earlier, got back to winning in convincing fashion Saturday with a 37-7 victory over Texas A&M.

Playing before a record crowd of 76,042 in the recently expanded Memorial Stadium, the Huskers gave strong indications almost from the start that they were out to make amends for a 20-17 loss to UCLA last week.

Sophomore quarterback Dave Humm, a left-handed standout from Las Vegas, Nev., expertly guided Nebraska to its first four touchdowns before turning the offense over to his backup, Steve Runty.

Runty later contributed a 12-yard scoring pass to Rich Babe, which stretched the Nebraska margin to 37-0 early in the fourth quarter.

Humm scored the first two touchdowns on one-ler smashes into the line during the first quarter and engineered a 13-play, 95-yard drive late in the second to pad the margin to 21-0.

After a one-yard plunge by Maury Dankroger upped the tally even more, Humm put the fourth touchdown on the boards with a 9-yard third period pass to Jerry List.

Rich Sanger added another three points early in the fourth quarter with a 54-yard field goal.

The Texas Aggies threatened to score several times, but could muster only one tally, that coming late in the game on a 29-yard pass from Don Dean to Homer May.

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — Iowa State quarterback George Amundson passed for three touchdowns and ran for a fourth Saturday to lead the Cyclones to a 41-0 victory over Colorado State.

Amundson passed for touchdowns of 33 and 11 yards to split end Ike Harris and seven yards to tight end Don Greenwood. The Cyclones quarterback also ran four yards for the first score of the game.

Iowa State also scored on a 17-yard pass intercepttion return in the fourth quarter and an eight-yard run by second-string quarterback Wayne Stanley.

The Cyclones opened the scoring in the second quarter on Amundson's run which capped an 85-yard drive in 15 plays sparked by the running of tailback Jerry Moses.

Ohio St. overcomes stubborn Iowa, 21-0

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Third-ranked Ohio State overcame early mistakes and used a bruising running attack Saturday to whip stubborn Iowa 21-0 in a Big Ten Conference football opener.

Harold Henson, a 6-foot-4, 224-pound sophomore, bowled over from four and one yard lines for touchdowns and his replacement as the Buckeyes' fullback, 216-pound Randy Keith, scored from the one.

The Hawkeyes, 28-point underdogs, gave the conference title favorites trouble in the early moments.

Ohio State lost one fumble, one interception and was forced to punt two other times before uncorking one of its patented ground drives for a 7-0 lead late in the first half.

From then on, the bigger, stronger Buckeyes ground Iowa into submission in the season opener for both teams.

A strong Buckeye goal line stand in the closing minutes blunted the only serious Hawkeye threat.

On a fourth-and-two situation, Ohio State defensive end Tom Marendt threw Iowa quarterback Kyle Skogman on the 13, ending the Iowa drive. Before that, Iowa had moved no closer than the Ohio State 16. The Hawkeyes missed on field goal attempts of 42 and 33 yards by Harry Kukulski.

The Buckeyes also missed one field goal try of 45 yards by Blair Conway late in the opening quarter.

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — Sophomore Dennis Franklin, the first black ever to start at quarterback for Michigan, threw a 21-yard scoring pass to Bo Rather in the second quarter Saturday to give the sluggish, 10th-rated Wolverines a 7-0 win over Northwestern in their Big Ten season opener.

The only score of the Northwestern/Michigan game was set up when junior linebacker Craig Mutch intercepted the last pass senior quarterback Todd Somers threw for the Wildcats and returned it 18 yards to the Northwestern 31.

Michigan ran four plays before Franklin, of Massillon, Ohio, threw to the wide open Rather.

Mich. State routs inept Illini, 24-0

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Versatile cornerback Bill Simpson scored two touchdowns on a 48-yard punt return and a 20-yard pass interception run to key Michigan State's 24-0 victory over error-prone Illinois in a ragged Big Ten football opener Saturday.

Simpson, a 179-pound junior, also recovered an Illinois fumble to set up a Michigan State field goal and his booming punts kept the sputtering Illini at bay.

Illinois quarterback Nike Wells, playing with a gashed finger on his throwing hand, fumbled to set up Michigan State's second touchdown and it was a pass by Wells which the fleet Simpson intercepted for his 20-yard romp which gave the Spartans a 24-0 lead in the final quarter.

The Illini, striving to extend the Big Ten's longest current winning streak of five games, were plagued by miscues all the way and never got beyond Michigan State's 22-yard line.

Toledo upsets E. Mich., 16-0

YPSILANTI, Mich. (UPI) — Joe Schwartz ran for two touchdowns — from two different positions — in pacing Toledo to a 16-0 upset Saturday of Eastern Michigan, the nation's second-ranked small college football team.

The Hurons, now 1-1, threatened to score on three different occasions but were thwarted each time — twice by aggressive middle linebacker Ed Scott. In addition, sophomore kicker Ray Banover missed a 15-yard field goal attempt.

stopped near the goal-line USC had another drive when Cunningham fumbled and the ball popped into the hands of defensive back Jim Lilly, who ran out to the 14. But two plays later, quarterback Tom Ilickey was raked up by Trojan end Jim Sims and fumbled, line-backer Charles Anthony recovering at the Oregon State 14.

Three plays later, with 0:23 elapsed in the second quarter, McNeill slammed over center from the 2 for the touchdown.

A fumble by USC tight end Charles Young at the Trojan 13 was recovered by the Beavers' Jim Mott, setting up a touchdown for Oregon State. On the second play, Ilickey coaxed USC linebacker Richard Wood toward him on an option play, then pitched slickly to halfback Wilson Morris, who streaked 19 yards for a touchdown. Oregon State's kick was blocked.

It took the Trojans only seven plays to match the Beavers' touchdown. Rae mixed his attack smartly, throwing screens and flares at the Beavers, who also were kept busy trying to defend deep against the pass.

Key plays on the 70-yard drive were a diving 15-yard reception by J.K. McKay, a 14-yard screen pass to Anthony Davis and a 30-yard run by Rae, who was aided mightily by a tremendous block from flanker Lynn Swann. From the 5, McNeill turned left end for his third touchdown. Rae's placement was blocked by Oregon State's Dan Sanders.

The Trojans scrambled 68 yards in the closing minutes of the first half, but Rae's field goal attempt from 38 yards with 33 seconds remaining was short.

'It's my year,' says O.J.

BUFFALO (UPI) — O. J. Simpson makes no bones about it. It's time for him to do some serious running.

Simpson, the college wonder-boy who has caused more controversy with his remarks about Buffalo than with his feats on the football field, believes this will be the year for him to hit the 1,000-yard rushing mark.

"I should lead the league in rushing," Simpson said. "I expect to carry the ball 20 times a game and with no injuries, I should gain 1,000 yards, if I don't, it's my own fault."

Simpson, 25, is in his fourth season as a running back with the Buffalo Bills. The most heralded rookie ever to come out of college, Simpson holds most of the rushing records at USC, and captured the coveted Heisman Trophy in 1968.

In his first three seasons, Simpson has not "knocked 'em dead," he sat out the last half of the 1970 season with a knee injury and had his best rushing mark last season with 742 yards on 183 carries even though the Bills struggled through a 1-13 record.

During the Bills' six pre-season games this year, however, Simpson piled up 420 yards and six touchdowns on 84 carries. He credits new head coach Lou Saban for the sudden upswing.

Simpson refers to Saban as "the man with a plan" and admits he likes the Saban's football philosophy.

"Coach Saban's is a running system and that's more advantageous to me," Simpson says. "I'm very excited about the new system. Before this year we had a passing system. Now we're throwing the ball half as much and are probably three times more effective."

Simpson's rushing yardage has also been hampered by a young, inexperienced offensive line. This year the Bills came to training camp with their strongest line in five years but injuries quickly changed the bright picture. "Before this year I just didn't have the confidence that the hole would be there," Simpson said.

"Many times I was already thinking of going to the outside while I was still down in my stance."

Saban made some quick deals with other clubs to patch up the line and the moves, for the most part, have paid off as far as Simpson is concerned.

"Now the holes are there," Simpson adds. "You can hit the hole quick and make your break."

Simpson also believes the Bills have matured and again credits Saban for the difference. "Discipline is the thing," Simpson said. "We're a more disciplined team this year. Coach Saban has been great for me and everyone on this team."

Simpson, who has stated in the past that he preferred life in California as compared to Buffalo, has decided to spend the next few football seasons, "at least, wearing the red, white and blue of the Bills."

He has set some goals for himself and the team and recently signed a multi-year contract with Buffalo. "I want our team to win the division and get into the playoffs," Simpson states flatly.

"Personally, I would like to lead the league in rushing," he adds.

A determined O.J. Simpson might just be able to do it.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (U)—Seventh-ranked Tennessee piled up 21 points in the first half and then outlasted sixth-ranked Penn State for a 26-21 victory in an intercollegiate football game Saturday night.

It was the first night game ever played in Tennessee's Neyland Stadium and the overflow crowd of 71,647 was the largest ever to witness a sports event in the state.

Tennessee jumped out to a three-touchdown lead on the outside sprinting of Haskel Stanback and the inside running of Steve Chancey.

Rhino's punt returns aid Tech, 34-6

ATLANTA (UPI) — Randy Rhino, an 18-year-old sophomore, set a Georgia Tech record with a 95-yard punt return for a touchdown and set up another touchdown with a 41-yard punt return Saturday while the Yellow Jackets crushed South Carolina, 34-6.

Rhino fielded a punt on his five midway through the first quarter and started up the right side of the field. Seeing a group of blockers at midfield, he angled over, broke into the clear and cruised down the left side for a touchdown. The previous Tech record for a punt return was 87 yards in 1958 by John Menger, now South Carolina's backfield coach.

In the fourth quarter, Rhino took a punt at his 25 and raced to the Gamecocks' 34 where he tripped and fell. Tech scored in five plays with the big burst a 21-yard run by Gregg Horne on a pitchout. Horne scored two plays later from the one.

Beman has 1-shot lead on Trevino

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Frontrunner Deane Beman had to fashion a three-under-par 67 and the best 54-hole total of the year to hold off challenging Lee Trevino Saturday in the third round of the $150,000 Greater St. Louis Golf Classic.

Beman, leader all the way in this inaugural event, had a three-day total of 198-12 under par on the 6,550-yard Norwood Hills Country Club course and three under the previous 54-hole total on the tour this year — and held a one-stroke lead over Trevino.

The brash and breezy Trevino, the reigning British Open king and the favorite for the $30,000 first prize, ripped four strokes off par in one stretch of three holes and had a 66.

"I'm just hanging in there," Trevino grinned. "I think I found what I was doing wrong with my putting. I shouldn't have any trouble making some birdies tomorrow. I've got a very good chance."

Veteran Bob Goalby, a former Masters champion who needs a victory to retain his status as an exempt player, was the only other player close as the rest of the field backed off in the muggy heat.

The 41-year-old Goalby, from nearby Belleville, Ill., had a 66 for 201.

Garner puts to win in Benson and Hedges

RICKMANSWORTH, England (AP) — John Garner, 25-year-old British golfer, putting brilliantly over the Moor Park Course, trounced Ryder Cup veteran Neil Coles 7 and 6 in the 36-hole final of the Benson and Hedges Match Play Championship Saturday.

Ronnie Shade of Scotland beat Dave Stockton, former U.S. PGA champion, 4 and 3 over 18 holes in a playoff for third place.

'Reading' the hole

The last few turns of a putt are influenced more by the grain of a green than the others. As the ball slows down, the grass can make it change direction more.

This is why the touring pros look close at the cups and grass around them. They're not just admiring a hole in the ground, even if they feel like crawling in it. They're looking in the cup to help figure which way the grain is growing.

Facing a hole, if the right side of the cup is green, the left side will be brown. From this you assume that the grain lays right to left, meaning your putt will break to the left.

IF THE GRAIN grows from right to left, the right side of the cup is green because the hole-cutter only clips the leaves on that side as it slices into the ground. The left side is brown because the cutter is exposing roots.

Another tip in "reading" a hole is to see if it's worn on one side. This means the grain runs toward the worn side. Balls putted with the grain have been traveling so fast that they hit the far side of the hole. The observant putter then adjusts his stroke.

Six teams in contention

SGVL race is wide open

(First in a series analyzing area prep football leagues)

By GARY ELLIS Staff Writer

Four teams have been added to the San Gabriel Valley League but will the results stay the same? Bellflower High is hoping so.

The Bucs return five offensive starters from a team that was runnerup to Pioneer High last year, and Danny Castillo, a 5-7, 140-pound quarterback who will carry most of the offensive weight.

Pioneer, and California, were moved up to 4-A again but three former 4-A Coast League schools—Downey, Warren and Lynwood—along with 2-A La Mirada swell the SGVL to an eight-team circuit.

It appears that six of those schools have a strong chance at winning the title.

Castillo, who ran for 1,435 yards and passed for 1,113 more in two years will lead the offense. Don Keer and Art Haack, shifted to the running slots in the spring, join the backfield.

BELLFLOWER has been noted for strong offensive lines and this year should be no exception. Mike Howard and Dirk Axe will man the guard positions while Rick Stratton joins the group at tackle and Andy McSorley is the pivot in the line. All were starters last year.

"This should be the quickest team we've ever had," says coach Clay Odell.

It may have to be.

EXCELSIOR has a unique situation. Bo Larson, son of head coach Bob, will inherit Neff Cortez's quarterback position. Seven other returning starters will help in the title fight.

Jeff Handy, an all-league selection last season, and fullback Bob Roper, join Larson in the backfield. Mike Bannan and Chris Vasquez man the tackle positions. Ken DeVore should be the primary receiver.

"It's a different league for us," said Larson. "We'll be playing a lot of kids both ways. We are just hoping that there aren't a lot of injuries."

The Pilots should excel on defense. "A lot of our players (Bannan, Larson, Roper) have played more on defense than on offense last season," said Bob.

"The only question is our secondary."

LYNWOOD, a transfer team, has 10 starters returning including Roy Rauschenbach, an all-league performer on offense and defense last season.

Rauschenbach (6-1, 215) plays tackle and middle guard and is in his third year of varsity play. Another three-year performer is halfback Mike Griffin, who has his new head coach Dave Thompson smiling.

"Griffin is a sprinter," said Thompson, "and he's a super."

Rauschenbach (6-1, 215) plays tackle and middle guard and is in his third year of varsity play. Another three-year performer is halfback Mike Griffin, who has his new head coach Dave Thompson smiling.

"We win with defense here," said Thompson. Trisko Culibrik (tight end) will be the defense end and team with Rauschenbach, Griffin and Willie DeLong.

LA MIRADA, a transfer from the Suburban League, has most of the nominations for darkhorse candidate.

Pro cage briefs

Braves (NBA) — Cut Greg Kohn, Andy Dancy, Durre Burns and Gary Stewart.

Ten starters return from the Bear team last year but the club is one large question mark. "I don't even know who will quarterback," said Schlatter. "After our first two games (Loara and El Rancho) we should know where we stand."

PARAMOUNT places most of its hopes on junior quarterback Gordon Weisenburger and senior receivers Mark Attebery and Morris Warschaw. "Throwing should be the best part of our game," said Knieling. Protecting Weisenburger will be Dan Long and Mercin Prince. Balancing out the attack is running back Bruce Rokees (5-9, 165).

NORWALK HIGH returns one starter, senior Brent DeBois, and hopes a bundle of juniors can carry the league fight.

Throwing to DeBois will be his younger brother Phil. "We've got an inexperienced team and we are hoping to replace the line-men from last year," said J. D. Sarver.

Dale Cotter (tackle) and Ken Blazer (tight end) have Sarver feeling a little more optimistic. Both are juniors. In the secondary John Sanchez and Jim Hudson lend defensive strength.

THE CAR THAT WON MORE EUROPEAN CAR OF THE YEAR AWARDS THAN ANY OTHER CAR HAS JUST BEEN ELECTED AMERICA'S ECONOMY CAR OF THE YEAR.

Not surprisingly, many American car buyers are confused these days as to which small economy car is best. After all, the small car is a fairly recent arrival to these shores. And there are a lot of different kinds.

So we thought you should know that some gentlemen who've made comparing small cars their business, the experts at Motor Trend Magazine, have just elected the Fiat 128 "Economy Car of the Year."

This, mind you, is on top of an unprecedented number of honors that include "Car of the Year" awards in Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Great Britain, Holland, and Sweden, plus the Italian "Bodywork of the Year" award and the German "Oscar of the Automobile."

And when you consider what the Fiat 128 offers you that most small cars don't—such as front wheel drive for superior handling and traction, self-adjusting front disc brakes, the same kind of steering found on Porsches and Jaguars, standard radial tires, more people room than an Olds Cutlass, and a price tag of just $1,992—the logic behind this acclaim is not hard to follow. (This is the manufacturer's suggested retail price POE the West Coast. Of course, transportation, state and local taxes, optional equipment and dealer preparation charges, if any, are additional, as with any other new automobile.)

The Fiat 128. Available in 2-door, 4-door and station wagon models.

Floyd Ali's final hurdle

NEW YORK (UPI) — What could be the last block in Muhammad Ali's big build-up to a return match with heavyweight champion Joe Frazier, unfolds in Madison Square Garden Wednesday night when boxing's world-wide ambassador meets persistent Floyd Patterson in a 12-rounder.

The road back to the top has been a tough one for Ali, who has grown heavier with age (30) and has become a target for criticism in many of his six fights since he lost a brutal 15-round decision to Frazier for the title here on March 8, 1971.

He stopped Jimmy Ellis in Houston in the 12th round in July of 1971 and witnesses of that fight said he carried his ex-sparring partner, unwilling to deliver a knockout punch. In November of that year, he took on Buster Mathis, the human blubber ball and that match turned into a comedy with the two fighters waltzing around the ring until Mathis fell from exhaustion in the 12th round.

Then it was Jürgen Blin in Zurich and Ali won in seven. Mac Foster took the ex-champ a full 15 rounds in Tokyo in April and Ali's fans back home had to be disappointed with his performance. George Chuvalo went the limit with Ali in Vancouver a month later and, in his last fight in June, Ali stopped Jerry Quarry in Las Vegas in the seventh round. It was only in this fight that Muhammad looked like his old self, landing sharp combinations while shuffling around the ring with careful ease.

Now another fight, probably his final tuneup before negotiations are reached for the return showdown with his old "friend" Frazier. That is, of course, if Ali wins and there aren't many people around betting he won't.

Patterson, the two-time heavyweight champion just turned 37, has been on the comeback trail himself. In fact, it seems Floyd is always on the comeback trail ever since he was humiliated by the late Sonny Liston nine years ago.

Patterson hasn't lost since coming out of a two-year retirement after his controversial loss to Ellis in Stockholm in 1968. He's won all nine fights, including an impressive victory over Oscar Bonavena here last February. He too is looking for one more shot at the title.

But Patterson hasn't met anyone like Ali in quite a while. To be exact it was way back in November of 1965 that the then champion Cassius Clay slashed away unmercifully at a helpless Patterson before the referee stepped in to stop the mismatch in the 12th round. It was later revealed that Patterson suffered a slipped disc in that fight, thus the reason for his inability to move and throw punches with any authority.

Floyd is ready now, or so he says. "This fight fits right into my blueprint," says Patterson, the only man ever to regain the heavyweight championship. "I could fight for a long time against meaningless opponents, but this is the big step for me. This is the one that counts, this is the one that brings me all the way back. This is the chance I've been waiting for."

A loss for either man would be disastrous. It would probably mean the end of Patterson's career. For Ali, it would be a huge setback that could possibly send him into an early retirement. Optimistically, the winner figures to come face-to-face with Frazier early next year.

As a prelude to the Ali-Patterson clash, the Garden had booked a non-title 10-rounder between new lightweight champion Roberto Duran of Panama against former two-time champion Carlos Ortiz.

However, Duran, pulled out of the bout last week because of the flu and Ortiz will go against Ken Buchanan of Scotland, who was the lightweight champion before Duran came along three months ago and stopped the classy Edinburgh boxer in the 13th round. Buchanan has long been considered one of the world's premier fighters and he will give the veteran Ortiz a true test.

Ortiz is on a nine-fight winning streak since he came out of retirement 10 months ago. In his prime, several years back, Ortiz was at the top of the division, winning the crown

Wives have common goals

By JOANNE NORRIS
Staff Writer

Both have husbands running for the 4th District Los Angeles County supervisor's post and both have—perhaps unbeknownst to each other—additional things in common.

Marjorie Braude, a physician with a private practice in psychiatry, and Claudia Hayes, a student who wants to be a psychologist and who has been working to get through college off and on since she was 17, both are keenly attuned to the needs of youth.

Their backgrounds are different and they're more than a decade apart in age, but their goals are remarkably the same.

Dr. Braude directs attention to youngsters both in her practice and in her civic activities. Claudia Hayes has a definite career as a counselor in mind as soon as she acquires two long-sought degrees. She's entering Long Beach State University as a junior this month and after graduation plans to get a masters in educational psychology at Loyola University.

DR. BRAUDE, a Midwesterner without an accent, is a graduate of the University of Chicago and the University of Chicago Medical School. She married Marvin Braude when she was a junior and her residency in psychiatry was interrupted by the birth of two daughters, Lisa, now 19, and Ann, 17.

Mrs. Hayes came to Southern California from Oklahoma in 1951 when she was a teen-ager. At 17 she went to work for Pacific Telephone Co., combining full-time work with night classes at Los Angeles City College and marriage.

She had to abandon the classes as training to become a telephone company supervisor became too pressing. Later she took units at Harbor College. Now she is eager to complete her education and get on with a career. "Here I am 34 and where has the time gone?"

The Braudes moved to Los Angeles in 1952 and purchased a high-ceilinged home with a sweeping view of the Santa Monica Mountains. Marjorie Braude's office is not far away, enabling her to jockey her practice with her other world of wife, mother, civic activist and, currently, campaign helper.

Claudia Hayes has lived all over the area—Palos Verdes, Paramount, where she was graduated from high school, and now in an oceanfront duplex in Long Beach.

For the past year and a half, she has lived in Sacramento where her second husband, Assemblyman James Hayes, spent most of his time before he began a campaign for supervisor. Hayes recently was appointed to replace the late Supervisor Burton Chace, victim of a freeway accident, but he will face Braude in November in a race for a four-year term on the board.

BOTH WOMEN like to campaign and for the same reasons. Getting to know people. ("People I would otherwise never meet," says Marjorie Braude) and going places they might not go is appealing to them both.

"You meet people who are involved," says Mrs. Hayes. "They are people who are interested in their government. This makes for a lively crowd."

Dr. Braude has been active in drug abuse prevention programs, is a member of the Los Angeles County Narcotics Commission, and is vitally interested in the role the county plays with young people.

"The county is so involved in many things pertaining to youth," she says. "The juvenile home, the courts . . . I can see room for improvement."

Dr. Braude's clients are of all ages, but she does much of her work with families with children.

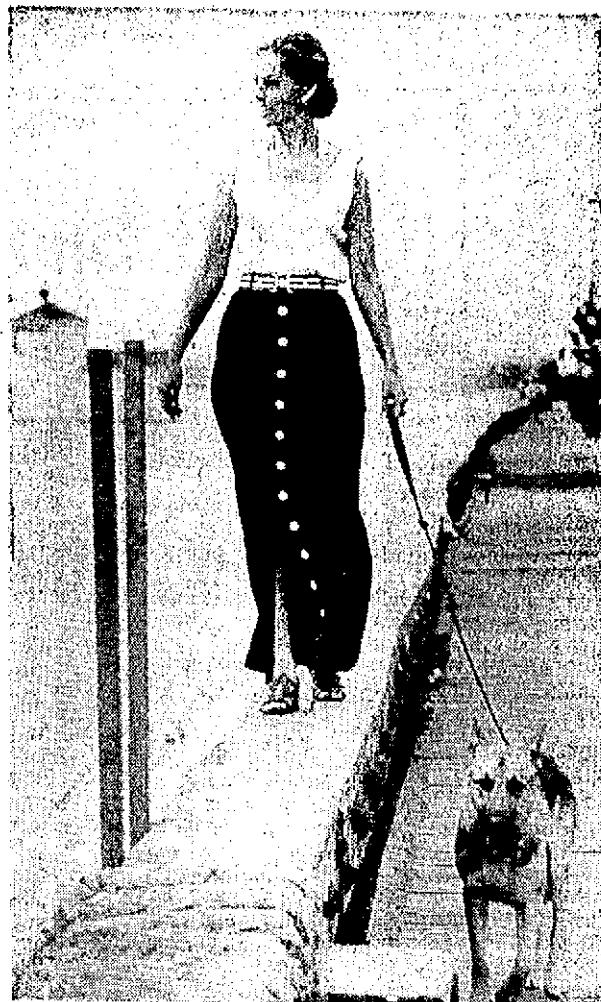

As a young doctor, she "practiced psychology" in rearing her own children, but she's gradually learned better, she says.

Lisa is a cellist and singer who composes much of her own material. She's a student at the California Institute of the Arts. Ann, who will be a freshman at Vassar this fall, is an outdoor enthusiast currently on a five-week wilderness survival course during which she is incommunicado. (Not an easy thing for parents, her mother says.)

The Braude living room is enlivened with art, some of it the work of Mrs. Braude's mother, Vicci Sperry, whose youthful and fey sketches border the glass front of the room.

Lisa Braude, also an artist, has one of her paintings hanging in the room too.

THE BRAUDES RELAX in their pool or around their brick patio which they laid themselves in a burst of new homeowner enthusiasm. These, plus learning to grab short naps, enable

CLAUDIA HAYES AND DOG CANNON
She's learned to live without pressure them to maintain a rather frantic pace.

Claudia Hayes has mastered the art of changing plans quickly with equanimity.

"You have to be able to shift," she says. "If I have dinner half cooked and Jim calls and says we're going out, I just stop and put things away. 'It's the nicest thing to live without pressure,' she adds. 'I have learned to do that. And Jim is this way too.'

"I think people put pressure on themselves by putting themselves in a role. If you can get away from role playing, it helps. If I don't feel like cooking, I say so. If nobody feels like cooking, then we go get a hamburger."

"When I was married the first time, I worked sometimes until 7 at night. Then I came home and felt I had to keep my house spotless and cook wonderful meals. I was playing a role I thought society demanded of me. Now I know better."

Mrs. Hayes says her philosophy is part of what she calls "human liberation" and it's something she has

AT 20 CO-OP NURSERIES

School bells are ringing

BUDDING PICASSOS Jeffrey Egan (left), Michelle Gillies and Andy Lefler, all 4 years old, experiment with finger painting with chocolate pudding. The exercise, one of many art projects offered by the 20 Parent Participation Nursery Schools in the area, allows youngsters to explore the senses of smell, touch, sight and perhaps the best sense of all—taste. Teacher Koneta Privette supervises.

Finger painting with pudding, visits to pumpkin patches and art, music and science sessions are all part of the program at the 20 Parent Participation Nursery Schools throughout the Long Beach area.

All children ages 2-years, 9-months through 5 are eligible for the program if one or both parents are able to participate on a regular basis. Children may be enrolled either by visiting the site or by calling the Parent Participation Nursery School number.

THOSE PRE-SCHOOLS which have already begun for the fall are: Bayshore Nursery, Ocean Boule-

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Of birthdays, turtles, parties

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

Birthday greetings are in order for Martin Murray who celebrated 94 years young recently. We will add our best wishes to the card from President and Mrs. Nixon and the jillion others he received.

He has had some fascinating experiences through the years.

Imagine taking a bride on a honeymoon to Palestine in 1907?

He liked to travel so much he became a tour guide for some years. Then he switched to real estate sales.

He finally found his calling as an ordained minister of the Brethren Church. He retired at age 87.

SPEAKING OF retiring...

"Steve" Brookins retired from his business (Priscilla's Cake Box) after many years.

He and his wife, May, had been tied to our town most of the time so the big thing on the retirement agenda was travel.

They started out by going to Fairbanks, Alaska on a combination sightseeing and baby sitting journey. Their daughter, Sally Towse, lives there with husband, Colin, and two small Towses.

Colin was a delegate to the Republican convention and Sally went along for the fun.

Turned out that some delegate from Alaska didn't arrive and Sally was picked as a delegate.

I wonder how many husband and wife delegates there were at the convention?

But that isn't what this story is about.

The classified section of these newspapers, long noted for the quick results it gives subscribers, has failed the Brookins.

They have appealed to the social column for help.

When they returned to their home in Belmont Heights, they discovered that two turtles (dinner plate size) belonging to daughter, Diane, for some ten years had taken French leave.

They have searched in vain for the absent turtles.

Apparently turtles don't read the classified ads.

Hopefully, they read the social column and if they do they should know they are sorely missed at home.

Perhaps they strolled down to the Peninsula for the Alamitos Bay Garden Club annual street party...

EVERYONE ELSE was there.

Nearly 600 strong the people turned out for a switcheroo on the evening-adults-only-party that the Clubbers usually give.

The oceanside of 61st Place was the scene of a Mexican breakfast the likes of which has never been seen on the Peninsula.

The throngs started arriving at 7:45 to savor the huevos rancheros and trimmings under the direction of Nancy McNaughton, general chairman.

Her hard-working committee consisted of Senoras Mary Alice Braly, Marianne Goldberg, Jean Selvester, Jayne Lane, Karen Hough, Bonnie Tebbetts, Alma Pierce and Tish Kernochan.

The South of the Border menu was catered by the Latin American Club.

While the Alamitos Bay Garden Gals use their part of the proceeds for scholarships, the Latin American Club earmarked THEIR part toward a new clubhouse.

Early risers included Vic and Lila Miller. Vic just back from an extended yachting cruise and sporting an "Old Man of the Sea" beard.

Also Jim and Midge Crowley, Walter and Pat Gilkey, Sam and Marg Chase, Rene and Mary Rene, Palmer and Betty Wentworth, Helen Ramsey, Jean Geisinger, Capt. Tony and Sunny Roessler (USN, ret.) and Fred and Betty Tebbetts.

THE WOMEN'S GUILD of the Civic Light Opera went Polynesian when the new board had a just-for-fun luau and invited husbands to enjoy the evening at George and Joyce Murchison's Bixby Hill home.

They will tell you it really pays off to invite husbands.

Hal Bayer ordered a lei flown in from you-know-where for his Lila. While he was at it he had leis flown in for everybody.

Women's Guild President Shirley Coscarelli and husband, Don, welcomed special guests, CLO President Jim and Frances Sidford, and, Walter and Marion Groshong and Harvey Waggoner.

Pretty golf ace to make social bow

SHE'S BLONDE. She's beautiful. She's famous. She has a busy social life. She is a straight A student. She takes the time to be of service to the community.

She is Laura Zonetta Baugh.

Better known as the United States Amateur Woman's National Golf Champion. Or a student at Wilson High School. Or Los Angeles Times Woman of the Year 1971.

Or a debutante-elect—to be presented, just before the New Year, at the ninth annual "Camellia Debutante Ball" sponsored by Las Comadres, auxiliary of Children's Home Society.

Laura and her mother, Louisa, were among debts and mothers feted at a luncheon at the Upper BelAir Bay Club recently.

For the second year, Las Comadres is setting a precedent in presenting debts ranging from 16 years of age to 19.

The group feels that the young ladies and their parents should decide when the girls are ready to assume their roles in the social and service side of the Society.

Laura is only 17. We are fortunate that she has adopted our town as her town. She can probably cook too.

Lory L. Knuchell and Richard W. Chapman were wed in an evening ceremony at The Wayfarers' Chapel Friday. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Knuchell of Los Alamitos and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson M. Chapman of Long Beach.

The bride, who graduated from Cypress College in 1970, was attended by Mrs. Frederick Schooley. John Montrella was best man

AT WIT'S END

If only a chair could talk

BY ERMA BOMBECK

As I drove into Mother's driveway I saw it atop a heap of trash. The High chair. As shiny as the day it came from the store.

Well, it was about time. I mean how long can you hang onto a baby chair and wait for a 42-year-old daughter to make medical history. Besides, all we ever did with it now was get our hips stuck!

I remember when she got it. The baby was just old enough to sit alone. To get her at table height took a four-man precision drill team. Mother brought in the kitchen chair. Granddad got three World Book Encyclopedias and five Life magazines, my husband got the pillow from the spare bed and I contributed a piece of plastic 4 by 6 feet. Then one day just before Christmas, Grandma flashed the new high chair. "We'll keep it here at Grandma's," she said, flashing her Jeane Dixon smile. "You never know when it will come in handy."

IT MAKES GOOD SENSE to get rid of it. Parked right in the middle of Mother's Mediterranean, it looks as out of place as a dentist's chair. Sentiment never won you a center spread in Better Homes & Gardens.

(She was right. It was one refill after another. No sooner did one outgrow the chair than there was another.

er. Before King Kong. . . that's what we called the first boy. There used to be a restraining belt and a feeding tray. . . and paint. Oh well.)

It's the thing to do. It will certainly give Grandma a lot more room in her kitchen now that the chair is gone. Besides you shouldn't hang onto things that someone else can use. Right?

(If that chair could only talk. How many birthday smiles have been illuminated by candles from that seat. Including the lousy cake I broiled. And Mother said why didn't you make three layers and I cried and said I did. And by that time the kid had fed half of it to the dog.)

IT'S JUST A CHAIR. . . A lousy piece of furniture that existed before lipstick, car keys, deep voices, big feet, dates and a plaintive, "Gosh, Mom, there's nothing to do at Grandma's. Can we leave after dinner?"

It was a symbol of an era of diaper bags and potty seats and strained liver and blankets that shed all over Grandma's sofa. It was a Sunday at Grandma's where youth held forth and no one thought it would ever end.

I ran my fingers along the rungs stripped of paint by little feet. How do you say goodbye to an era?

With a lump in your throat and tears in your eyes. How else?

Financial workshop for women scheduled

A women's workshop on money management, designed to introduce women to the mysteries of finance, has been scheduled for noon Wednesday in the Embassy Room of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles.

The workshop is open to all women who want to learn how to use their financial resources more effectively.

"Women with money to spend and invest are becoming an increasingly important segment of the U.S. economy," said Dee Dee Ahern, a financial consultant with Titan Agencies, Inc., Century City, who is coordinating the session.

"Women's money being poured into the stock market and into financial institutions through their company pension plans alone constitutes a staggering sum and is often overlooked," she said.

"Since women earn so much less than men, it is necessary to use our money as wisely as possible, but one of the problems has been where to go for knowledge and objective information to learn how to effectively use our financial resources and who to trust for professional guidance."

THE WORKSHOP will have information booths staffed by more than 60 representatives from all fields of finance as well as representatives from consumer business and law to answer questions.

What tax shelters are available to women? What is probate and how can I avoid it? What will it cost to send my child to college? What are my Social Security benefits? How can I cut my food and household budget? What investments should I consider?

These are typical of the questions which will be answered, Ms. Ahern said.

The information booths at the workshop will cover three major areas of money management. Representatives from banks, savings and loan institutions, credit unions, investment firms, insurance and financial consulting firms will cover "Where Your Money Grows Through Your Personal Planning" and "Where Your Money Grows Through Your Employer."

People from the food, clothing, home furnishings, utilities, education and auto industries will answer questions on "Where Your Money Goes."

MS. AHERN, who has done a study on women and their money, has spent the last four years in Los Angeles, New York and Washington researching what financial institutions and employers are and are not doing for women.

She said she hopes the workshop will open lines of communication between women, financial institutions and employers.

Honeymooning in San Francisco and Las Vegas are newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. James Walker Brannan who were married Saturday morning at St. Hilary's Catholic Church. The bride is Kathleen Marie Kelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Kelly of Pico Rivera. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dean H. Brannan of Long Beach. Mrs. Ron Houder was matron of honor for her sister while Gary Zimmerman served as best man. The bride was graduated from El Rancho High School and attended Rio Hondo College. Mr. Brannan was graduated from Long Beach City College and Long Beach State University. The couple will reside in Long Beach when they return.

learned more about from the National Organization for Women, which she joined in Sacramento. Some people have been surprised to find out she's a NOW member, she says. "But that's because they don't understand what it's all about. "I don't believe in putting men down. But men also are stuck with a role that many do not want to play. "I joined NOW because I wanted to be heard. I don't agree with everything it stands for, but I want my number up there. I want to lend my support. "I want to see a man be able to go into the kitchen and cook if he feels like it or a little girl be able to play baseball. I want to see the schools stop stereotyping children. And I plan to help stop it. "It's not that I am for trying to get women into the work force. I just want women to be able to make a decision as a young woman whether to have a career, stay at home or both and be able to do it. . . . For generations, women had no choice. Women are still made to feel guilty if they don't stay at home."

DR. BRAUDE is concerned about these things too. She remembers the difficulty women had in medical school. "Even at the liberal University of Chicago there were plenty of men professors ready to flunk the women out just because they thought they didn't belong there." And she recalls the problem she had getting accepted in an internship program after she got her medical degree. Nobody wanted a married woman, who might get pregnant, as an intern. "You'd be surprised at the questions they asked me." She finally was accepted by Illinois Research Hospital and housed in a nurses' dormitory where men were not permitted above the second floor, married or not. "Marvin and I spent a whole year meeting in cafeterias. It was a most difficult time for our marriage." The Braudes met at the University of Chicago where he taught economics. Shortly after that he left to enter private business. Claudia Hayes met her husband when she sought legal help for some friends who wanted to bring children here from Italy. He helped without charge, so several years later she called his campaign office, during an Assembly campaign and volunteered her help. She spent a lot of time licking envelopes. But she also got to know Jim Hayes better. They went to the Reef Restaurant on their first date in August 1970 and were married six months later. Hayes has four children by his first marriage. Jeff, 16, now lives with Claudia, Jim, a German shepherd and a large, tailless cat. "Jeff is learning to live without pressure too," says his stepmother. "It's our way of life. And he's blossoming."

MRS. HAYES has been interested in politics as long as she can remember. Her mother is a Democrat; her stepfather, a Republican. "That makes for some lively discussions," she says. The Hayeses are Republicans and the Braudes, Democrats, although the supervisor's job is non-partisan. Both Mrs. Braude and Mrs. Hayes are interested in schools. And they're interested in the environment. Mrs. Braude recalls with obvious pride the campaign her husband waged years ago to keep the Santa Monica Mountains free of freeways and other development. "When I look out this window and see those mountains, I can't help but be very proud," she says. Claudia Hayes is proud of her husband's fight to get the Equal Rights Amendment through the State Assembly. "When he got up and said to the other Assemblymen 'You're not voting for a bill; you're voting for an idea' it really made an impact. I was so pleased." Mrs. Hayes was not so pleased when the ERA bogged down in the Senate Rules Committee headed by Sen. James Mills, D-San Diego, who opposed the measure. "Mills just got stubborn. He just got stubborn." (Mills recently changed his mind and announced he will support the Constitutional amendment on grounds it won't do either very much good or very much harm.) THE CAMPAIGN has tightened an already well-booked schedule for the candidates' wives. But both have husbands who lend support. "Jim wants me to get these degrees as much as I do," says Mrs. Hayes. "If something comes up and I have an exam the next day, he doesn't let it interfere." The Braude daughters have been good about having a father who also is a city councilman although at times it's been tough to be the councilman's daughters, their mother says. They also have helped in the supervisorial campaign. Ann spent grueling hours copying down precinct results after the primary because the Braude staff needed them before they were made available officially. And both daughters have been understanding of a busy mother. "I think they are glad I do something," says Dr. Braude.

The Aces on bridge

IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner and I missed a slam recently and were wondering how we should have bid. Can you help please?

These were the hands and the bidding with both sides vulnerable:

WEST	EAST
K Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 2	A 4 3	10 9 2
K	7 6 5	10 8 8 7
5 4	A 10 7 3	8 6
♦	A Q 7	9 5 5 3

South	West	North	East	South	West	North	East
1♥	4♠	5♥	5♠	1♠	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass	3♠	Pass	Pass	Dbl.

Short Changed, Phoenix, Ariz.

Answer: East should have bid six spades over the five-heart bid. West was marked with a good long trump suit and, at most, a heart singleton and East's aces controlled the other suits to prevent two quick losers. South's double gave East another chance. However, this time I agree with the pass. After all, West's pre-emptive bid may not have been so good and there was some chance that South knew what he was doing.

Dear Mr. Corn:

This hand provoked a great deal of discussion in our regular foursome. What, if anything, should I have bid after East's unusual two-no-trump bid? My hand and the bidding:

♠ A Q 7 4
♥ K
♦ K 10 8 6
♣ 10 7 5 3

North East South West
1♠ 4NT ?

Still Wondering, Devon, Penn.

Answer: Double. After partner's opening bid, the first order of business is to announce that the hand belongs to your side.

Later, depending upon the course of the bidding, you can decide whether to bid to your best contract (probably a game), or to punish East.

New dimensions in art

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Cooperation was the keynote and success was the result of a special project to aid serious students of art at the high school level. What was needed was the opportunity for the young artists to develop and apply techniques beyond those they experienced in limited classroom time.

Long Beach Art Association saw the need but couldn't fund the entire project. So the association asked Long Beach Regional Arts Council for a grant to pay half of the instructor's salary and to pay for supplies. The council gave $1,000 and this, combined with money paid by members of LBAA who also attended classes made it possible to conduct a special cram course Aug. 21-31. The City of Long Beach gave permission for the group to use classroom space at Long Beach City College where instructor Joan Binkoff conducted the intensive workshop.

Results of the efforts of 11 students may be seen in an exhibit at the United States National Bank, 130 Pine Ave., Monday through Sept. 30. The students are Tom Kassler, Jim McAllister, Ruth McNamee, Loretta Mull, Lanny Mayo, Dennis Easter, Helen McCannick, James Griffith, Sara McCook, Virginia Bilwin and Karen Hiestand.

LONG BEACH Art Association also is preparing for its annual open juried show to be held in the LBAA Gallery, 800 E. Ocean Blvd., Oct. 1 through 30. Entries will be received in the gallery Sept. 25 from noon to 7 p.m. All media but no crafts will be accepted and identical awards of $100 for first and $50 for second places will be given in two categories: traditional, and abstract and experimental. For non-members, there is a $3 fee for each entry. Peter Liashkov, a teacher at the Bongart School of Art, Los Angeles, is juror. For further information, contact the gallery.

Another LBAA activity is the lecture program series which will open Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Fidelity Plaza, 555 E. Ocean Blvd. Guy McCoy will be guest lecturer. Admission is $1 for non-members.

WITH A NEW museum for Long Beach a certainty, there is interest here in the opening of the Kimbell Art Museum in Fort Worth, Tex. The task of building a first class museum was delegated to Dr. Richard F. Brown, who was director of Los Angeles County Museum of Art before he undertook the Kimbell assignment in 1966. He also is immediate past president of the Association of Art Museum Directors.

Although the formal opening will be Oct. 4, the museum already is receiving weekend visitors to the grounds. The innovative building was designed by Louis I. Kahn of Philadelphia, recipient of the Gold Medal of the American Institute of Architects and the Royal Gold Medal of the Royal Society of British Architects. A series of cycloid vaults which enclose 120,000 square feet, the $6.5 million building is located on a 9 1/2 acre site, donated to the Kimbell Art Foundation.

The museum is the result of the philanthropy of the late Kay Kimbell, Fort Worth industrialist and art collector who gave his entire estate to the Kimbell Art Foundation. Mrs. Kimbell contributed her share of community property and continues to devote her time and energy to the project. Before his death in 1964, Kimbell had acquired a multi-million dollar art collection containing some 200 items. The foundation has continued to acquire art. Its goal has been to assemble definitive works in excellent condition without regard to historical completeness. The collection now spans 4,500 years, the oldest work being a female figure from the Cycladic Islands and dating from 2,500 to 2,000 B.C.

TO CELEBRATE Marc Chagall's 85th birthday, Los Angeles County Museum of Art has opened an exhibition of his early graphic works which may be seen until Jan. 14. With 125 prints, woodcuts and lithographs, this is the first large scale showing of the graphics by this artist who has been an active and influential figure on the 20th century art scene for nearly as long as Pablo Picasso. The artist's early graphics depict impressions of his life in Russia as a child in his native town of Vitebsk, as a student in St. Petersburg and as a stage designer in Moscow. There also are prints from "Dead Souls," expressing the humor and irony of Russian serfs in the first half of the 19th century. Other examples are etchings from the "Seven Deadly Sins," the "Fables" and the "Bible."

There is no admission charge for the show on the fourth level of the Ahmanson Gallery of the museum, 5905 Wilshire Blvd.

AT SPECTRUM CLUB's annual banquet, Julian Hiatt presented trophies to winners of the Year awards. First place went to Lenzie Periman; second to Al Danfelt and third to James West.

After the presentations, Hiatt showed slides taken of members of the all-male club and dating back to the 1930s.

AS ITS FINAL exhibit before they are closed for extensive remodeling, the Frederick S. Wight Art Galleries at UCLA will present an exhibit by the noted German sculptor, Wilhelm Lehmbruck Tuesday through Oct. 29. Most comprehensive exhibition ever shown in the United States of this artist's work, the collection comes to UCLA from the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. It will travel next to San Francisco Museum of Art and the Museum of Fine Art in Boston.

Consisting of paintings and graphics as well as 62 important sculptures, the show is the first major exposure in America of Lehmbruck's work since an exhibition in 1930 when the Museum of Modern Art in New York included eight of his pieces in a small exhibit, "Lehmbruck-Maillol."

Expansion and remodeling of the UCLA Galleries is being made possible through a major gift from the UCLA Art Council, supplemented by financing from the Cora L. Black and other non-tax funds. The project will approximately double the size of the present facilities.

The Lehmbruck show will be open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays and from 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays. The galleries are closed Mondays and Saturdays.

Ticket drive on for L.A. Phil

The ticket drive for Los Angeles Philharmonic's 1972-73 season in Long Beach is under way with Mrs. Lawrence E. Reichner as ticket chairman.

It will be a season with a difference. In the past, the Los Angeles orchestra has come to Long Beach to play four concerts. This year only two will be played here but season subscribers are being offered a $1 discount on their choice of two other concerts to be performed at The Music Center Pavilion. They may select the two from four programs.

First, the Long Beach concert. On Saturday, Oct. 14, the season will open in Millikan High School with Gerhard Samuel conducting and Joel Krosnick as cello soloist.

The Long Beach season will close with the second program Friday, May 11, when Zubin Mehta conducts.

Tickets for these two concerts range in price from $12 to $5.50. Tickets to single performances are from $6.50 to $2.95. Special student tickets are $1.50.

Subscribers to the two concerts may choose, at the special discount rate, from performances at the Pavilion Jan. 5, Feb. 2, Feb. 23 or March 21. Bus transportation will be available at $1.50, the cost of parking a private car at The Music Center. Deadline for all tickets is Sept. 29. For further information, call Mrs. Reichner, 3630 E. Second St., Apt. 5, Long Beach.

Opera assured for new season

The Music Center Opera Association of Los Angeles has its mind much on its work—assuring opera for the area. The association not only will bring the New York City Opera to The Music Center Nov. 15 through Dec. 3, but also has formed a new educational performing division.

This is the City of the Angels Opera, designed for performances of short operas in communities and schools in Southern California. Production is underway for first performances in January, 1973, of three operas. They are Menotti's "The Medium," Donizetti's "Rita," and Wolf-Ferrari's "The Secret of Suzanne." A company of 20 young singers will perform them in English with a two-piano accompaniment.

With the tremendous amount of talent in the Los Angeles area, the company will feature local artists and technicians. This also will provide an outlet for those artists who otherwise would be forced to develop their talents elsewhere," said Lawrence E. Deutsch, MCOA vice president.

The New York City Opera season will include four new productions and one new to its Los Angeles repertory. The new productions are Mozart's "Don Giovanni," Donizetti's "Maria Stuarda," Floyd's "Susannah" and Offenbach's "Les Contes d'Hoffmann." New to Los Angeles is "Der Rosenkavalier" by Strauss.

Other productions will be Janacek's "The Makropoulos Affair," Bizet's "Carmen," Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor," Verdi's "La Traviata," Puccini's "La Boheme," and Verdi's "Rigoletto."

IN HIS STUDIO, 4421 Montair Ave., Vasileos Kapousouz works on detail of large mural which he will take to St. Demetrios Greek Orthodox Church in Seattle, Wash.

Artist completes huge church mural

A Long Beach artist, Vasileos Kapousouz, early this week will fly to Seattle, Wash., taking with him his latest work, a mural 15 feet long and 4 feet high.

In acrylic and oil on canvas, Kapousouz has painted "The Dormition of the Virgin" to be installed on the wall facing the altar at St. Demetrios Greek Orthodox Church, Seattle.

Earlier, in 1967, the artist created a huge mosaic mural for the church done in glass tile in the Byzantine style. He hopes for further commissions for the church as money becomes available.

Among his previous commissions was appointment as official iconographer for San Francisco's Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Church which was dedicated in 1963.

Kapousouz is a long way from his birthplace, the Greek island of Lesbos in the Aegean Sea, just off the coast of Turkey. With his parents he came to the United States when he was 13. He studied art in Boston, Belgium and New York. As a commercial artist he supported his wife and four children, but in 1956 took his family to Rome where he hoped to find a better climate—both for weather and for the fine art which is his greatest interest. The hopes were realized, but the family preferred life in the United States.

Subsequently they resided in Santa Barbara, San Francisco and Seattle, coming to Long Beach more than three years ago. "And here we expect to stay," said Kapousouz. "We like the climate and our youngest daughter has three more years of study at Long Beach State University."

Make campsite reservations well in advance

Arriving at the campground, the family found their campsite reservation in good order and were prepared to pay the $3.00 daily campsite fee.

But by the time they had their trailer's sewer, electrical and water connections made, and discovered the fees charged for each — plus charges for a multitude of such things as swimming privileges and an air conditioner surcharge — their campground expenses rose to nearly $7.00 per day.

"This year, campers are going to need advance reservations more than ever before," warns Edward Peterson, editor of Rand McNally's annual Campground & Trailer Park Guide. Making a reservation, however, is "only the beginning of what the camper planning to use a private campground should check out in advance," he adds.

"The most frequent problem we hear about from campers," Peterson said, "involves fees in addition to the minimum site rental charge listed in the Campground & Trailer Park Guide. When making a reservation by mail or telephone, campers can avoid misunderstandings by asking specifically about each kind of special fee, including whether some sites cost more than the minimum and whether he can reserve a specific type of site at a fee known in advance."

The camper should also, according to Peterson, check out such things as:

Whether, upon arrival, he will be allowed to inspect the campground facilities; and his site before he moves in. Abuses by campers or poor maintenance may lead to dirty or disabled showers, pools, toilets and other facilities which can change his mind about staying. The camper may reasonably expect to forfeit his deposit, however.

The rules for getting a refund if an advance deposit is made should be unable or unwilling to use his reservation.

Whether the campground can accommodate his equipment if he has a large trailer.

Whether weather conditions may determine if the campground will be open (some camps may open later than normal in the spring or close early in the fall, according to prevailing weather conditions.)

Rules governing visitors to his campsite (some campground operators, often because of abuses by campers, will make visitors pay a fee).

Whether facilities and recreational activities listed for the campground are on the premises or how far away they are and how much they cost.

The availability of doctors, drugstores and hospitals, particularly if a member of the family has some chronic or recurring health problem which may require attention.

"Most campground operators offer safely and reasonably run operations," Peterson said, "and the camper has an obligation to do his part in avoiding misunderstandings. With our Campground & Trailer Park Guide sales running 50 per cent ahead of last year, we can foresee a continuation of the pattern of recent years where the camping population's growth far exceeds the growth in camping areas, which increases the chances of problems arising.

"Knowing what problems can occur," Peterson concluded, "is the best way to avoid having them mar a vacation trip."

A VIEW OF THE GRAND CANYON FROM THE COLORADO RIVER

Autumn travel best for river raft tours

Early fall is a special time for people who like to avoid the vacation crowds of summer, particularly if you enjoy wilderness. With an autumn glory all its own, the Grand Canyon is the place for great adventure in nature.

The best way to know the Grand Canyon is by raft. Floating down the Colorado River reveals the splendor of vast canyons, the grandeur of towering buttes and spires.

It's also the only way to reach many colorful creeks and waterfalls. Enchanting places like Elve's Chasm, Deer Creek, and Havasu are easily available to the river-runner.

The time to plan your autumn voyage is now, according to the American River Touring Association. The group has scheduled eight day outings starting every Saturday in September and October. They begin at Lee's Ferry on the Utah-Arizona border and traverse the entire Canyon to Lake Mead (310 miles).

ARTA has designed the trips to insure a full adventure in the Grand Canyon in just one week. There's plenty of "white water" action as you shoot the rapids. Frequent stops at side-canyons along the way offer ideal hiking opportunities. And in the evening you savor a fresh campfire meal and spread your sleeping bag beneath the stars.

It's easy to get there. If you fly to Salt Lake City or Las Vegas, ARTA will transport you the rest of the way by charter plane. At trip's end you are driven to Las Vegas for your return flight home. Those who drive can have their cars shuttled to the trip take-out point.

The Grand Canyon is a supreme adventure at any time, says ARTA Director Lou Elliott. But it's especially exciting in autumn when Indian summer prevails and fall colors fill the side-canyons.

The fall climate is normally ideal—mid 70's by day, lower 50's at night. Elliott adds that there are fewer people on the river at this time. "You enjoy greater solitude in nature

Natural wonder

Nahuel Huapi National Park in Argentina contains 1,940,000 acres, including Lake Nahuel Huapi with an area of 350 square miles and a depth of 1,600 feet.

Accidents can mar vacation joys

Accidents claim more lives of young people than all other causes of death combined. Falls and drownings are among the greatest hazards of families vacationing.

If you'll be camping or spending time at a resort, discuss with your children ways to prevent accidents and what to do in emergencies. Following are points you may wish to keep in mind or call to the attention of your youngsters:

Matches are not toys. Camping trips sometimes are a child's first exposure to matches, and the child may decide fire would make a desirable plaything. Be sure to keep your matches out of reach of young children.

Hike on Trails. Falls are more apt to occur when a person leaves a trail and is hiking over rough terrain. Danger is not in skinned knees alone, but in striking the head on a rock during the fall.

TRY TO AVOID loose rocks. Walking on loose rocks gives unsure footing and may cause a fall or twisted ankle. A loose rock also may start downhill, hitting and injuring someone below.

Take special care in crossing streams. Remind your children that when going from rock to rock, they should poke each new rock with the foot to be sure it is securely anchored in the creek bed. A rock that is not solid may cause a fall when it moves.

Be especially careful around swift-moving streams—they can be hazardous even for strong swimmers. Many people underestimate swiftness of current. Listen closely to the stream; if there's a clicking of rocks, you can be sure current is swift. When the bottom can't be seen, expect the stream to be deep. (Clear water alone, however, is not an indication of shallowness—you can see to the bottom of deep holes in many streams.)

Give children a police whistle for emergency, making sure they do not use it for games of "cry wolf."

Lightning can cause death or injury. Caution children that if a thunderstorm approaches when hiking, they should discard anything metal they're carrying and stay away from isolated trees, snags, wire fences and steel bridges. Best protection from lightning is in an old barn, open field or thick grove of young trees.

Stay with a capsized boat. Occupants should stay with a boat that swamps or turns over, unless it's heading for a waterfall, rock or some greater danger. A boat is easier for rescuers to spot than an individual. Some small boats, if not overloaded, even may fill with water but still remain upright.

The smaller the boat, the easier it overturns. Enforce rules of no overloading, horseplay or changing of seats. Be sure everyone understands that in a small boat he should crouch when he moves rather than stand erect.

RULE OUT certain solo activities. There always should be a partner for swimming and hiking to tree limb, towel or piece of clothing for the person in the water to grab onto and then pull him to safety. Only persons trained in life-saving should attempt a swimming rescue—even they should prefer safer alternatives.

Remember that survival in emergencies depends upon being prepared.

ANTALYA IS THE CENTER OF TURKEY'S INCREASINGLY POPULAR RIVIERA

The prices are right along Turkey's Riviera

People who visit Turkey's Aegean resorts for the first time may well wonder why this part of the Mediterranean has only recently received attention from travel agents, for Turkey's west coast has everything that most vacationers want. But it is only recently that sufficient hotels have become available to encourage travel agents and airlines to offer holidays at Turkish resorts.

Among the resorts which are bound to please tourists are Izmir, Gumuldur, Kusadasi and Cesme. Prices in all of them are modest.

Izmir is probably better known to most people by its old name of Smyrna. Its history stretches back to ancient Greece and is popularly associated with dried figs. But there is a good deal more to Smyrna than its dried fruit and tobacco industry. First, it is a modern city lying on the shore of the Bay of Izmir; secondly, it not only has good beaches but it is also near some very exciting ancient sites.

Ephesus, associated with St. Paul's journeys and a great city under the Greeks as well as the Romans, has extensive remains and so has Pergamon, a city used to store some of the treasures of Alexander the Great. Then there are Priene, Didyma and Miletus—the latter associated with Thales, one of the earliest Greek scientists who evolved an atomic theory despite the lack of experimental means of research.

For those to whom a study of the past adds another dimension to holiday enjoyment, there is plenty of scope in Turkey, where even everyday scenes are a constant reminder of another way of life than one's own. There are the old men smoking their hubbly babbles in the cafes, the farmers guiding their wooden ploughs through the dry soil, the white-scarved women carrying the tobacco to the sorting shed and the peasants laying out their long rows of figs and raisins in the sun.

But Turkey is a new country as well as an old one; it is a mixture of old and new, and its mingling of Oriental and European styles adds to its fascination.

The resorts are an example of Turkey's progress towards the future. They are modern developments with white hotels, some of them built on bungalow lines, standing by the sea. Discotheques and bars provide places for evening excursions, and at the Holiday Village near Kusadasi there are shops, restaurants, discotheques, concerts and dancing.

Life in the Aegean resorts is lively but not overwhelming, and like Turkey itself, combines the picturesqueness and easy going atmosphere of the past with all the advantages that modern tourist facilities provide.

Turkey is within easy reach of London and other major European capitals by air. British European Airways, for example, flies from London to Ankara twice weekly and from London direct and exclusively non-stop to Istanbul four times a week.

WHEN IN DENMARK

Magical isles a must

The islands of Denmark are many and colorful, but perhaps the most beautiful of them lie in an archipelago around the island of Funen.

Getting to Funen is half the fun. Most visitors to Denmark find themselves first in Copenhagen, and from there by rented car or express train Funen is just a few hours. Crossing on the ferry from Sealand to fairytale Funen is something out of Brigadoon.

A stop in Funen's major city Odense, fairytale capital of the world, is a must for a glimpse of the childhood home of Hans Christian Andersen.

A few miles south of Odense is Egeskov Castle rising sheer out of a lake as in a Welsh legend. Stop for an hour or so and enjoy Egeskov's collections of antique cars and planes. The castle staff lays out a nice pastry spread these days, and it's fun to explore the grounds.

— so tiny that a tall man can lean on the roof — make this village a jewel of make-believe. Aerokobing is also happy to boast the world's largest collection of bottled models.

To the east, Langeland, literally "long island," with majestic Tranekaer Castle and park.

For a real taste of the glory of the Denmark that once was, a stop at Nyborg is worthwhile. Nyborg is a modern town, still wearing the mantle of medieval splendor thanks to its castle, built in 1170, when Denmark's armies and navies ruled the Baltic, most of Scandinavia including half of Sweden, and her ships traded as far south as the Mediterranean.

Its modern shops, restaurants and inns are no better exemplified than in the Hotel Hesselet, a truly gracious hostelry. The clean, low-profile inn fronts a beautiful Japanese garden.

Nyborg was once Denmark's capital and the home of her Parliament. Here the royal and the famous from all over the Baltic gathered to pay homage to Danish might.

FUNEN really gets to some people, and the only way they can get right down to the land is to stay as a guest on a farm. There is no wall-to-wall carpeting or Musak, but the food and bed are good, the prices low, and the fun is sincere.

Prices for room and three meals a day average six dollars, which seems cheaper than staying at home. Many towns in Denmark are now ready to receive farm bookings this year. A check with the Danish tourist office will provide further information.

But some people are roamers, not roomers, and the only way they get enough wind in their hair and mileage behind them is to pedal a bike all day. Thankfully, Denmark's gentle countryside and friendly folk make this as easy as a stroll down a country lane.

BICYCLE TOURS abound in Denmark, for here was invented the first ready-made tour. They offer visits to manors, chats with friendly people, a swim and sunbath, a dewy lager, and an appetite which grows as the sun wanes and the friendly inn beckons. Danish bicycle tours are not group arrangements and one can choose the company he wishes.

One thing is certain: a bike or car trip through Funen and its sister islands reveals in detail that Hans Christian Andersen was not a romanticizer of myths and tales, but just an honest reporter.

African travel: a shot in the arm

Jungle drums. Drowsy lions. Skyscraper cities. Colorful market places. Africa's proud people, unafraid, caught up in the onrushing tide of freedom and learning but anxious to show off their land to overseas visitors.

No one knows all of this vast continent from its deserts, jungles, endless plains and snow-capped mountains to the posh restaurants and tent-and-truck safaris.

But Pan American World Airways knows something of Africa. They fly there. And Robert Cosgriff, Los Angeles director of sales, points out there are Intercontinental Hotels throughout Africa.

The airline also offers an "Essence of Africa" tour (16-22 days) which is an answer for the traveler limited by time and budget. It's called "Pan Am Holiday 109."

Xanadu

a special cruise ship for travelers and a brilliant new itinerary

LANDFALLS OF THE CONQUISTADORS and the GALAPAGOS ISLANDS

Southward along the eastern littoral of the Pacific Ocean lie some of the most charming of lands - best known, Mexico of course; then less-visited Guatemala; still lesser known El Salvador and Costa Rica; and not too far offshore the fabled islands of the Galapagos whose fauna have intrigued the mind of man ever since Charles Darwin made his historic and carefully annotated voyage in the "Beagle."

It will be to these landfalls and islands that XANADU will go and where guests will take extensive inland trips by motor, rail and air to the mountains, lakes, volcanoes, Mayan ruins, villages and cities - to San Salvador, Guatemala City, remarkable Antigua and San Jose, Costa Rica, among others. All of the inland trips are of course included in the passage fare.

Cruises are of 21 days duration and originate or terminate in Los Angeles, California, or Balboa, in the Canal Zone - each port conveniently reached by air from all U.S. cities.

Sallings: Nov. 28, Dec. 19, 1972-Jan. 9, Jan. 30, Feb. 20, Mar. 13, Apr. 3, Apr. 24, 1973.

Seattle's waterfront: a great place for unusual gifts

There is always something fascinating about prowling the waterfront of a port city and Seattle, located on a neck of land between Puget Sound and fresh-water Lake Washington, 125 miles inland from the sea itself, is a wonderful place to wander.

The $200-million port, with its 189 miles of busy docks and shoreline, is Seattle's front door, report travel experts for Continental Airlines, serving the northern Pacific city. There is always a little breeze, the tang of salt air, cries of gulls and the promise of far away places.

Seattle's central waterfront, which is located within casual walking distance of downtown hotels, has much more. In a dozen or so colorful blocks, there are some of the best seafood restaurants in the world, shops filled with gifts and goods from the Far East, unique Indian art and souvenirs, and the Seattle Public Aquarium, where there are daily shows from mid-May through September featuring killer whales.

Named after a friendly local Indian chief, Seattle saw its first white settlers in 1851, and they arrived by schooner.

Just four years after being settled, the young community on the edge of Elliott Bay was attacked by neighboring Indians and it took the "Decatur," a U.S. sloop of war, to successfully drive them off.

When gold was discovered in the Yukon in 1897, Seattle was the jumping-off place for the great movement there of men and supplies. With the opening of the Panama Canal in 1914, and during World War I, the city's shipyards built more vessels than any other port in the nation.

Today, Elliott Bay, which is five miles across and studded with piers, is America's greatest gateway to Alaska and the Far East. The largest salmon and halibut fishing fleets in the world move in and out. The flags of dozens of nations fly from freighters and tankers; more than 60,000 tons of bananas alone move through the port each year. Giant rafts of lumber huddle the shores.

Sightseeing boats make daily two-and-a-half-hour long trips in the summer around Seattle's waterfront, covering 26 miles from the salt water of Puget Sound to the fresh water of Lake Washington, going between the two through locks which lift and lower the boat 25 feet.

There are regular and frequent ferry trips from the city aboard Washington State's "Navy," which consists of 24 state-owned ferries, as well as several others owned by other government units and private firms.

Their routes, with trips taking from 40 minutes to nearly all day for the round trip, connect Seattle with the mountain-surrounded Olympic Peninsula, the San Juan Islands, and Victoria and Vancouver, in Canada's British Columbia. One trip is to nearby Bremerton, where the battleship "U.S.S.

Missouri," aboard which the pact ending World War II with Japan was signed, is moored and open to visitors.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

'Food' written in his destiny

By MILDRED K. PLANARY

To Dominic T. Mammolite, today's Chef of the Week and manager of a Long Beach Boy's Market, "C of C" doesn't necessarily mean "Chamber of Commerce," rather, "customer courtesy."

You see, the slogan of Boy's 36 markets, is "Boys Love Girls," and from personal observation, everyone who whips through the turnstile at his market, is made to feel that their being there is very important to him.

In fact, when Mammolite became manager of the market three years ago, he asked permission to train each employee on the value of "personalized customer treatment." It worked and IT'S working!

Mammolite seemed destined to be in the food business. Born in Franklin, Pa., he spent the first 37 years of his life there, including his high school education, and eventually managing the family business, The Mammolite Brothers Markets, for 10 years.

He also devoted six years to food marketing in Connecticut, Pa., and in Warren, Ohio.

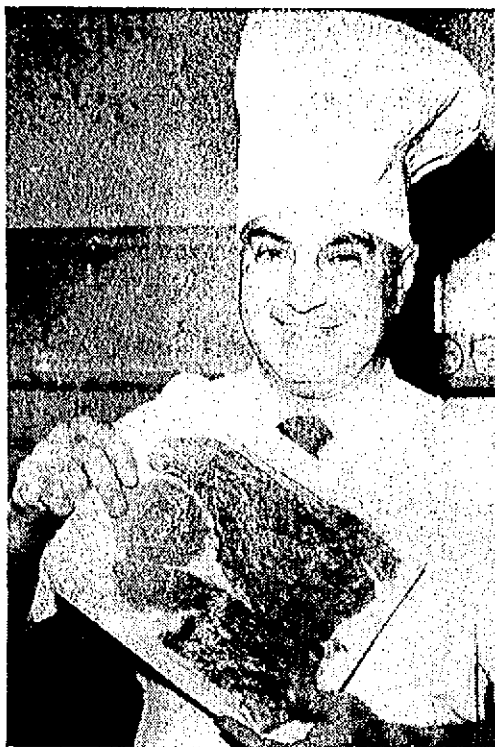

Special education has included classes in bookkeeping and management at both Cornell University and the University of Maryland.

WORLD WAR II took Mammolite to Oxford, Germany, where he did his service duty for a period of two years.

Eventually, he and his family decided a change in climate was for them, and they soon were California bound. The family includes wife, Gene, and son, Michael, 8, a student at Horace Mann Elementary School.

Mammolite is a member of both the Knights of Columbus and the Eagles Lodge in Pennsylvania. In Long Beach, after a stint in the Junior Chamber, he now is active in the Chamber of Commerce. He enjoys all sports and has played on various football, basketball and baseball teams, but he mostly confines his time now to tennis.

"He has always cooked," says Gene, "and is mighty good at it." But when it comes to fixing things, our "Chef" loses compression. But then, how many men manage a business which gives service seven days a week, as do Boy's Markets, Inc.?

WESTERN RANCH STEAK (marinated beef great on grill)

2 pounds round steak, first cut (1½ to 2 inches thick)
1 orange
2 lemons
½ cup olive oil
1 clove garlic

Pierce both sides of steak with fork at 1-inch intervals. Cut orange and lemons into quarters. Cook in oil until skins are lightly browned. Add mashed garlic and cook a minute longer. Pour fruit and oil over steak in shallow pan. Turn steak to coat both sides. Marinate several hours or overnight, turning steak a few times. Lift steak from marinade, draining well. Grill over hot coals 15 to 20 minutes per side. Baste with marinade once or twice as steak cooks. Slice diagonally across grain. Makes 6 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Fridge freak a serve-yourselfer

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a friend who does something that irritates me no end.

As soon as he comes into our home he heads right for our refrigerator. He then opens it to see what's there, and he helps himself.

Don't get me wrong. I don't mind letting him have whatever we have, it's just the idea of him helping himself that bugs me up.

I was taught never to open closets, drawers, cupboards, or refrigerators in someone else's home, Abby, and I just don't like anyone opening mine.

This man is a good friend of ours and I don't want to hurt him, but it's gotten to the point where I am ready to explode. So how can I tactfully tell him to please stay out of my refrigerator?

ANONYMOUSLY YOURS

DEAR YOURS: Don't worry about "hurting" him. He sounds pretty durable to me. Tell him that he is welcome to anything you have to eat, but to please stay out of your refrigerator. He may get angry and never open it again. (And wouldn't that be lovely?)

DEAR ABBY: A man wrote and said his parents wanted to invite him and his wife to their country club, but they wanted him to please ask his wife to wear a "normal" neckline with no cleavage showing as they didn't want to be embarrassed before their friends.

The husband said he didn't mind a little cleavage showing, and asked if that would be out of place at a country club. You said

"a little cleavage" was acceptable at most country clubs. I have a better suggestion: That young man should tell his parents to buy their daughter-in-law a lovely diamond pendant to be worn on an 18-inch platinum chain around her neck. That would cover her cleavage nicely and would be acceptable in any country club.

HOW LONG should a new carpet last? Well, obviously it's impossible to pin that down for every different situation. A home, office or store that sees a lot of traffic will wear out any carpet faster than a house in which, say, only an older couple live.

Another imponderable in carpet wear is the type of fiber in relation to its use. Best wear comes from choosing the right carpet for a particular purpose, and here the advice of a carpet specialist can be invaluable.

However, there is a working "rule of thumb" often cited in the industry. Generally speaking, you can figure on about one year of wear for each dollar-per-square-yard you spend on carpeting. In other words, a good average would be ten years of wear for a carpet cost around ten dollars per square yard.

A lower-priced carpet will ordinarily not last as long (though it may still be good value for your needs). A higher-priced carpet, properly chosen, will stay beautiful and thick even longer than the dollar-per-yard-per-year average.

We'll be glad to talk over the choice of carpet that will give you the best value... and the right colors and textures to complement your home and your furnishings. Come in!

"The average American family needs supplemental insurance protection against both Hospital and Medical Bills."

says Art Linkletter

It's time you faced the fact that your regular health insurance probably won't pay all your medical, surgical and hospital bills.

That's why I urge you to apply for this Medical-Surgical-Hospital Insurance Plan that provides up to $700.00 for surgery or physician's bills
—plus—
$350.00 a month ($11.67 a day) while confined in the hospital.

Please read on for the full details on the benefits, limitations and rates of this plan from National Home Life Assurance Company; you'll be glad you did. ➡

Most people believe their present insurance covers all their bills. No matter how many health plans they have, most people end up owing money when they leave the hospital. That's why you need this plan.

Art Linkletter is a member of the Board of Directors and retained as a Marketing Consultant for National Home.

Most health plans don't cover everything.

Prove it to yourself. Get your own policy and take a good, hard look at it.

Have you ever known anyone who got over a serious illness or accident with all his bills paid?

It's time you faced the fact that your basic insurance probably won't pay all your medical-surgery-hospital bills.

The trouble is, many health plans pay the hospital but not the medical or the surgical bills. They frequently pay just one professional fee—not both—when your physician calls in another physician.

They may not pay for surgical procedures conducted outside the hospital—or any number of other possible costs or deductibles.

But now National Home offers supplemental protection in this Medical-Surgical-Hospital Insurance Plan that helps to pay not just hospital bills, but medical or surgical bills, too. Just check these benefits.

What are the benefits of this plan?

National Home's Medical-Surgical-Hospital Insurance Plan pays:

Benefits for Surgery or Physician's Visits—National Home pays from $10.00 for minor surgery (even if done at home) to $700.00 for major surgery according to the surgical schedule printed in the policy. OR, if you don't have surgery, we pay at the rate of $7.00 for physician's hospital visits up to a maximum of 100 visits (limit 1 visit per day) even if he just checks your chart. And,

Benefits for Hospital Bills—pays up to $350.00 a month—$11.67 a day while you are hospitalized—starting the fourth day for sickness and the first day for accidents. Payments continue for as long as you are hospitalized up to 36 full months. Yes, this plan pays as much as $12,600.00. Benefits for folks 65 or over are the same as described above. See page 4 for details on coverage for children.

Perhaps you already have some health insurance.

Probably a basic hospitalization plan, a major medical plan, Medicare or other group plan.

Keep them.

Frankly, you'll probably need every cent paid by these plans since few plans today pay the whole bill for a serious accident or illness. Which is why many prudent and farsighted people own supplemental health plans to help pay for the bills their regular insurance may not cover.

Even if one of these other plans has already paid some or all of your medical bills—National Home pays benefits regardless of whatever other coverage you may have. Even if it's for the same illness.

Why you may actually need additional coverage to break even.

It's frightening what's happened lately to the cost of medical care. Up 150% in the past 10 years. Which means that a serious illness or accident could become quite a financial burden and plunge your family into debt. No wonder most basic health plans people depend on just can't keep up.

Today, with rising medical bills staring you in the face, you almost have to have additional protection. This Medical-Surgical-Hospital Insurance Plan provides benefits to help pay the bills and help safeguard your family's security.

More reasons why it never hurts to have additional protection.

Perhaps until today you'd never considered the high costs of a long illness or the great burdens of medical bills, including bills for surgery and hospital care, that many other plans don't cover.

And, remember that:

During a long illness, while you are in the hospital your other expenses at home keep going on just the same as if you were well. When you think about it, it's easy to see why you should have additional protection that provides supplemental benefits. And this National Home Medical-Surgical-Hospital policy will help to relieve you of worry when sickness or injury puts you or a covered family member in the hospital.

What happens when you're 65 or over?

Benefits are not reduced because of advanced age. Yes, even if you are 65 or over now, this plan pays the same full benefits under this policy. Coverage for hospital confinements due to illness begins on the fourth day, coverage for accidents begins on the first day.

In addition, this plan pays the same benefits for operations, minor surgery or physician's hospital bedside visits as for folks younger than you. And remember, we pay this without regard to any other insurance you may already have.

The company behind this plan.

National Home is one of the leading companies in its field. We have been in business over 50 years, and our plans provide health protection to families in 46 states. When you have a claim, you can depend on us to give you prompt and efficient service. In fact, right now, we are paying benefits to our policyholders under various plans at the rate of $20,000,000.00 a year.

Questions we'd ask if we were you:

Q. How are National Home's reasonable rates possible?

A. Simple. The brochure you are reading reaches many thousands of people at once. Far faster and cheaper than any agent could do. This saves us money—that's why you save money.

Q. What happens if I have a recurrence of the same condition?

A. If, between hospitalizations, you have resumed normal activities for just 3 months, this plan again will pay full, maximum benefits. This applies to any number of times you are confined in a hospital for the same or related conditions. Of course, you are eligible for coverage on new conditions immediately. Benefits start the first day for accident and the fourth day for sickness.

Q. Why do you wait 2 years to cover an old condition?

A. Without this restriction we would attract chronically sick people into our plan. And that wouldn't be fair to you. We'd be forced to raise your rate. It would be like making safe car drivers pay the same insurance rates as reckless ones. However, after 2 years, you're covered even if an old condition "acts up."

Q. Will my policy be cancelled if I make too many claims?

A. Regardless of how many claims you make or how old you become, we will not cancel your protection.

Q. Will my rates go up if I make too many claims?

A. Your rate will only be increased if there is a state-wide adjustment in rates on all policies of your class and form number.

Q. Since I don't have an agent, how do I collect my benefits?

A. Simple. We send you our easy to understand claim form along with your policy. It takes just minutes to fill in this form when you file a claim and return it to us. And in case you have a question, just call us collect, even at night, and we'll help you.

Q. How long will I have to wait for a benefit check?

A. National Home pays a covered claim quickly. We have a file full of letters thanking us for our promptness.

How to enroll.

Simply fill out the enrollment form and send it with $1 for the first month's premium in the post-paid envelope provided.

Many people have asked us how we can afford to protect a whole family for an entire month for just $1. Our answer is simple. We want to make it as easy as we can for as many new policyowners as possible to receive and study our policies.

As you probably know, over 30 million people will be admitted to the hospital this year. Unfortunately, it isn't always the family next door. Be protected—send the enrollment form with a dollar right now!

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM AND THE EVENING NEWS

George Kirby -- he makes a good impression

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

I knew George Kirby was a good impressionist—one of the best, in fact—but I didn't know until just the other day that he can do the Invisible Man. Now I'm convinced it's one of his best acts.

Let me explain.

I had an appointment to interview George in the Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills Hotel at lunch, and I arrived 10 or 15 minutes ahead of schedule with a publicity man. After informing the maitre d' that we were to meet Kirby, we were guided to a table in the patio section of the dining place.

Forty minutes later, still no George Kirby. By this time, the publicist was half out of his mind, even though I remained calm and enjoyed the surroundings. (After all, the Polo Lounge beats our office cafeteria, where I usually eat lunch.) He had made several trips inside the hotel to place phone calls and to see if he could spot George anywhere.

Finally, the entertainer materialized at a table in the inside section of the restaurant and someone brought him to us. He swore he had been sitting there a good half hour, and I believed him, knowing his many talents. Still, you've got to admit it was a neat trick for a man who weighs 240 pounds. I wonder how it would go on television.

The wait was worth it. In the course of a normal luncheon conversation, George treats you to a one-man show of such personalities as James Mason, John Wayne, Mickey Mouse, Sarah Vaughan, Archie Bunker, Amos 'n' Andy and Al Jolson, even without your requesting any impressions.

Kirby starred with such fine impressionists as Rich Little, Frank Gorshin and Marilyn Michaels this past season on "The ABC Comedy Hour Presents the Kopykats," which expanded from a couple of specials into a series after midyear. "The Kopykats," to my way of thinking, was one of the most enjoyable shows on the air, but unfortunately it is not continuing this fall. As Kirby himself put it, "Someone must have buttons in his head."

Just because "The Kopykats" is off doesn't mean we won't have an opportunity to see George Kirby this season, though. He's the star of a new syndicated series which will have its premiere tonight at 7:30 o'clock on KABC-TV (Channel 7).

The comedy-variety series is called "Half the George Kirby Comedy Hour," which, I was informed, is a humorous way of saying it's a half-hour show. It is produced in Toronto before an audience.

Kirby, who resides in Chicago, had come to the Southland on a promotion tour. On the morning of the day I interviewed him he had appeared on "Ralph Story's A. M." show on Channel 7 and the Robert Q. Lewis radio show. He was colorfully clad in a green plaid sportcoat, green slacks and green shirt, with a tie of green, pink and a few other colors.

I asked him how many of the shows he had done.

"We've got 19 in the can already and will do the remaining seven starting in November," he told me.

Guest stars on "Half the George Kirby Comedy Hour" will include Nancy Wilson, Arto Jonason, Della Reese, Stanley Myron Handelman, Barbara Sharma, Hines, Hines and Dad, Freda Payne, Hugh O'Brian, Teresa Graves, Pat Paulsen and Henry Mancini.

Guest on this evening's show is Miss Wilson, but George says "I wish they'd led off with Arte — I think that one's more fun."

The series will rely mainly on the talents of George Kirby, though, and he has to be rated as one of the most versatile entertainers in showbiz. In addition to being an outstanding impressionist, a master of timing and dialect, a man with a remarkable vocal range and a highly expressive face, George sings, plays the piano and dances. In the singing department, he does everything from gospel to jazz to blues to jive to folk to pop.

In the series, George will appear in recurring sequences as Fathah Goose, Charlie the Doorman, Sidney the Puppet and S. J. Kilpatrick the Candidate, in addition to his many other activities.

George started out in showbiz as an impressionist — "Don't call me an impersonator," he told me; "an impersonator wears high heels" — and has added his other entertainment skills over the years. For instance, says George, "I learned to play the piano by watching Count Basie for about a month back in the forties. I'd watch his hands and copy him and then, because I didn't bug him too much, he'd help me when I'd ask questions."

Becoming an entertainer seemed the natural thing for George to do. "My mother was a singer and my father was a musician who played all the string instruments," he told me. "And my aunt played the vaudeville circuits and appeared with stars like Sophie Tucker."

George said Louis Armstrong lived in the same apartment building on the South Side of Chicago that he did as a kid, and that as a boy he also knew Redd Foxx. He played football with Buddy Young, the ex-pro star, and among his other schoolmates was Dinah Washington.

"Now I live in the same apartment building in Chicago as Dick Gregory," he said. "For awhile I lived on the 10th floor and he lived on the ninth. I claimed top billing, so he ups and moves his whole family to the 10th and top floor. 'Now we've got equal billing,' he says."

As a youngster, George had a knack for imitating people. He would imitate the voices of friends, teachers and people he heard on the radio and say in the movies. "There was a group of us kids who would try to go to the movies every weekend," he told me. "But if we didn't have enough money the others would chip in and send me, and then after I'd get out I'd do the whole show for them."

At 18 he quit school and became a porter and then a bartender at Chicago's Club Delisa. ("I was big and had a mustache and looked 21.") Before long, he had persuaded the owner to give him a chance on stage. He performed for a year before going into the service in World War II. After the war he caught on at the 845 Club in New York, and from then on he toured and worked nightclubs with such stars as Duke Ellington, Cab Calloway, Sophie Tucker, Earl Hines, Lena Horne, Stan Kenton, Count Basie, Sarah Vaughan and Nat King Cole.

The impressionist-comedian says he was the first black to appear on television. "It was in 1950 when I was performing at the Oasis on Western Avenue in Los Angeles. The local NBC station started doing my show from there." Later, he made his network debut on the Dave Garraway show.

In more recent years, Kirby has made many TV appearances with Johnny Car-

SPECIAL

BOLD ONES (4), 9 p.m.
4th season premiere.
The doctors go it alone this season, as the lawyers join the earlier law enforcers and senator in limbo.
Tonight's outing, at a new day and time, continues the story begun last week on "Ironside." Experimental spinal surgery on Sgt.
Brown is interrupted by a death threat against the kidnaped daughter of the doctor performing the operation. (John Saxon has
Walden due to co-star as a young intern.)
GUILTY by Reason of Race (4), 10 p.m. - "NBC Reports" assesses the historical happening in which 110,000 Japanese-Americans were held in detention camps in the U.S.
throughout World War II.
The invasion hysteria and anti-Oriental feeling of 1942 is stressed, along with FDR's executive order 9066 which has never been repealed. Photos are shown of life in the camps, and interviews include
Edison Uno, Sen. Daniel K.
Inouye (D-Hawaii) and retired Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark.

SPECIAL

CAROL BURNETT (2), 8 p.m.—Two Carols are better than one—especially when the other is Carol Channing, and with Marty Feldman thrown in for good measure. Highlight is a mini-musical drama salute to composer-lyricist Johnny Mercer. Also featured is a spoof of TV commercials, and a comedy sketch with Marty as a slightly mad plastic surgeon and the two Carols among his nervous patients.

MADIGAN (4), 8:30 p.m.—Premiere. Second at bat in the rotation schedule of "Wednesday Mystery Movie" is this story of a veteran New York City detective, played by Richard Widmark. Tonight he's to break in a recent college graduate as his partner, and grumblingly takes the rookie along though their ideas about police work differ. After dealing with several cases, Madigan finds his life in danger as his novice partner faces his first real police situation. (Third in the trilogy, "Cool Million," debuts next month.)

 "Assignment: Vienna" and Laurence Luckinbill's
 "Delphi Bureau" — all previewed earlier on TV.

 an overall theme by Isaac Hayes. "Jigsaw" gets the initial nod for a difficult assignment — locating an undercover policeman, who vanished while posing as a member of a car-theft gang and just before breaking the case. How to find him without tipping off his real identity? Es-dicates he may have killed a member of the gang, and may be dead himself?

BIBLE

Says

Question: "What name should followers of Christ wear?"

Followers of Christ should wear the name of Christ. It is the only name in which we have salvation (Acts 4:10-12).

Men today in the denominational world in general are known by the names of men, but it was not so in New Testament times. The Bible says, "the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch" (Acts 11:26). "Christian" is the only name that men ought to wear religiously, for it is the "new name" prophesied by Isaiah (Isa. 62:2).

The apostle Paul condemned the Corinthian church for calling themselves after men, for, as he said, "every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ. Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?" (1 Cor. 1:12-13). Here the Corinthians were calling themselves "Paulites" and "Cephasites" and "Apollosites" — and Paul rebuked them for it. They were to be known as Christians, and Christians only!

Those today who call themselves something other than or in addition to a Christian have violated God's word and stand condemned by an inspired apostle.

Bigfoot

He's out there — crashing through the underbrush, lumbering along a mountain ridge, looming up by a campfire at night. The legend persists and writer Scott Stevens takes a fresh look at the facts and the men who believe they will someday capture the giant, hairy monster from another age.

They rock... 'n roll
And jeeps! It's rough

Three days in a jeep on a treacherous Sierra pass may be good for the soul but it does nasty things to the body. I.P.T. staff photographer Tom Shaw took the rough ride from Georgetown, Calif., to Lake Tahoe and filmed the 20th Annual Jeeps Jamboree.

Justice is the

The first Long Beach man to be elevated to the federal court bench took with him judicial skills he demonstrated in handling the stormy Charles Manson trial. I.P.T. columnist Carolyn McDowell probes the character and background of the man who represents federal justice in the 9th California district.

Liberated goddess

Can you imagine what a Roman goddess would be like on a hunting trip with the boys? Writer Pat Babrowski issued a shotgun to Diana the Huntress and sent her into the field with 800,000 other women to bla-a-am! bla-a-am! at some game and record the way men react to her skills.

Wells Report

NOTICE: The following column contains material which some may find . . .

The Chinese, who have always had a higher regard for the realities of life than the Western world, have made a place in their literary criticism for the pornographic novel. It is one of the seven recognized different kinds of novels in Chinese Literature.

Our Puritan tradition rejects the idea that anything that is pornographic can also be literature. We recognize the detective story, the science-fiction novel, the coming-of-age story, the gothic tale, and all sorts of other specialization. But if a book deals with sex and isn't a doctor book, then it has to be a dirty book.

We have always had an underground literature. Benjamin Franklin, Mark Twain, Eugene Field, and Sir Arthur Sullivan all wrote pornography. John Cleland's "Fanny Hill: Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure," has a publishing history almost as long as that of Shakespeare's plays. The proper Victorians had their own underground publication, The Pearl, which was as prudently pornographic as any publication of our own day. J.P. Morgan collected pornography; so did Henry Huntington.

It ought not come as a shock to discover that the Long Beach area has hardcore pornography as openly for sale as Copenhagen. There are about a dozen adult bookstores within the city limits where dirty films and books can be viewed or purchased. Just out of the city are bars that specialize in films of sex acts, and feature nude entertainers.

Naturally, dear reader, you would expect me to look after your interests by investigating and reporting on these places. The other day, trying to look like a responsible citizen whose interest was journalistic rather than merely prurient, I began my research in the bookstores on Locust Ave.

I must admit surprise. Four years ago I reported on the nickelodeons of Sacramento, where by depositing a dime or quarter you could observe a naked lady twisting and gyrating. As they say in the commercials, you've come a long way, baby. The movielas are still there, but the naked ladies no longer indulge in suggestive conduct. They engage in explicit conduct.

The adult bookstores still carry hardcore pornographic magazines and books, but they seem to be pushing the movies more and more. That's understandable. Regular bookstores now carry the works of novelists like John Updike and Philip Roth who are just as specific as the hardcore hacks but much better writers.

The dirty movies, on the other hand, compete very successfully with the sex sequences in commercial R or X-rated films. Not only are they more explicit, they are more believable. No one tries to make love covered with 38 pounds of sheets and blankets. And whereas the actors and actresses in the commercial films seem to be caught in the throes of some overwhelming passion that induces epileptic convulsions, the performers in the dirty movies seem to be enjoying themselves.

That is more than can be said for the patrons of the adult bookstores. Whether dropping quarters in the moviola machines, or browsing through printed pornography, they were deadly serious about their tasks. I had a sudden feeling that they were all columnists whose interest was strictly journalistic rather than prurient.

The patrons — all male — at a topless-bottomless bar on Lakewood Blvd. were a little more relaxed and considerably more distracted. In one corner, hardcore pornography was being depicted on a large movie screen. In another corner, an absolutely naked lady was going through the gyrations that marked the dirty movies of four years ago. Other almost-as-naked ladies moved through the crowd taking beer orders.

With all these choices, I wondered, will the customers concentrate on one of them, or will they chance whiplash by spinning their heads rapidly in an 180-degree arc? The answer became clear as I watched. The customers by a three-to-one ratio preferred the movie to the naked lady. I pondered on whether this indicated that fantasy was sexually more satisfying than reality.

By contrast, the almost-naked waitresses were careful never to glance at the movie screen, although they stopped now and then to watch the gyrations of the naked lady. Every subculture has its taboos, as we anthropologists say.

Actually, you might say that the performers and waitresses were dressed rather sensibly. The place was packed and it was as hot as an oven. It was either take your clothes off or drink more beer than you ought.

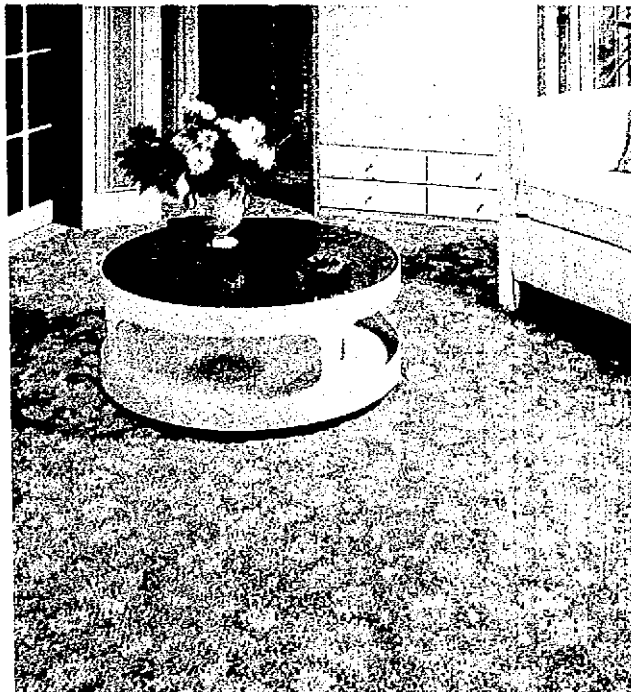

Over on Bellflower Blvd. in Bellflower, a sheriff's car was parked outside the Cozy Kitten, which boasts explicit sex movies in living sound and color. On the chance the place was being raided, I stopped and went in. No raid. A uniformed sheriff's officer was standing at the rear of the theater watching the movie.

I asked the lady selling tickets about this.

"He's on his lunch hour," she said.

Carl Sandburg . . .
"call man" for $10 a month

Q: I heard a rumor that Barbra Streisand's next leading man will be — Fidel Castro. Are they kidding? — S.R.R., Tucson, Ariz.

A: No kidding. Fidel was actually offered the role, we're informed by the producers of "Up the Sandbox." But the Cuban dictator demanded script approval. Soooo, in the scene where Barbra argues with "Fidel Castro," the part is played by an actor.

Q: Did Sukarno's widow ever marry that European millionaire she was linked with? — Mrs. Evelyn R., Sacramento, Cal.

A: No. Dewi didn't. At least not yet. The attractive widow is waiting in the wings for Geneva banker Francesco Paeza to get a divorce. Which may be a long time coming — if ever — since he's Catholic. Meanwhile his estranged wife and child are living in Spain.

Q: My husband claims he once read that Carl Sandburg worked his way through college by being a "call man." That's not what we think it is, is it? — Mrs. Stinton T., Washington, D.C.

A: no. In those days a "call man" was a fellow who slept in the local firehouse. When the whistle blew, he'd telephone the alert to the volunteers. For this chore, the now famous poet was paid $10 a month — while attending Lombard U. in his home town of Galesburg, Ill. Sandburg felt being a "call man" was much more pleasant and exciting than some of his other jobs — bricklayer, dishwasher, scene-shifter.

Q: I remember that years ago former Olympic swimming champ Eleanor Holm got a medal from Adolf Hitler. And I wondered, what did she ever do with it? — Elysee R., Buffalo.

A: "It wasn't a medal but a sterling silver swastika that I got, not from Hitler, but from his henchman, Hermann Goering," recalls Eleanor. "From it I had a mold made and a diamond Star of David put in the middle!"

Q: Was Lassie ever on radio? — Seth W. (an old radio buff), Richmond, Va.

A: Yes. Twenty-five years ago Lassie was not only on radio but barked on cue. However, when the script called for whimpering, growling and snarling, it was not really Lassie you heard, but a vaudevillian who imitated animals.

Q: When President Nixon appointed a Democrat (John Connally) to his Cabinet, wasn't this a breach of political etiquette? — T. Rierdon, Philadelphia.

A: No. There's plenty of precedent for naming a member of the loyal opposition to the inner circle. Harry S. Truman also was criticized for appointing a Republican to an important post. When an aide voiced dismay, the President admonished him: "You find the best man so that we can do the best job — and leave the politics to me!"

Q: Whom do people who live on tips consider to be the worst tippers? — La-zelle P., Kew Gardens, N.Y.

A: Most waiters, cab drivers, bellboys, barbers, beauticians and others who depend on gratuities seem to agree that the most frugal tippers are musicians, baseball, golf and football stars and women shoppers. Also doctors, who are forgiven "because their minds are elsewhere." Columnist Bob Sylvester once summed it up succinctly: "The louder the customer's mouth, the smaller the tip."

Q: We've got a bet going. I say there have been three Madison Square Gardens. My older brother says four. Who picks up the marbles? — Benny Randall, Staten Island, N.Y.

A: Neither of you. The newest Madison Square Garden, built over railroad tracks at 31st to 33rd Streets in Manhattan, is the fifth such structure so-named.

At various times the Indians called them Sasquatch, or the Oh-Mahs; residents of the rugged coastal region stretching from northern California to British Columbia named them Bigfoot, because of the giant tracks found throughout the area; believers and a few zoologists described them as an important scientific discovery; while skeptics labeled them a hoax.

But, by whatever name, the huge, hairy humanoids said to roam the unmapped mountains of the Northwest have been celebrated in statue, song and verse, hunted by hundreds of woodsmen and made the subject of more tall tales and legends than either the ubiquitous UFOs or the elusive Loch Ness Monster.

Expeditions have been mounted to locate the lair of Sasquatch, scores of the huge footprints have been preserved in plaster and the little community of Willow Creek, in wooded Humboldt County, even advertises itself as "The Gateway to Bigfoot Country."

The mysterious man-like creature has been seen ambling through the forests by campers, tracked along dry riverbeds by hikers, sketched by artists, pictured in a few fuzzy still photographs and recorded on a controversial strip of 16-millimeter motion picture film.

Yet, for at least a century and a half, Bigfoot has managed to elude capture.

Bob Gimlin, a 40-year-old trucker and part-time horse breeder who lives in Union Gap, Wash., had listened to the Bigfoot legends for years and remained a skeptic — until the day he saw one!

"It happened all of a sudden, just as we rounded a bend in the trail along Bluff Creek, northeast of Eureka, and not far from Willow Creek," Gimlin said during a recent interview from his home.

"There was no mistaking what it was, because it couldn't have been more than 90 feet away and it scared the hell out of our horses.

"They snorted and reared, and both Roger (Patterson) and I were thrown, but the Bigfoot didn't seem frightened by all the commotion, she just walked through the little clearing across the creek and hardly gave us a look.

"We could tell it was a female Bigfoot, because she had those large, pendulous breasts," Gimlin said.

The sighting, which occurred shortly after 3 p.m., on Oct. 20, 1967, didn't come as a complete surprise to Gimlin and his companion, since they were packing into the desolate wilderness especially to investigate reports of recent Bigfoot activity.

Patterson, a long-time Sasquatch hunter who succumbed in early 1971 to the ravages of Hodgkin's disease at the age of 41, had equipped himself with still and motion picture cameras in addition to his camping gear.

"Roger grabbed the movie camera and took off after the Bigfoot, shooting pictures and running at the same time," Gimlin said.

"She just kept walking, then she stopped for an instant and looked back . . . maybe she heard the whirring of the camera . . . then she headed for some thick brush, with Roger running like hell to keep up, and disappeared."

Gimlin described the creature he and Patterson chased and filmed as a bear-like or ape-like animal, covered with shiny black hair, standing at least seven feet tall — later confirmed by scientific measurements — and weighing between 350 and 500 pounds.

An unknown creature prowls California's wilds and sometimes comes near enough to be seen.

"Her head came to sort of a peak in the back, which could have been caused by longer hair, and she didn't seem to have any neck," Gimlin said.

"I mean her head just sorta looked like it was attached almost directly to her shoulders; and she had long arms, longer than a man's, because they hung almost to her knees.

"Oh yeah, there wasn't a lot of hair on her face and the palms of her hands and the soles of her feet were light, almost pink. But, the main thing is, she walked like a man . . . not like an ape, or a bear on its hind legs . . . but like a big man trying to hurry."

In every important respect, Gimlin's vivid description of Bigfoot matched hundreds of others of the fascinating man-animal recorded in California, Washington, Oregon and British Columbia since about 1849, and even earlier in the tribal legends of Indians scattered along the West Coast from Mexico to Alaska.

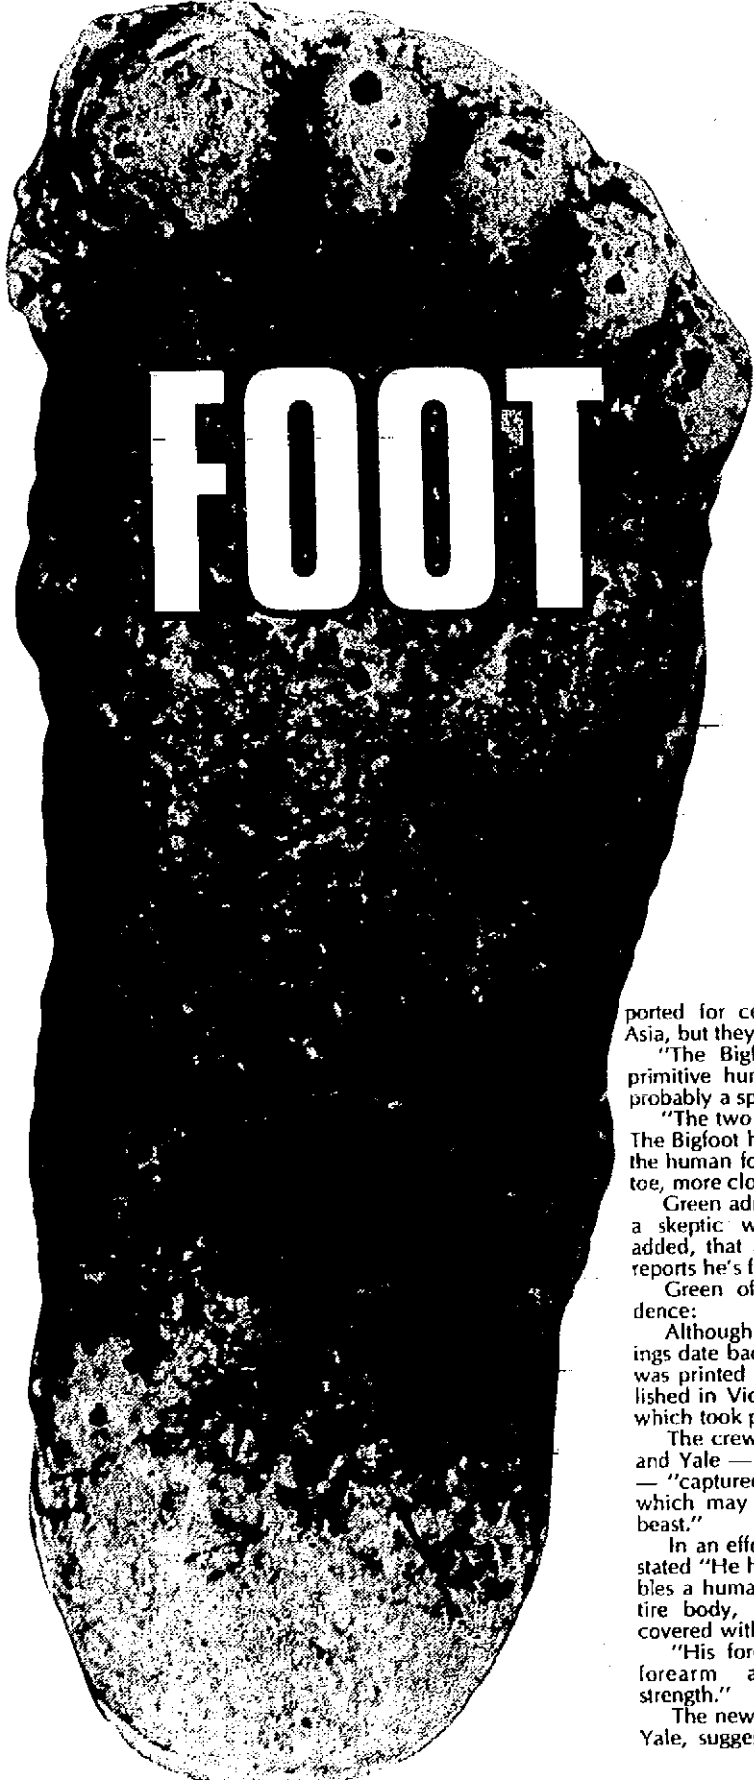

John W. Green, 45-year-old former newspaper publisher in Harrison Lakes, B. C., has spent years collecting and compiling Bigfoot reports and has written two books about the search for the Sasquatch, an Indian name meaning "hairy giant."

"Most of the reports are almost identical, although there have been variations in heights ranging up to almost nine feet, and weights, which run as high as 700 or 800 pounds," Green said in an interview.

"Some people have mistakenly lumped the Sasquatch or Bigfoot with the so-called 'Abominable Snowman,' or Himalayan Yeti, reported for centuries in Nepal and throughout Asia, but they're not the same.

"The Bigfoot appears to be some sort of primitive human-like animal, while the Yeti is probably a species of mountain climbing ape.

"The two are distinguished by their footprints. The Bigfoot has an unopposed big toe, similar to the human foot, but the Yeti has an opposed big toe, more closely related to the ape."

Green admitted that, like Gimlin, he began as a skeptic where Bigfoot was concerned, but added, that among the classics in his collected reports he's found some convincing evidence.

Green offered a few examples of that evidence:

Although newspaper reports of Bigfoot sightings date back to 1849, probably one of the best was printed in the "Daily British Colonist," published in Victoria, B. C., concerning an incident which took place on June 30, 1884.

The crew of a train operating between Lytton and Yale — about 100 miles east of Vancouver — "captured a creature, asleep near the tracks, which may truly be called half man and half beast."

In an effort to describe the animal, the report stated "He has long black strong hair and resembles a human being with one exception. His entire body, excepting his hands and feet are covered with glossy hair about one inch long.

"His forearm is much longer than a man's forearm and he possesses extraordinary strength."

The newspaper said a man named Tilbury, of Yale, suggested plans for exhibiting the animal, nicknamed "Jocko" by the train crew, but the report ended and no further details ever surfaced.

Another sighting was reported in 1886 from Crescent City, Calif., where frightened residents described the animal as a horrifying monster.

"The creature had a high shrill voice, a slanted forehead, broad wide nostrils, short ears and a light covering of hair over its entire body."

A similar creature paid a surprise visit in 1900 to a mining camp near Wrangell Island, in southwestern Alaska, and terrified four prospectors working a gold claim.

"They were neither men nor monkeys, yet they looked like both," one of the miners said.

"They appeared to be sexless and their bodies were covered with long coarse hair."

The monster seen washing roots in 1901 at a waterhole on wooded Vancouver Island had reddish brown hair and long arms, while the one spotted in 1915 outside New Westminster, B. C., was eight feet tall and had a taste for wild blue berries.

A whole tribe of hairy giants was blamed for the 1924 attack on a mountain cabin near Mt. St. Helens, Wash., where five men took refuge to escape a barrage of boulders hurled by the apparently angered animals, who then tried to smash their way inside by battering the door with their shoulders.

Hundreds of other sightings have been reported — at Ruby Creek, near Agassiz, B. C., in 1941; strolling in the woods near Todd Lake in the Oregon Cascades in 1942; outside a hunting camp on Mica Mountain in British Columbia in 1955 — and more recently, on Oct. 4, 1960, when one of the hairy giants chased John Bringsli out of a huckleberry patch near Nelson, B. C.

Bringsli, woodsman, hunter and fisherman for more than 35 years, swore on his reputation as an outdoorsman that the creature, "with wide shoulders, a flat face, ears flat against the sides of its head, covered with hair and standing almost nine feet tall," was definitely not a bear.

A young San Bernardino couple told of seeing an inquisitive Bigfoot in 1965 when he approached their campsite at San Geronimo Mountain, and in 1970 a group of campers in the Shasta-Trinity National Forest, near Willow Creek, claimed to have seen several of the creatures and found hundreds of footprints.

During the past two years Northern California has been literally flooded with Bigfoot reports and sightings have been reported from such unlikely places as Louisiana, Mo., and Cering, Nebr., in the past few weeks.

"I've spent 18 years of my life and more than $20,000 of my own money following these reports," said Rene Dahinden, Canada's foremost Sasquatch watcher, "and I'm convinced Bigfoot exists and that finding him could prove to be one of the most important scientific discoveries ever made."

Dahinden, 40, a former Swiss mountaineer who now works for a gun club at Richmond, B. C., outside Vancouver, returned recently from Europe, where he had gone to seek scientific support and some confirmation of his Bigfoot theories.

"I had to go to Europe to have the material analyzed, because scientists in Canada and the United States wouldn't even look at the evidence of Sasquatch," Dahinden said in an interview.

"They're insecure in their own field. They act smug and self-satisfied, yet totally indifferent to the facts.

"I suppose it's alright to believe there's something roaming around in the Himalayas, but it's a different matter when it's in our own back yard."

Dahinden traveled to England, Sweden, Finland, Switzerland and Russia carrying his evidence and exhibits.

"I had samples of hair, more than 100 photographs, a copy of the Patterson film taken in 1967, and several plaster casts, which in my opinion show movements and pressure points that indicate the footprints could not have been made by artificial means," Dahinden said.

He showed the film and talked to zoologists, paleontologists, biologists and specialists in biomechanics in London, Stockholm, Helsinki and Moscow.

"In Russia, I talked to an expert in the development and use of artificial limbs, and at Scotland Yard, I went looking for an expert on footprints to give me an opinion as to how artificial feet and live feet react under specific conditions," Dahinden said.

"There's no question something is making these footprints, because thousands of them have been found in California alone.

"I just want to determine if they are real, made by a creature like Bigfoot, or artificial, part of a gigantic hoax created by a man with artificial feet of some kind."

Dahinden, based on the painstakingly collected evidence, is convinced the tracks were made by the creature called Sasquatch.

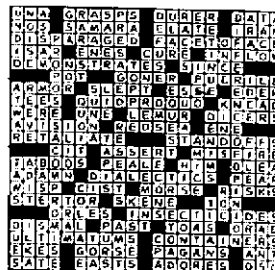

In addition to the casts, film and photographs, Dahinden carried with him to Europe a suitcase stuffed with tape recordings, eyewitness accounts, 150 written reports and historical records of Bigfoot sightings.

Although the scientific studies are still underway, Dahinden is optimistic about the final results on the basis of preliminary reports by experts such as Dr. John R. Napier, former director of the primate biology program at the Smithsonian Institution, who is now residing in London.

"He said there was nothing to indicate the motion picture film was a hoax," Dahinden said,

BIGFOOT

"but asked that he be given more time to study the material before reaching a final conclusion."

Other scientists who have seen the Patterson-Gimlin film have made similar comments, but few have offered to put their professional reputations on the line by saying the Bigfoot actually exist.

Dr. Ian McTaggart-Cowan, dean of graduate studies at the University of British Columbia, was quoted as saying, "The more a thing deviates from the known, the better the proof of its existence must be."

Skeptics, on the other hand, claimed the film was faked — possibly by a large man in a special fur suit — and pointed out that no Sasquatch bones or tools have ever been found and not one dwelling has ever been located.

"But game wardens and woodsmen have said the dead bodies or bones of wild animals are almost never found in the wilds, except along a road, or those killed by man," Dahinden said.

"We believe the Sasquatch is basically a non-territorial, omnivorous creature that makes no tools or dwellings and usually travels alone."

As to the question of faking the film, Green said, it was shown to Hollywood technicians and Disneyland special effects experts and both agreed it would be all but impossible to duplicate with costumes or makeup.

"And, even if it were possible, they said the cost would be a prohibitive million dollars or so," Green said, "which is a helluva lot more than anyone is going to spend on a practical joke."

Even if the film is discounted, Dahinden added, there's still no explanation for the footprints and the hundreds of unrelated sightings.

One of the largest footprints — measuring 17 1/2 inches in length and 9 inches in width — was found in 1969 in an isolated area of eastern Washington. Hundreds of others, ranging in length from 12 to 17 inches with corresponding widths, have been found throughout the vast, trackless wilderness of the Pacific Northwest.

The footprints, human-like except for their huge size, all show five toes and the depth of imprint indicates they were made by a creature of tremendous weight.

There is some scientific evidence, Dahinden said, that the Sasquatch may have migrated to this continent over a land bridge between Asia and North America, possibly during the Pleistocene Age, then moved south to escape the encroaching Ice Age.

Civilization forced them to retreat again, he Dahinden — "something is making these footprints."

When you're hot you're hot

Singles from Kraft are so fantastically popular for nutritious sandwiches, (hot or otherwise) it seems only sensible to bring out some delicious new flavors to experiment with.

Onion-Chive has a delicately seasoned flavor. Jalapeño comes from a Mexican pepper with a kind of tangy bite. Sharp tastes nice and cheddary. All Singles pasteurized process cheese food slices are individually-wrapped to keep their good flavors fresh. Now, if you want your sandwiches to work harder for you, try these new ideas.

Superburger. Able to leap the tallest appetite in a single bound. It's a better burger stacked with crisp lettuce, a slice of tomato and Onion-Chive Singles.

BIGFOOT

said, and they took refuge in the uncharted coastal forests and mountains — an area of almost 300,000 square miles — in Alaska, Canada, Oregon, Washington and northern California.

"With that much space to roam in, it certainly wouldn't be unrealistic to think they could avoid capture almost forever," he said.

But, Dahinden, Gimlin, Green and others, have no intentions of abandoning their search and allowing Bigfoot to wander unheeded through his wooded playground.

"I've spent years chasing these creatures, but now I've decided to stop running and concentrate more on the scientific aspects," Dahinden said.

"I'm sort of waiting for something to happen, but I just don't know what."

While Dahinden is waiting, an outfit called Northwest Research Association, headed by Ron Olson, who purchased Patterson's original film, is gearing up in Salem, Ore., to launch a scientific search for Bigfoot with audio-visual lures and tranquilizer guns.

Another search team, headed by Robert W. Morgan, of Miami, Fla., is making plans for the second phase of an expedition they started in 1970 through the rugged Cascade Mountains of Washington.

"I'm sort of limited by my job and the horses I breed, but I'd like to make another search," Gimlin said.

"But, at the same time, I've got to make a living."

Green, who recently gave up his newspaper, said he still receives scores of telephone calls about the elusive Sasquatch, and even after 15 years, admitted he still investigates an occasional sighting himself.

"When all the evidence is examined, there is no realistic explanation except that the creatures we call Sasquatch or Bigfoot do exist," Green said.

"And I think a concentrated effort should be planned and financed to find one for scientific study."

At the present time at least eight groups, large and small, are using aerial maps and dogs to scour the sprawling wilderness, where even logging roads or power lines are seldom seen, known as Bigfoot Country.

After all, it is possible that some unknown creature could be prowling that region, occasionally venturing near enough to civilization to be seen or leave its telltale tracks.

And some avid hunter, less squeamish than most, might just stumble across a careless Bigfoot and bring it in, settling the question at last for skeptics and believers alike.

We're running short of power.

Conserving energy is vital.

The demand for electricity in Southern California doubled in the past eight years. Whether we like it or not, it will double again in the years ahead.

Unless Edison is permitted to build additional power plants and transmission lines, it may become necessary to blackout blocks of customers on a rotational basis within two or three years.

Yet permits necessary to build any new major plants have been delayed or blocked for the past four years.

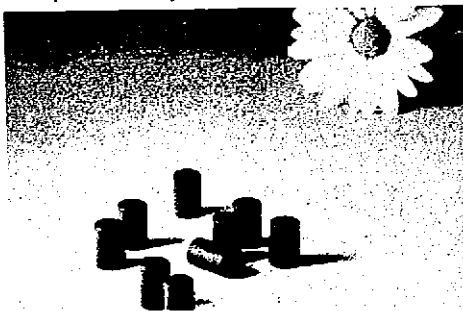

That's an immediate problem. We're working hard to resolve it.

The long-range problem requires finding more ways to conserve energy and to use our nation's total energy resources wisely. That involves all of us.

In Edison's fossil-fueled plants, for example, we're now able to produce 30% more electricity from a unit of fuel than in 1948. That helps.

Demand for electricity here keeps rising every year. Needed new sources of power must be built. Otherwise, blackouts may occur within two or three years.

At the San Onofre Nuclear Power Plant, fuel pellets which contain uranium are used instead of burning fossil fuels. This helps conserve oil and natural gas.

By using higher-voltage transmission lines, we're also able to deliver electricity more efficiently.

To find other energy-saving techniques, we're investing millions researching Geothermal Power, Fuel Cells, Fast Breeder Nuclear Reactors and other advanced generating methods.

We're working with industrial and commercial customers to conserve electricity in offices and factories. Heat from lights, for instance, can be recycled and used for heating systems.

Perhaps you can conserve energy, too. Have you considered ways to make every kilowatt count at home? We'll be happy to send you a list of practical suggestions.

THEY ROCK...N ROLL

And jeepers!
it's rough

The twisting, tortuous trail begins in the tiny mountain community of Georgetown. It snakes through the high Sierras, the Devil's Playground and it ends on the northwest shore of Lake Tahoe.

It would be tricky work on foot, but for 350 four-wheel drive vehicles, the three-day 20th Annual Jeeps Jamboree is a grinding, kidney-punishing 70 miles.

Cursing, sweating drivers joust with craggy cliffs and jagged rocks. Their vehicles leave a trail of oil and paint scraped off in the struggle with the devil who inhabits high mountain trails.

Respite comes after the first day when dust-choked drivers and vehicles descend with a swift mountain stream to the majestic pines and rich mineral waters of a valley called Rubicon Springs.

For awhile the engines are silent. No dust. No boulders. No bouncing.

There is time for listening to the waterfall or looking at the stars and wondering what it was like for the men who discovered this place in 1844 or for the people who settled it in 1867.

But, like the stagecoach which plied the trail from Georgetown to Tahoe a hundred years ago, the jeep riders cannot linger because their business is also to force the treacherous, reluctant mountains to let them pass. □

LUCAS

The following year, Campbell Hall at UCLA was the scene of the assassination of two Black Panther leaders—Alprentice Carter, assistant minister of defense, and John Huggins, area captain.

The Stiner brothers, George and Larry, members of the black militant group known as US were tried and convicted in Judge Lucas' courtroom.

Only it wasn't Judge Lucas' courtroom. The trial was held in the only courtroom in the building deemed suitable for tight security. (This was before the Sirhan Sirhan trial.)

Threats, allegedly from Black Panthers, had been received by everyone connected with the case. Rumors were rampant.

The judge traveled from his Rossmore home to Los Angeles with sheriff's department guards until he decided he might be safer as an anonymous figure rather than as such an obvious target and dismissed them.

The windows in the courtroom were kept closed and covered. The poorly air-conditioned room was made blazing hot with the late summer sun and the unconcealed hatred in the eyes of some of the black spectators attending the trial.

Judge Lucas ordered everyone searched thoroughly before being admitted to the courtroom.

The Stiner brothers got life. In late 1970, Thomas Devins was brought to trial before Lucas in a landmark case which rivaled the famous L. Ewing Scott-no corpse conviction.

Under his true name of Thomas Edward Uter, the youthful accused murderer and swindler was indicted for the slaying of a wealthy Los Angeles woman, Norma Carty Wilson, who disappeared while the two were on a business trip to Switzerland.

Her body was never found. The case made headlines all over the world.

The courtroom looked like a convention of Interpol with policemen and interpreters from all over the world giving testimony.

Devins was convicted and sentenced to life in prison.

The 2nd District Court of Appeal dismissed the conviction in March of 1970.

It ruled that the State of California had no jurisdiction to prosecute Devins for a murder which allegedly occurred in Switzerland.

The court upheld Devins' conviction on robbery and grand theft charges.

When out of the glare of press coverage of sensational trials, Lucas had quietly risen to the prestigious post of Supervising Judge of the Criminal Division of Superior Court, the chairmanship of the Court's Judicial Reform Committee and was a member of a half a dozen more select state and superior court committees. Lucas had been on the bench less than three years when the infamous Charles Manson, mastermind of the bloody killings of actress Sharon Tate and six others, came before him.

Their first clash came when Judge Lucas revoked Manson's telephone privileges because he had talked with newsmen.

Lucas denied a change of venue requested by attorneys because of publicity about the massacres.

He continued to hear all the pre-trial motions connected with Manson's case.

During one stormy session, when the diminutive killer shouted at the judge and turned his back on the bench, Lucas ordered him taken from the courtroom.

It was the first of many such incidents in that chaotic trial.

In the summer of 1971, the Lucas clan Mal, Joan, Greg, Lisa, Mal's mother, Mrs. Gina Lucas and Joan's mother, Mrs. Beulah Fisher, were sightseeing in Paris, on their way to the meeting of the American Bar Association in London.

Word came to their hotel that President Nixon had signed, at the Western White House, an appointment to the Federal Court for the vacationing judge.

Ten years before, Mal and Joan had gone to London to attend the American Bar Association meetings. He was young, inexperienced and no one paid him much attention in the throngs of distinguished attorneys and jurists.

This time he was received with accolades befitting a man who has achieved the second highest pinnacle in his profession, save the Supreme Court.

When asked how the appointment came about, Judge Lucas purposely becomes vague and overly modest.

It is a matter of record that he was asked to apply for the appointment by officials who were impressed with his work at the Superior Court level. Lucas says "Historically, federal judgeships are political appointments."

The Honorable Donald R. Wright, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California, thinks so highly of Lucas that he offered to administer the oath of office at formal ennobling ceremonies.

The formal oath-taking had to be postponed six months because the two men were so busy traveling they couldn't find a mutual date.

The traveling is about the only major change in the Judge's life.

The 9th Central District Circuit covers a large area of the state and he often substitutes for other judges as far away as Seattle. Adding excitement to the job is occasional travel to our nation's capital to participate in meetings at the highest level of government.

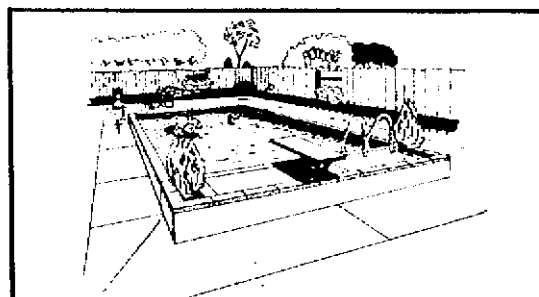

The appointment is, of course, for life. Lucas feels that one of the major rewards for his past and future years on the bench is the opportunity to contribute to judicial reform.

"Now the trend is for the Court to take the initiative in suggesting changes in the system and I am privileged to be a part of these history making years."

Modern-day Diana joins the boys on a night out

Liberated Goddess

You recall Diana, she of Roman mythology, daughter of Jupiter and Leto, twin sister of Apollo — virgin goddess of the moon and hunting? She of the avant-garde attire with that crescent moon headband, see-through minishimmy — clutching a bow and arrow, a brace of lean hounds alongside?

A bright and active outdoor lass, her diverse demands surely made her a real gal on the go — accounting, it must be suspected, for her alleged status as an inviolate maiden. She simply didn't have time. But, let us not conjecture upon her intimate life. Let us take up Diana as she is familiarly known — the Huntress, and never mind what she was hunting.

WRITER Pat Babrowski is an avid hunter and an associate member of the McDonnell Douglas Trap Club. Three of her ten trophies were won in competition with men, which makes her at least as good a shot as Diana the Huntress.

What might it be like for Diana today?

Although she appears to have been quite a loner, were she here now Diana might well be the only female among a bunch of men hunters. How did she get there? First of all, she was invited — and never mind how she wangled the bid.

She feels a little beat. No wonder. She has been traveling all night. Departure time notwithstanding, our maiden has learned that the hunting party invariably reaches its destination in the dead of night...and doubtless she has taken her turn at the wheel.

So, Di, old gal — here you are. You have joined, according to the United States census figures of 1965, the nation's more than 800,000 women who have taken out hunting licenses.

The current "count-the-women" tally is yet incomplete. Warren Page, president of National Shooting Sports Foundation, reports 15,977,588 hunting licenses were issued in 1971 nationally. A most conservative estimate would now put the number of feminine hunters well over the million mark.

And Diana, as legendary "guardian of springs and streams, and protector of wild animals and hunters," would be pleased to learn that 1971 reports show $108 million reaped from license fees were poured into the coffers of conservation.

But back to the hunt. This night Diana has properly gained access to one of the many controlled refuges in California — the Wister Unit of the Imperial Waterfowl Management Area near Salton Sea.

Having been jolted back to consciousness just when she had fallen asleep, she alerts to pitchblack darkness. This is it! The hunt is beginning.

Her fatigue vanishes as she feels the familiar tingle of excitement and her hands tremble as she pulls on more clothing and gathers her shooting gear. About her is the muffled sound of men's voices...the whine of dogs rattling their chain leashes, straining towards their day's chores...a quiet laugh...the "snick-snick" of shotguns being pumped.

The beams of flashlights stab the dark...headlights flick on and off, illuminating figures moving about. The aroma of thermos coffee and cigarettes mix with the musky scent of dew-wet shrubs and marshy mud.

She navigates the follow-the-leader route set for her. "This is a good spot." Ordered, "Now stay down!" our Huntress squats on her dignity in a "duck blind."

Long gone is the gossamer tunic customarily caressing her lissome limbs. And, say, what about those diaphanous draperies, Diana dear? Were they not a bit impractical — what with bounding into the brambles in hot pursuit of a bunny? And the weather? Didn't it rain or snow in the gardens of the gods? Never mind. You're all set now...

Diana is truly "in" with the "layered look." It was originated by one of her sisters to ward off the elements. An exercise in futility, this. There are two degrees of temperature outdoors — too hot and too cold.

In apparel she's playing both ends against the middle. Her lower half is encased in "hippies." No long-hair connotation here — these are thigh-high waders, lashed to her belt by rubber straps. No number of thick socks will prevent the boots from being too big. Her feet bump around inside with every move.

Over her jacket is a

peculiar garment — the hunting vest. It drags from her shoulders weighted down by cartridges (don't call 'em bullets!) inserted into elastic loops. A game pocket is in back and, unless she has stashed it nearby, sags with a box of 25 shells. Still more are in a leather pouch at her hip. Her flowing tresses are stuffed into an oddly patterned "camouflage" hat. Inside the crown is her license affixed with federal and state duck stamps.

Ah, yes, Diana, m'dear — more than your costume has changed since you went romping free in the forests. No longer may you seek your prey whenever or wherever you fancy. There are seasons, restrictions — limits, permits, tags, stamps of a wide variety. "Posted" areas signalling "No Trespassing, No Hunting, No Shooting, No Nothing!" abound. There are federal lands, state lands and private lands — wildlife preserves and open country... all planned for the conservation of land, mankind and nature's creatures. Your license fees and that of the millions of fellow nimrods further that controlled planning.

Instead of the gracefully curved bow, there is a seven, three - quarters pound, double - barrel, shotgun cradled in our girl's arms.

Along with the gun has come a whole new language of firearm terminology, gun lore and statistics — an endless maze of information both technical and historical. She is pleased to hear that she has a namesake — an exquisitely engraved gold inlaid weapon, termed "Diana" grade.

But let us not concern ourselves with how much our Huntress knows. Let's see how she makes out as she crouches in the cat-tails.

She giggles a bit, aware of the picture she makes. Another giggle quells a shiver as she recalls the happening just past.

The single file hunters had come to a halt before a wide pool of water. Sure that they could wade it without exceeding their boot tops, they had doubts about their smaller companion.

One of the hunters passed his shotgun and Diana's to another on high ground. He waded back, turned and presented his back to her, commanding she climb aboard. Our sports gal, a canny miss, blithely accepted the offer.

All went well with the piggy-back ride—that is, until the pair nearly reached disembarkation point. Diana became aware her gallant carrier was in trouble. The combined weight of her body and heavy clothing caused him to slowly mire down into the swamp bottom.

Thinking to rid him of his unusual burden, she leap-frogged over his head to land nimbly on the dry edge of the pond... only to glance back in horror to see him pitch forward, arms extended, face down... p-l-o-p!... into the muddy water.

Now at her post, changing positions and the weight of the gun, she waits. Was not the darkness lessening?

Wh-i-s-t! A dark form whips past as she peers into the gloom. What was that? Another darts overhead. Could it be? Were they...? Bla-a-am! Bla-a-am! White hot and red flames spout from a nearby shotgun. One of the black objects tumbles arching to earth. They're ducks!

Frantically she swivels her head. Where? Where? Startlingly near and far off are the sounds of gunfire. Dawnlight reveals hunters all about her, faces turned

NEW STEAM CLEAN

STEAM CLEAN injects wet steam with a cleaning additive into the fiber and instantly vacuums out the loosened dirt and harmful bacteria.

- Carpets are not only clean but SANITARY CLEAN.
- Carpets are DEODORIZED.
- Infectious bacteria and germs are gone.

RESULT

STEAM CLEAN cleans! Dirt and infectious bacteria removed. The carpet nap is raised and fluffed.

SEEING IS BELIEVING

You can actually see the dirt and grime STEAM CLEAN removes from your carpet. The Sudsy solution visible at the top of the bucket is the residue left in the carpet from the previous shampoo cleaning.

So What Else is New?

Everybody's talking about steam carpet cleaning, because it is the most efficient method. The important theory of proper steam carpet cleaning is instant vacuuming of the loosened dirt. Many cleaners claim their process includes soil retardant.

This is where Cremer's is different, because we know you can't extract immediately and leave enough soil retardant in the carpet to be of any use.

So after every carpet is thoroughly steam cleaned, Cremer's sprays on a separate application of DuPont's Soil Retardant. When this soil retardant is brushed-in, it coats the individual fibers with an invisible shield that prevents the soil that is carried in by the shoes or through the windows from sticking to the fibers below the surface where your vacuum won't reach.

When you vacuum your carpet once a week it will stay clean twice as long since the carpet will not hold dirt below the surface.

To help you keep your carpet in good condition between professional cleanings, Cremer's will give you, free, a 2-year supply of spotting material. All this is included, and backed by our 25-year reputation for quality and service.

SPECIAL OFFER

upward as they search the skies. There are shouts of triumph as hit birds cart-wheel down and mingle with wails of disappointment as they swoop free past the shooters.

In the East the sun flares the skies. . . brother Apollo is nicely on the job. Diana delights at the vista spread before her. In the distance v-formations of ducks appear in thin dark lines. Small groups of "quackers" swirl overhead only to flare away as a glinting gunbarrel betrays the hunter below.

She thumbs the safety of her shotgun as she seeks a target.

Wait! Here comes one! It's coming closer. . . and closer in direct line towards her. "Oh, Jupiter, don't let him see me . . . don't let him angle off . . . DON'T LET ME DO ANYTHING DUMB BEFORE ALL THESE MEN!

She stands, raises her shotgun and, almost in a single motion, slips the safety to "off", and presses the trigger. Bl-a-am! "I got him, I got him!" . . . the tumbling bird curves overhead to the ground behind her. At the same time our girl shooter lands on her backside in the mud—toppled over by recoil thrust.

Shotgun held aloft, gear-faden and laughing helplessly, she can only submit to being hauled up by a hilarious hunter.

A staccato sprinkling rattles the foliage about her. Great. It's raining . . . that will bring the ducks down. But, wait . . . it isn't rain . . . it's shot pellets! Showers of the leaden droplets are bouncing gently off her head and shoulders.

Reloading her weapon she again scans the skies. There Canadian geese soar high overhead, their honking calls heralding their autumnal journey southward. Skeins of snow geese, black wingtips accenting their whiteness, pass above wheeling groups of ducks. . . mallard, pintails, sprigs, teals . . . each with its distinctive silhouette and flight pattern.

There! Two fast flying birds draw nearer. . . and nearer. . . a pair of speedy cinnamon teals. Deliberately she watches them pass overhead and turns for the surer shot. They separate—one flies to her left, the other zips over into a hard right angle. Firmly holding her stance, she swings. . . body, arms and shotgun all one. . . and shoots. The left bird falls. She pivots slightly, moves the gun muzzle smoothly ahead of the right-hand bird. A second shot blasts. Down comes the other teal. A double!

About her are the sights and sounds of the hunt. The Bla-a-am! . . . Bla-a-am! of the guns. . . now coming at longer intervals. . . the splashing of dogs plunging through the growth-shrouded waters responding to the whistles of their masters.

Morning wears into afternoon. With changes in shooting stations, some hits and some misses (back to the trap range for practice!), in due time a limit of birds swings from the slotted "duck trap" slung over Diana's shoulder.

Musing over her recipe for duck with orange, or her favorite "bird en casserole" with a rich mushroom gravy, she returns to camp. Too late she realizes the folly of her proud display of bird-cleaning expertise.

"Hey, you really do good work, Di! Here's ours." A small Niagara of defunct fowl spills at her feet.

Our Huntress comes through in fine woman's lib style. She scrapes feathers off her hands, blows a few from her nose, and muttering, "Humph! . . . there's something else that hasn't changed," strides off to the privacy of nature's powder room. □

WAYNE SHARP
It's a Possibility

After dining recently on the sea food delectables at the Red Witch Inn, I told Wayne Sharp rather facetiously: "This is just a suggestion. But how about installing a periscope in your dining room so people will really realize that your restaurant is 17 feet below sea level?"

Wayne laughed. Then he said seriously: "Darned if that isn't an interesting idea. You know, we just might do that!"

It's possible that Wayne, a Long Beach councilman and new owner of the Red Witch-Brass Penny restaurant complex, might be able to solve the technical problems and install a submarine-like periscope, which would provide intriguing views of nearby bridges, ships and port installations. It would be still another bonus for the guests at the Red Witch who now enjoy such bonuses as the superlative sea food cuisine which Wayne originated and served for many years at his former harbor establishment, the Pierpoint Restaurant.

The Red Witch and Brass Penny have one of the most unusual locations in Long Beach harbor. Located at 700 Henry Ford Ave., they are on the site of the old Henry Ford auto assembly plant which turned out Fords many decades ago. During the harbor's subsidence era some years ago, the plant gradually sank, along with many other nearby installations. The two restaurants are protected by a high dike which keeps the ocean out. Yachts anchored in the Southwind Marina ride the swells only a stone's throw from the Red Witch. Their keels are higher than the inn's roof.

Open seven days a week, the Red Witch serves luncheon and dinner Monday through Friday and only dinners on Saturday and Sunday. The Brass Penny, which is larger and has banquet and entertainment facilities, is open for dinner Friday through Sunday nights. It serves breakfast and buffet luncheons seven days a week.

Both restaurants emphasize the sea food creations made from superb recipes which have been in the Sharp family for many years. Among the dinner entrees, $3.50 to $6.50, are grilled sea bass steak, baked rock cod (caught daily in nearby waters), abalone, filet of sole, king crab, lobster, scallops, shrimp, halibut, salmon and sand dabs as well as prime rib of beef and steaks. All are with Manhattan-style clam chowder or soup, salad (the dressing choices include chef Jim Adams' magnificent bleu cheese), potatoes, hot roll and butter. The Brass Penny's prices are slightly lower than the Red Witch's.

GUIDE by Tedd Thomey

I HAVE A FEELING that the average Long Beach housewife would find it difficult to turn out 10,000 chicken dinners a week and maintain her sweet disposition as well as the quality of her food.

I know an organization in town which does turn out thousands of fried chicken dinners every week and which maintains amazing quality control as well as its sweet disposition. It is, of course, Ray Weidemann's group of 10 Kentucky Fried Chicken shops, located in Long Beach, Lakewood and Bellflower.

I haven't the foggiest notion of how many Kentucky fried chicken dinners are cooked each week by Ray's company. It could be more than 10,000; perhaps even a lot more; or it could be less. Such statistics are, naturally and logically, a company secret.

I do know this, however. Ray and his right-hand man, Keith Nuttall, have developed a quality control operation which functions extremely well, week in and week out. Their scores of carefully-trained employees cook fresh, tender (never frozen) young chickens which turn out so juicy, so savory and so downright delicious that many homes throughout the area buy Kentucky Fried chicken dinners several times a week.

I suppose mistakes are made occasionally by Ray and Keith's employees. No one is ever 100 per cent perfect day in and day out. But our local Kentucky Fried Chicken shops come as close as is humanly possible to daily perfection. They use the renowned recipe originated by goateed Colonel Harland Sanders. Dipped in milk and eggs, the chicken is rolled in flour seasoned with 11 different spices and fast-fried to seal in all the natural juices and goodness.

The KFC system turns out chicken dinners at lower cost per serving than those cooked at other local restaurants. The average Long Beach housewife, no matter how hard she tries, can't turn out chicken as delectable as the colonel's — and her costs are doubtlessly higher. Thousands of housewives have discovered those facts for themselves in recent years, which explains why they buy Kentucky Fried Chicken for their family parties, backyard or park picnics and meetings or banquets in church or fraternal halls.

The boxed KFC dinner is $1.29 for three pieces of plump chicken with hot roll, honey, butter, mashed potatoes with gravy and coleslaw. The giant box of 12 juicy pieces is $3.49 and the king-sized bucket is $5.29 for 15 pieces, a pint of mashed potatoes, a pint of gravy, a pint of coleslaw and six rolls. Other sizes of boxes, buckets and party packs are also offered.

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Prostaglandins, a new type of medication, have now been administered experimentally to induce labor at term in about 5,000 women throughout the world. Results have been successful in a high percentage of cases, researchers report.

The prostaglandins are expected to have a wide range of medical applications — from regulating fertility to inducing labor at term. They also can be used to induce labor earlier, to perform therapeutic abortion.

Upjohn Co., a pharmaceutical manufacturer, expects to bring the first prostaglandin drugs to market in the near future.

At a recent medical symposium, medical investigators told of use of two members of this medication family — PGE-2 and PGE-2 — in induction of labor.

Dr. Julian Elias of King's College Hospital in London said these compounds, administered either orally or by intravenous injection, worked successfully in 30 patients. There were no adverse effects on either mothers or newborn infants, he says.

In other study, this involving 169 women, Dr. Gerald Anderson of Yale University school of medicine concluded that PGE-2-alpha, PGE-2 and a traditional drug, oxytocin, were equally effective in patients, including those in whom labor induction was classified as difficult.

Dr. S. M. M. Karim of Makerere University medical college, Kampala, Uganda, says that prostaglandins have been administered to induce labor in 3,500 women in his country.

Winter skin diving or scuba diving may be dangerous for those who suffer from the symptoms of a cold or sinus infection.

Such diving, doctors say, is especially hazardous for persons who fit into any of 13 caution categories. The categories include:

Overweight, high blood pressure, perforated eardrum, sinus trouble, inability to equalize pressure in ears, cold or other nose and throat infection, diabetes, epilepsy, claustrophobia, head injury, asthma or other respiratory disorder, over 40 years old, and use of alcohol or drugs that dull the senses.

When a diver has a cold or sinus trouble, he cannot clear his sinuses underwater. The resulting pressure inequality causes congestion, called "sinus squeeze." And this can cause hemorrhaging.

The warning comes from Dr. Frank C. Henry of Virginia Mason Research Center, Seattle, in the medical journal Transactions.

No drug has been proven to be better than a placebo (dummy pill) in the treatment of chronic alcoholism, a doctor contends.

Dr. Jorge A. Viamontes, clinical director of the Alcohol and Research Center of the Malcolm Bliss Mental Health Center, St. Louis, Mo., says that good nursing care seems to be the main factor in improvement rather than drugs used.

Dr. Viamontes, in a report in the American Journal of Psychiatry, says his claim about the efficacy of drugs also applies to the treatment of alcoholic withdrawal.

Physicians, particularly surgeons, are at greater risk of acquiring hepatitis from patients than most doctors realize.

Hepatitis is a virus-caused liver disorder which can be disabling for weeks.

Dr. N. Joel Ehrenkranz, professor of medicine at the University of Miami school of medicine, reports that in a two-year period, there were five cases of hepatitis among 85 staff surgeons at a hospital. In addition, there were also five cases of the disease among ancillary surgical personnel.

Surprisingly, there were no cases among pediatricians where one would expect the risk to be great. But three of 100 house physicians on medical or associated services acquired hepatitis.

Most vulnerable personnel are those who work on cardiovascular or artificial kidney services where large amounts of blood are used.

The report is in Surgical Advances, a newspaper for surgeons.

A T-shaped device containing some copper is being tested extensively in the United States as an inside-the-womb contraceptive device.

Use of the device appears to be a satisfactory method of birth control even for a woman who has never borne a child.

Up to now, larger intrauterine devices (IUDs) have caused severe cramping and required removal by a doctor among women who have never before had a baby. And smaller devices have been associated with high pregnancy and expulsion rates.

The new device is made of polyethylene impregnated with barium sulfate, and the vertical arm of the T is wrapped with thin copper wire. Copper appears to have a contraceptive property.

Main research with the copper T is being conducted at Women's Hospital of the Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center.

The copper T, according to Dr. Robert Israel, appears to be a good alternative to The Pill.

Q. Did Humphrey Bogart beat his wives?—Helen Bloom, New York, N.Y.

A. Not all of them. He was particularly rough on Mayo Methot, his third. But he handled his fourth and last, Lauren Bacall, with some gentleness.

HUMPHREY BOGART WITH MAYO METHOT

Q. Isn't Jackie Kennedy Onassis quietly moving to the Isle of Capri? Isn't she tired of her Greek island and the island of Manhattan?—Wes Grimes, Boston, Mass.

A. Jackie Onassis, 43, hopes soon to acquire a villa on the Isle of Capri, off Naples, Italy. Her husband Aristotle, 66, will probably give her the villa this October for a fourth wedding anniversary gift.

Q. Can you tell me what has happened to Leni Riefenstahl who photographed the 1936 Olympic Games for Adolf Hitler?—P. T., Manchester, N.H.

A. Leni Riefenstahl, 70, was accredited to cover the Olympic Games this year by a British newspaper, The Times of London.

LENI RIEFENSTAHL AND ADOLF HITLER IN 1938

Q. Is it true that when Frank Sinatra plays golf, he is guarded by Spiro Agnew's Secret Service agents?—H. L., Palm Springs, Calif.

A. When Spiro Agnew and Frank Sinatra, who have become fast friends, play a round of golf, say at the Tamarisk Country Club in Palm Springs, the Vice-President is always protected by half a dozen Secret Service agents. These gentlemen keep the fairways under constant watch. They run after each ball, while Sinatra and Agnew follow in their orange carts. The Secret Service is not charged with protecting Sinatra but protecting Agnew.

Q. Lucille Ball's daughter Lucie was recently married to an actor named Phil Vandervort. Is young Lucie getting divorced?—Roberta Rice, Baltimore, Md.

A. At this writing Lucie Arnaz Vandervort has separated from her husband.

LUCIE AND HUSBAND AT THEIR WEDDING

Q. How much money has the United States spent on armaments since World War II? And is it true that we are mostly responsible for escalating the arms race?—Charles Schaeffer, Detroit, Mich.

A. The U.S. has spent about $2 trillion on armaments since 1945. According to Dr. Herbert York who was President Eisenhower's director of Defense Research, the United States has usually been the first nation in the past two decades to develop and deploy new weapons systems. Whereupon the Soviet Union feverishly follows suit, sometimes producing more bombs or more megatonnage. We then introduce a new weapons system which the Soviets steal or copy, thus the arms race continues ad infinitum. York's documentation appears in his book, Race to Oblivion.

BEFORE BREAKUP: ALI MACGRAW AND BOB EVANS

Q. What broke up the Ali MacGraw-Bob Evans marriage?—Lucy Manners, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Evans, an actor-turned-producer, is a difficult man to live with. This is the third of his marriages to turn sour.

Q. I understand that Margaret Truman has been paid $2 million for the biography of her father, former President Harry Truman, because he made available to her certain private papers no one has ever before seen. Is that so?—F. L., Columbia, Mo.

A. Margaret Truman Daniel has received no such sum for the book, Harry S. Truman, she wrote with the help of historian Thomas Fleming. The book will be published on Jan. 8, 1973, by William Morrow & Co. Life magazine will publish two segments in November, and Pocket Books will publish the paperback editions. The Book-of-the-Month Club will probably choose it for its February selection. If the book sells exceedingly well both here and abroad, Mrs. Daniel may earn as much as $1 million on the project which has taken her 18 months to prepare. But even that sum is doubtful since history books are not particularly best sellers.

For example, Svetlana Alliluyeva's remembrances of her father, Joseph Stalin, entitled Twenty Letters to a Friend, was a literary disappointment. As to Harry Truman's private papers, it is more probable that his private salty opinions rather than extracts of his papers will pepper his daughter's book.

WOMEN DENY HUSBANDS SEX

How does a wife get a husband to stop drinking?

In Sydney, Australia, some wives, in the tradition of Aristophanes' comedy, "Lysistrata," are withholding sex from their husbands.

Once the husbands stop drinking, their sexual privileges are restored.

It's all part of a program directed by Professor S. H. Lovibond, a psychologist at the University of New South Wales.

In the past three years more than 250 problem drinkers have enrolled in the course, which boasts a 60 percent success rate. The course is structured around aversion techniques, and wives as well as husbands must take it to learn the various methods.

"We don't tell the wives," explains Professor Lovibond, "that withholding sex is one aversion technique, but each is left to devise her own method. Quite a few have devised sex withholding to help an alcoholically addicted husband conquer his weakness."

Professor Lovibond also uses electroshock therapy on his problem drinkers to dissuade heavy drinkers from the bottle.

CHINA RELAXES

Western dancing in public, even for foreigners, has been banned for years in the People's Republic of China. Now, since President Nixon's visit, the Chinese are considering the possibility of allowing Western-type dancing in a new Peking club to be opened later this year for diplomats.

GIRL AND BOY TOGETHER: IF THEY FOLLOW STATISTICS, SHE'LL LIVE LONGER.

WEAKER SEX, MY EYE

Compared to men in other countries, the American male does not fare too well when it comes to survival. In the Soviet Union, life expectancy for newborn males and females is equal: age 70 for both. But in the United States, according to Dr. Richard Gubner, writing in "Medical Tribune," men have a life expectancy 7½ years less than women.

Moreover, Dr. Gubner points out:

(1) The white male must first reach the age of 57½ years before he equals what is a woman's birthright--i.e., the prospect of surviving to 75. The period of 57-plus years he requires to catch up to the female expectation of life at birth is a very sizable handicap in the race of biological time.

(2) Males who have survived this handicap and have attained the retirement age of 65 still are disadvantaged compared to the female of 65. His further life expectancy is 13 years, hers 16.5.

(3) The disparity between male and female is widening, not narrowing. Modern miracles of medicine have seemingly helped women as a group and men individually but not collectively enough to affect vital statistics. Thus the expectancy of life for the male of 65 since the mid-1950's has shown no increase at all either in the United States or elsewhere...

Anyone who doubts the biological inferiority of the human male should consult the United Nations Statistical Yearbook of 1971. It is crammed with facts and figures proving that as regards health and longevity, it is much better in the U.S. to be born a female.

PREVENTABLE BLINDNESS

Ten to 15 million people in the world are blind. Half needlessly so. Their blindness could have been avoided had it been detected in time.

The World Health Organization (WHO) recently reported that conclusion after questioning 135 member countries.

Dr. Marcolino Candau of Brazil, director-general of WHO, points out that there is a crying need for more widespread medical services in developing countries, especially those wracked by trachoma, a contagious virus eye disease, which is easily preventable.

In the U.S. and Europe, the blindness rate is one in 500. In Asia and Africa it is one in every 100, and in some countries more. In parts of west and equatorial Africa, 30 percent of the people suffer from "river blindness," caused by a species of black fly.

In India alone there are 125 million cases of trachoma, preventable by applications of antibiotics.

Another major cause of blindness in underdeveloped countries is malnutrition, which leads to a Vitamin A deficiency.

NEW BREAK

Pregnant women in Japan are getting a new break. The government says they no longer will have to worry about the morning and rush-hour congestion on buses and in commuter trains.

Effective immediately all pregnant women in Japan will be allowed to report to work one hour late in the morning or leave one hour early in the evening.

STEAM ROOM AND HEART RISK

Sauna baths and steam rooms in which middle-aged men hope to "sweat out poisons" or "get rid of a hangover" may strain a man's heart.

So warns the "British Medical Journal" in a report from Middlesex Hospital by Dr. Peter Taggart and his research colleagues.

Dr. Taggart and his researchers measured the electrical activity of the heart during exposure to intense sauna bath heat. They found that the heart changes resembled those usually associated with coronary heart disease.

Taggart concludes, however, that for healthy people who have been accustomed to steam rooms and sauna baths, "the sense of relaxation and well-being will continue to outweigh the potential dangers of the circulatory gymnastics involved."

If you're in the middle or old-age groups, he advises, and you're taking a sauna for the first time, you should limit yourself to five minutes.

Taggart and his associates got onto the problem after a British jockey, aged 30, suddenly died of a heart attack in a sauna bath. Subsequent research showed that 67 people died in sauna baths in 1970 in Finland, where doctors have long warned against sudden exposure to intense heat by heart disease patients.

What Taggart and his researchers did was to attach electrocardiographic equipment to the chests of men taking sauna baths. Some of these volunteers were healthy and some were men with heart disease whose rehabilitation programs called for brief steam baths. The heat in the sauna bath was maximized at 110 degrees centigrade, well above the boiling point of water.

The electrocardiograms thereupon showed in many cases that an insufficient supply of blood was reaching the heart muscles of both the sick and well patients.

TOP SALARIES

The Soviet Union declines to tell its people how much it pays its President, its Prime Minister, or the head of the Communist Party. But it is likely that no country pays its chief executive as well as the United States. President Nixon receives a yearly salary of $200,000.

Great Britain's Prime Minister is paid $49,000 yearly; West Germany's Chancellor is paid $38,000.

One of the most poorly paid is the Prime Minister of Japan whose base pay is somewhere around $2200 a month, and whose retirement pay is negligible by U.S. standards. For example, Eisaku Sato, who resigned as Prime Minister of Japan this past July after eight years and seven months in office, received $11,590 in retirement allowances.

BLACK POWER AT THE BOX OFFICE

The big news at the film box office these days is black.

Black films, produced by the major studios but in most cases written, directed by and starring blacks, are earning lots of green.

The trend started two years ago with "Cotton Comes to Harlem" (United Artists), which grossed $5 million. Then last year "Shaft" (MGM) hit it big, grossing $18 million in the U.S. and Canada. Hoping to repeat their success, the studios hurriedly put out sequels—"Shaft's Big Score!" and "Come Back Charleston Blue."

Other black titles on the marquee these days: "Cool Breeze" (MGM), a black gangster film; "The Man" (Paramount), starring James Earl Jones as the first black President; "Super Fly" (Warner Brothers), about drug pushing;

"Melinda" (MGM), a love story-murder mystery; "Across 110th Street" (UA), a detective thriller, to be released in December.

Also in release is "Malcolm X" (Warner Brothers), a documentary of the assassinated leader.

The studios are in such a hurry to tap the black box office that in many cases they are merely coloring old success stories black. "Cool Breeze," for example, is a black remake of John Huston's "Asphalt Jungle." Shaft is James Bond in blackface, and "Blacula," produced by American International, is none other than the first black vampire. The old formula, spiced with black jive and ghetto vernacular, remains acceptable to whites, who constitute from one-third to one-half of the box office for black films.

There is, however, a trend to more militant black films, such as "Sweet Sweetback's Baadasssss Song," which last year grossed $13 million to become one of the most profitable independent films ever made. "Sweetback" (black slang for superstud) is an angry, anti-white film of social protest for blacks only. Melvin Van Peebles, who wrote, produced, scored, directed and starred in the film, is now at work on an adaptation of his Broadway show, "Don't Play Us Cheap!"

Meanwhile, the Hollywood branch of the NAACP has established a new rating system to alert blacks that the new films may be just as racist as the old films which portrayed blacks as subservient shufflers.

"The transformation from the stereotyped Stepin Fetchit to super nigger on the screen," declares Junius Griffin, leader of the Hollywood NAACP chapter, "is just another form of cultural genocide."

"We must insist that our children are not constantly exposed to a steady diet of so-called black movies that glorify black males as pimps, dope pushers, gangsters and super males," Griffin continues. "We will not tolerate the portrayal of black women on the screen as women of loose morals who climb in and out of bed."

Two of the first films to be "blacklisted" by the NAACP's rating committee are "Super Fly" and "Blacula."

"COME BACK CHARLESTON BLUE"—BLACK IS BEAUTIFUL AT THE BOX OFFICE.

New home—and hope—for wayward girls: Instead of being sent to reform schools, now abolished in Massachusetts, these unwed mothers are in a "group home" set up under state auspices. They're permitted to keep babies.

Shut Down Reform Schools?

Massachusetts has, and here's what's happening

by Sid Ross & Herbert Kupferberg

The way it used to be: Girl poses in her old "isolation room" at Lancaster Girls School to show punishment formerly meted out to inmates.

BOSTON, MASS.
If Jerome Miller had his way, every reform school in the United States would be closed down tomorrow.

Who's Jerome Miller? He's a 40-year-old Ph.D. out of Minnesota who has been Commissioner of Youth Services for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts since October, 1969. In his three years in office, he has abolished the Bay State's system of training schools for youthful offenders. And he says the U.S. won't solve its juvenile delinquency program until all the other states do the same.

"Reform schools are no damn good," he says. "They neither reform nor rehabilitate. The longer you lock up a kid in them, the less likely he is to make it when he gets out. They don't protect society. They're useless, they're futile, they're rotten."

Dr. Miller has replaced Massachusetts' training school system with a network of halfway houses, group shelters, foster homes, forestry work, special counseling services, and community action programs. Of 2000 boys and girls who would otherwise be behind bars, only 100 hard-core, violent cases are still under confinement, being treated in special psychiatric care facilities.

Miller, who has had to defend his reforms against a spate of Massachusetts critics, cites killer Charles Manson as a classic example of the failure of training schools. Manson spent some of his adolescent years in a juvenile institution. Says Miller: "The lockup, maximum-security training school escalates the potentiality toward violence."

Amateurs into pros

Miller also cites the 60-80 percent rate of recidivism—or backsliding to criminal ways—among youths who have spent time in reform school. He agrees with the thesis that about all a reform school teaches "is how to make an amateur car thief a professional."

He charges that such standard reformatory punishments as taking away children's clothes, putting them in isolation, and making them scrub the floor with a toothbrush, are not only degrading but self-defeating. "These things don't change the kids, and they don't contribute to law and order," he says. "All they do is make a kid a thing, not a human being."

To get young offenders out of reformatories, Miller is ready to take the risk that they may commit crimes, even serious crimes, although so far there have been no major incidents involving youngsters in his program. "If any of our kids goes too far, we whisk him off the street," he says. "We feel that there's less peril and more potential in keeping him outside and working with him rather than locking him up for a time and dumping him out again—over and over again."

'Firm but fair'

The youthful offenders whom Miller has "sprung" from such solidly established Massachusetts penal institutions as Bridgewater, Shirley, Roslindale, Oakdale, Lancaster, and Lyman haven't simply been turned loose onto the streets. Miller, a psychiatric social worker who got his degree from Catholic University in Washington, D.C., and worked with U.S. Army stockade prisoners in England and later in the Ohio correctional system, says he opposes complete permissiveness and favors "firm but fair" limits when a child gets into trouble.

Instead of forcing such youngsters into the institutional lockstep, he is placing many of them in approximately 100 "halfway houses" or "group homes" throughout the state. These are run by private organizations and agencies ranging from religious groups to a Black Muslim unit. They get their funds from Miller's Department of Youth Services—which he says is far less costly than paying for penal institutions.

REFORM SCHOOLS CONTINUED

Group homes still maintain a certain amount of discipline and punishment, but Miller has found that residents are much more amenable to correction than they would be in reform schools. "Meting out penalties for wrongdoing is the role of the family," he explains, "and the group home is a type of family. If punishment is called for, it's given out by your own."

PARADE visited a typical group home, the Libra Halfway House in Cambridge. Libra, which is for boys only, has a set of strictly enforced regulations, including rules against liquor and drugs. Among its residents are black and white youths. Some have jobs, some attend school, other are involved in counseling and other rehabilitation programs. All are on parole, and must check in every night. Violations of rules are punished with loss of privileges, confinement to the building, and the like.

Girlfriends visit

Libra's atmosphere is fairly homelike, with girlfriends allowed to visit. After dinner, boys and girls alike sit around the kitchen table and talk.

"This is one of the things I like here," says a 17-year-old boy. "My girl can visit me like it was my own home. Well, it is my home, really. I've been here two months and I'm getting straightened out. I was in Shirley twice and Roslindale a few times. You were a nothing there. There was fights and stealing and punishment; it was like animals. I used to be bitter, but not now. I know I'll make it okay. Here you don't fool around—you'd be hurting yourself."

At the Kennedy House for Girls in Jamaica Plain, an old frame dwelling set back from the street, an unmarried 16-year-old mother holds her baby in her arms and says: "My big thing was running away from home. Then boys. I got pregnant. I want to keep my baby now—he's all I got—but my family is against it. I don't know what I want out of life, or what'll happen to me. But here they talk to you, they're straight with you, they understand you, and they've got a lot of patience."

No theft problem

Among the most visible of the rehabilitation projects instituted under Miller's let-them-out approach is an East Boston ice-cream parlor which is manned by 15 youngsters with delinquency records. Under the auspices of a non-profit enterprise called Community Aftercare Program (CAP), the young parolees and others are paid $1.75 an hour, 20 hours a week. "No one thinks of stealing," remarks a 15-year-old girl named Lynda, "because we'd be stealing from each other."

"It sure is great," adds 15-year-old Billy, originally picked up for car theft. "It's the first time I ever got paid for working, or that anybody trusted me with money."

The CAP ice-cream parlor is being bankrolled by a 21-year-old Harvard senior named Tom Wolfe, who laid out $5000 of his own money. A number of college Youth Advocate Volunteers have enrolled in another one of Miller's Working out their problems: These former delinquents run their own ice-cream parlor in Boston. Projects like this get better results than incarceration.

Dr. Jerome Miller says old system of locking up young offenders is failure, and must be replaced nationwide.

programs, usually working as "big brothers" to delinquents on a one-to-one basis.

Miller has received solid backing from Governor Francis Sargent, who appointed him to head the State's new Department of Youth Services following a series of scandals in the 1960's at several training schools, then run by the Youth Services Board. "I told the Governor exactly what I wanted to do when he was considering me for Commissioner," says Miller. "I told him I wanted to move away from punitive institutions to child care models. We want to be advocates for children, not jailers. We want to help them right in their own communities."

Outside backing

Miller also has the support of juvenile corrections experts throughout the country, many of whom would like to see their own states shut down their reform schools, too. Milton C. Rector, executive director of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, calls the decision to abolish the Massachusetts institutions "a courageous step in the right direction."

Although Miller is convinced he's on the right track, his reforms have also run into a barrage of opposition. His critics range from detention guards whose jobs are in jeopardy, to legislators who favor sterner methods of dealing with delinquents. He's been denounced as "permissive," "soft-headed," and "a bleeding heart," and accused of "subverting the juvenile justice system" and "endangering public safety."

After heading up a legislative investigation of the DYS, State Representative Robert J. McGinn declared: "I think Miller is well-qualified and his ideas are good, but he's moving far too fast. There's not enough screening of the homes to which kids are sent, and there's not enough screening of the kids themselves before they're sent back into society."

State Senator Francis X. McCann, chairman of a special committee on state corrections, accuses Miller of making "a farce out of justice in Massachusetts" and recently advised him to "get on his bike and pedal back to Ohio."

Communities object

Opposition has spilled out of the legislature into local communities, some of which are up in arms against the idea of halfway houses operating in their areas. In Malden last January an angry crowd at a meeting expressed such stiff resistance to having even carefully screened, non-chronic offenders in a house operated by a group called Adolescent Counseling in Development (ACID) that the project had to be shelved. It's still in limbo.

Dr. Miller, a rumped, boyish-looking man who's married to a psychiatric nurse and operates out of a tiny, cluttered office in downtown Boston, is admittedly impatient and scornful of his critics. He's especially irritated by the argument that he's moving "too fast," and that he should have phased out the institutions gradually rather than clamping them shut practically at once.

"You almost have to force the community to do its job," he says. "There'll never be real progress without turmoil. You've got to move fast. You just can't change, or modify the reform schools. Any reforms you make will get watered down and trickle away. The training schools are the backbone of the old system and have to be abolished. They're going the way of the almshouse."

Miller points to a recidivism rate in the group homes of only 18-20 percent—about a third of the reform-school rate—as evidence that the new approach is working.

Smash old cells

A year after Miller took charge, he held a symbolic ceremony at Shirley Industrial School to signify his drastic changeover. On a dark and rainy winter night, 10 youngsters, at a signal from the new DYS chief, swung sledgehammers into the walls and bars of solitary confinement cells in which each had spent punishment time. They left the place a shambles.

In much the same way, Jerome Miller has made a shambles of the century-old delinquency reform structure of Massachusetts. In its place he has erected something he thinks will serve better and last longer—a system in which young delinquents are treated not as hopeless criminals but as erring humans who can win back their place in society.

It is called "Calories and Carbohydrates" by Barbara Kraus, with a foreword by Edward B. Greenspan, M.D. The unique feature of this book is that it lists 7500 products with their brand names as well as basic foods such as meats, fresh vegetables and fresh fruits which do not have a brand identification. ## What Else Is Cooking...

■ Vitamin D is needed for healthy bones and teeth, and for the absorption and utilization of calcium and phosphorus by the body. It is found in fortified milk, egg yolk, liver, certain fish, especially tuna, salmon, sardines and herring. With the aid of sunlight the body can manufacture its own.

■ Vitamin E: While this vitamin is not stored in the body to any great extent, deficiency is not a problem. At the moment research with respect to the value of Vitamin E in cardiac troubles is of interest to the medical profession, with the usual pros and cons. Vitamin E is known to protect red blood cells and is thought to prevent the destruction of Vitamin A in the intestines. It is found in oils of wheat germ, rice germ, cottonseed, green leafy vegetables, nuts, legumes, salad oils, shortenings and margarines.

■ Vitamin K: This vitamin promotes normal blood clotting, but large doses (especially synthetic types), taken over a long period of time can be toxic. In food, Vitamin K is found in the green leaves of spinach, kale and cabbage. It is also found in cauliflower and pork liver.

Always remember that vitamins work together as a team, often in conjunction with mineral elements, and that a nutritious diet must provide enough of each to maintain health.

Storing Chicken

With fresh chicken, loosen wrappings and store in coldest part of refrigerator for two days. For longer storage, rewrap in moisture-vapor resistant material and freeze. Maximum storage in the freezer, if properly wrapped, 12 months.

Dessert Data

The number one frozen dessert is still ice cream, but ice milk has already claimed 1/4 of the market. The latter is usually less expensive and is lower in calories (less butter fat). Growing popularity reflects a shift in consumer preferences toward lower fat products, according to the US Economic Research Service.

Dominique Sanda:

Is She the New Garbo?

by Lloyd Shearer

Dominique Sanda, French actress who scored in "The Garden of the Finzi-Continis," and whose sensitive, pensive beauty has movie studios bidding for her services.

PARIS.

Ever since Greta Garbo retired from the screen in 1941, the film industry has searched avidly for her replacement as a romantic tragedienne.

It may have found her in Dominique Sanda, 21, a French actress of sad, sensitive beauty, unconventional sex background, and accidental acting talent.

A mother without marriage, a well-educated, bourgeoisie bohemian, Dominique to date has worked in seven films, all European, of which only two, The Conformist and The Garden of the Finzi-Continis, have been widely released in the United States. In both she played a girl pre-doomed by the decadence of her times.

She is currently working here in her first film in the English language, Impossible Object, which is the search for love. She plays the role of a young married Frenchwoman who becomes the mistress of actor Alan Bates, with whom she has an out-of-wedlock child.

The similarity to her off-screen life is striking, for the actress is the mistress of Christian Marquand, the father of her 5-month-old son, Yann.

Worldly charm

Marquand is one of those middle-aged French lovers, an actor-director type long perched on the petals of the film business, who specializes in dazzling young, impressionable beauties with his man-of-the-world charm. A longtime buddy of Marlon Brando, one of whose sons is named after him, Marquand married Tina Aumont when she was 16. Tina is the daughter of French actor Jean-Pierre Aumont and the late Maria Montez. The marriage between Tina and Marquand lasted only two years, but for the past five years, Tina, well-taught in the Marquand ambience, has been living in Paris with Frederick Pardo, the artist.

Dominique Sanda, tall, thin, sensitive and self-named (real name Dominique Vairaine), the latest of the Marquand protégées, is a native Parisienne who was born into a fairly well-to-do family on March 11, 1951 ("I changed my name because I didn't want to embarrass my parents"). Her father and brother are engineers, and no member of the family except Dominique has ever remotely been connected with show business.

"My mother's family," she explains, "were originally Celts and belonged to the sea. They were ships' captains for many generations. They had their own understanding of what is important in the world. They were strong and self-controlled. I like to think I am, too."

Art and marriage

Dominique demonstrated her independence by quitting school—she was educated by nuns at the St. Vincent de Paul School in Paris—she left at age 15 to study painting at the Beaux Arts. At 16 she was married, most probably in revolt against her "very square parents." The marriage lasted a short time.

She turned then to modeling, and of her highly free, intensely anti-conformist life style, imaginatively embellished by the French gossip-writers, she prefers to recall little.

"My past is my own business," she declares, "and nobody else's. If gossips like to repeat old stories I cannot stop them. My life is now and here. Only today and tomorrow are of interest to me. I cannot ignore my past, because it offers necessary lessons, but that's all."

It was a photograph of her as a model published in Vogue magazine in 1967 which led to Dominique's entrance into films. Robert Bresson, the director, spied it and cast her in his adaptation of the Dostoevski story, Une Femme Douce (A Sweet Woman).

"I had a lot of difficulties with Bresson," she says. "Bresson doesn't like actors. He wants them down. I told him you're not going to make me down."

from Pain and Burning Itch in Such Tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® - the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

DOMINIQUE CONTINUED

Although Une Femme Douce was no success, it launched Dominique on her film career. The sensual, haunting, mysterious quality of her beauty, the high, wide brow, the exquisitely chiseled face softened by her honey-blond hair next attracted actor Maximilian Schell. He was hunting for a young unknown to star opposite him in a film, First Love, which he also directed. Schell claims that within a few minutes of meeting Dominique, he knew at once that she was the one to play his heroine, a young woman whose innocent sexuality comes between a father and his son.

After First Love, Schell circulated word throughout European film circles that Dominique Sanda was "a natural actress," that she could be hired for very little money, and that she generated a kind of quiet, subtle sex appeal which men found compelling and to which the female audience did not object.

As a result, Italian director Bernardo Bertolucci hired her for The Conformist, in which she plays the beautiful bisexual wife of an Italian anti-Fascist. Dominique describes The Conformist as "the best film I've made so far," most probably because in that film she dances a sensual tango in what has become one of the most memorable and highly praised scenes in recent European cinema.

Changeable mind

Unlike most young actresses on the way up, Dominique prefers to avoid interviews. "I don't really like them," she explains, "because reporters always change my words around to suit their readers or they don't write what I've said or they don't understand what I've said. They write what they think their readers want to hear. Besides, what I say today is only good for today. Tomorrow I may have changed my mind."

"I admit I am shy, and I use it as a defense. But I make a very quick contact with people and can tell whether or not I will get along with them. It's a kind of telepathy. I don't suppress my shyness. Rather, I use it, which is better.

"I would love to do a picture in Hollywood, but it would still depend on the story and the director. I did not start out as an actress, but when the chance came I sensed it was what I wanted to do. Now I want to go as far with my career as I can, just to see if I can do it. Besides, it is all magic and can disappear tomorrow."

Thank you, good-bye

Mercurial, quixotic, older than her 21 years, Dominique is experienced in the wiles of men, especially Italian men whom she describes as "madly charming men who lie sincerely, men who are hollow like plaster statues, men who at first throw themselves upon you as if they were starving for food and then, after eating, leave immediately."

She is a strange sort of girl, who looks back at her early sensual turmoil and prefers the quiet life—"I am quite capable of being alone, I prefer a walk in the country to dressing up and going to crowded, fancy places." Dominique Sanda represents the new breed of fiercely independent actress who is not willing to sacrifice personal happiness for career.

Of her love affair with Christian Marquand, she will say nothing except that she suffers from no guilt complex. When asked if she is not driven to marry the father of her child if only to legalize her son's birth, she says softly:

"Marriage can be the death of something. It seems an entrapment by legal means of the most delicate of emotions. Marriage should be a starting place for a relationship, not a goal.

"For me the most important thing is to be independent. If you know that someone can easily leave you, then you care for him and cherish him more."

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Caused By Inflammation And Infection

Also Gives Prompt, Temporary Relief in Many Cases from Pain and Burning Itch in Such Tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® - the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

DOMINIQUE CONTINUED

Although Une Femme Douce was no success, it launched Dominique on her film career. The sensual, haunting, mysterious quality of her beauty, the high, wide brow, the exquisitely chiseled face softened by her honey-blond hair next attracted actor Maximilian Schell. He was hunting for a young unknown to star opposite him in a film, First Love, which he also directed. Schell claims that within a few minutes of meeting Dominique, he knew at once that she was the one to play his heroine, a young woman whose innocent sexuality comes between a father and his son.

After First Love, Schell circulated word throughout European film circles that Dominique Sanda was "a natural actress," that she could be hired for very little money, and that she generated a kind of quiet, subtle sex appeal which men found compelling and to which the female audience did not object.

As a result, Italian director Bernardo Bertolucci hired her for The Conformist, in which she plays the beautiful bisexual wife of an Italian anti-Fascist. Dominique describes The Conformist as "the best film I've made so far," most probably because in that film she dances a sensual tango in what has become one of the most memorable and highly praised scenes in recent European cinema.

Changeable mind

Unlike most young actresses on the way up, Dominique prefers to avoid interviews. "I don't really like them," she explains, "because reporters always change my words around to suit their readers or they don't write what I've said or they don't understand what I've said. # PARADE OF PROGRESS

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

SUN DOTS: You can move these new filters (left) about readily on windshield and windows to filter out glare from sun or from reflections. They cling instantly to glass, are effective in areas that visors cannot cover, and last indefinitely, claims the maker. A package of three: $2 in stores or from, Yorkshire Specialty, Dept. PP, 220 79th St., Washington, D.C. 20027.

AUTOMATIC SWING: Requiring less room than a conventional, 4-legged type of children's swing and claimed to be sturdier, this new one (above) also includes a mechanical windup mechanism said to keep a baby swinging for 17 to 20 minutes at a time. It's made of 7/8" plated tubing with non-skid tips, has a nylon-reinforced vinyl seat, quiet Delrin gears, is easy to assemble and take down. $7.98 postpaid. Ryan, Dept. PP, Box 643, West Paterson, N.J. 07424.

DENTAL STAIN REMOVER: A new toothbrush features a latex rubber tip containing a mild concentration of pumice to remove superficial stains on the teeth caused by coffee, tea, tobacco. The tip, wedge-shaped to reach stains near the gum-line, also has a raised dome on the front to remove stains on flatter facial areas of the teeth. Its texture and composition are said to avoid excessive abrasion. 89¢ in stores. Pro Brush Division, Dept: PP, Vistron Corp., Florence, Mass.

WET/ DRY, INDOOR/ OUT-DOOR VACUUM: With this new power vacuum (right), you can pick up liquids as well as solids—and switch from dry to wet pickup without pause. The five-gallon unit is said to be capable of sucking up water, soapsuds, wet trash and dry matter of all kinds. It weighs 19½ pounds, comes in white and black, complete with flexible 1¼" and 2¼" hose, extension tubes, and utility and squeegee nozzles. $54.95 postpaid. Roberts, Dept. PP, Box 114, Totowa, N.J. 07424.

You get more than paint. You get help.

Sherwin-Williams gives you much more than paint and decorating products. We give you people. Knowledgeable, helpful people. People with ideas. People with information. People who are willing to take the time to teach you how to complete a terrific little decorating project or an entire room. Whether you buy our products or not.

That may sound like a strange way to run a paint store. But then, we're much more than a paint store now.

Sherwin-Williams.
More than a paint store.

CURL-UP BICYCLE PROTECTION: Here's a security cable (above) made of stranded aircraft cable, vinyl-coated, and pre-formed to curl up like a phone cord for neat storage under the saddle of your bicycle. It's said to offer greater cut resistance than hardened chain yet weighs less than half a pound. The 6-foot length can lock through both wheels and the bicycle frame (important for bikes with quick-release wheels), with enough to spare to go around a phone pole or tree. Loops on the ends can take any padlock. $5.95 for cable alone. $8.95 with lock. Kurly Kable, Dept. PP, 707 East Yanonali St., Santa Barbara, Calif. 93103.

MAGNIFYING LIGHT: Useful when you want to read fine print, study maps, view coin or stamp collection, or make repairs on jewelry or other small items, this magnifier (left) both lights up and enlarges objects. It uses two standard flashlight batteries, provides 2X magnification, measures 4¾" x 1½", fits in pocket or purse. $1.98 postpaid (batteries not included). Fair & Fancy, Dept. PP, Box 122, Little Falls, N.J. 07424.

When I was fat, I had to "act" happy. But at 128 pounds, I can be myself.

By Lorraine Marks—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

IT's a kind of self-defense, laughing at your own fat. Like the water ballet I once took part in at the Country Club. At 260 pounds, it was impossible for me to sink or swim. If I dove under water, I bounced right back up again. So I finally rolled over on my back, stuck a rose in my mouth, a tray of drinks in my hand and floated to stardom amid a bevy of slender beauties.

Believe it or not, I weighed only 110 pounds at my wedding. But in less than a year after the birth of my daughter, I had gained 50 pounds. And it was up, up and away after that.

As the years rolled on, my family could see what was happening to me, but not how it happened. That's because I was a secret eater. I'd buy a chocolate cake for dinner but never take a piece in front of anyone. Then, when everyone was in bed, I'd get up and, if half the cake was left, I'd eat it. Next day, before my family got home, I'd buy another cake just like it, eat half and they'd all think I hadn't touched a crumb.

Here I am, mimicking Sophie Tucker. In one way, I had a lot more to offer my audience: 260 pounds.

I attribute my eating to my parents' never allowing me to have sweets as a child. When I married, I decided to eat what I wanted. Nerves and emotions, of course, compounded the situation. Yet my husband never insulted me. Once, however, he did proposition me. "Lose some weight and I'll buy you a mink stole." I took him up on it and took off 50 pounds. But no sooner did I have the stole than I started to sneak eat again. I knew better, too, because I'm a Registered Nurse. I just continued to lie to myself and cover up with funny acts.

Isn't it great I look like this for my 25th wedding anniversary? It's the best gift I could give my husband.

The only place my clowning around didn't take was the golf course. Good thing, too, for in the end that's where I finally learned my lesson. You see, when the men were playing for fun, they wanted only slender girls as partners. When they were out to win, they took me on. I'd broken 100 more than once. Unfortunately, I won my reputation in men's golf shorts. Nothing else fit. That's what finally brought me down on the scale. I wanted to wear a skirt on the green.

Thank heavens I'd seen those Ayds' ads. Since everything else had failed, I thought maybe those reducing-plan candies might help kill my craving for sweets. When I bought my first box at the drugstore—the chocolate fudge kind—I learned from the list of ingredients on the outside of the package that Ayds contains vitamins and minerals, but no "filler" substances, like cellulose, and no drugs.

I started taking Ayds as directed: one or two before breakfast, then juice and an egg. Mid-morning, I'd have Ayds and bouillon. That was my own idea. At lunch, Ayds, soup and salad. And at dinner, Ayds, then probably chicken, salad and milk. And Ayds anytime I woke up hungry in the middle of the night.

It took a lot of losing before people began to notice. But the Ayds plan worked, and I went down and down on the scale. The first 50 pounds actually took me six months to lose. After that, it came off faster because I think my stomach had shrunk.

Of course, I lost my fat roles in the Club's shows—like playing Tessie O'Shea and Sophie Tucker. But, thanks to the Ayds plan, I got my applause other ways—from my son, daughter, husband and a lot of new golf partners.

Incidentally, I'm not a new loser. My weight's been off a few years, but I still remember Ayds in case my scale and I have a showdown. After all, I don't want to have to go back to "acting" happy when it's so much nicer to be myself.

baby, it's plaid outside!

Plaid togetherness: left, rust/green wrap jacket ($110) and pantsuit ($105) by Chuck Howard. Center, green/gold McGregor jacket ($40). Right, a multicolored plaid Mark I lober suit ($80).

■ This fall, the big bold plaids will be brightening up both city streets and country walks. The vivid flashing patterns will strut alongside the more muted tartans that conspire to reflect all the hues of the autumn landscape. Of course, plaids have been around for ages—ever since the early Scots donned them to tell the difference among the clans—but this season's tartan revival has come a long way from the original highland kilt and shawl. Today's smartest look for both men and women is the outdoorsy two-piece suit composed of a short "Eisenhower" jacket worn with cuffed and slightly flared pants. But plaids of all kinds abound in every conceivable style: billowing, dolman-sleeved coats, wraparound jackets, skirts both short and long, and the Chesterfield blazer. And so, anywhere you look these days, it's a plaid, plaid world!

My Favorite Jokes

by Bernie Travis

EDITOR'S NOTE: Improvisation, free association, revealing fantasies which make up a larger, comic statement—this is what young experimental comedians have been doing for some 15 years; Bernie Travis is one of them. Lenny Bruce first advised him to "go to Greenwich Village, work without pay, but at least you'll get up there every night, even if you bomb." "For six months," recalls Travis, "I got up there every night with no planned act, and I didn't do well. Every night was Pearl Harbor. But then I found myself, I began to trust the pauses on stage."

In 1968 Travis debuted with an improvisational comedy group called The Family (most of its members later formed the Ace Trucking Company) at New York's Bitter End cafe. Since then he's taken his comedy satires and perspectives to college campuses and nightclubs around the country.

He's made a comedy album for Audio Fidelity Records called The Pentagon Papers, and has appeared on TV on the Merv Griffin Show.

Here are some of his comedy routines and comments:

Succeed at becoming a failure and nobody'll know anything about you!"

We're very influenced by codes. We have codes such as Social Security numbers, bank codes, and even for instance, if you go into a diner they'll say, "One BLT down, hold the mayo." Or buying shoes, "That's 8 1/2 David," or "9 Charlie." Well, once I'd like to go into a bank and hear the teller say, "Give me three George's, five Abe's, and 10 Jefferson's to go."

Talking about avant garde films, Alfred Hitchcock has a new film that's about to be released. It's called The Guppies, the sequel to The Birds. In this film 50 million guppies attack and swallow an aircraft carrier.

Sleeve Intrigue

Simple lines give this dress an easy charm, set off admirably by the fashionable cap sleeves. What's most surprising, though, about this 'outfit' is that it's really one-piece, and can be sewn with either cap or blouse sleeves—or both!

Other interesting features of PARADE's latest pattern include the unusual front zipper closing, and the softly flattering scarf tied at the neck.

It's definitely an all-occasion dress with the look of a designer original.

P-461 with Photo-Guide is in Sizes 8 to 18. Size 10, 32½ bust . . . cap-sleeve dress, 2⅞ yards 45-inch, plus 1½ yards for long sleeves and scarf. Send 75¢ to PARADE, Dept. I, Box 475, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Print name, address, zip code and pattern number with size.

Include an extra 75¢ for a copy of PARADE's Pattern and Needlework Book filled with many more lovely designs in both dress and needlework from which to choose your patterns. Allow three weeks for delivery.

Go to the Top

A few weeks ago Rep. Ella T. Grasso (D., Conn.) said that Americans should be able to phone or write free to their government leaders to raise questions or complain.

Congresswoman Grasso said she would sponsor a bill making letters and phone calls to federal leaders, phone and postage free.

Many youngsters, convinced that the only way to influence and alter the status quo is to complain directly to world leaders, are passing around a list of international phone numbers. Until Congresswoman Grasso gets her bill passed, the operators at the following switchboards will not accept collect calls:

Student VD Volunteers

A new gonorrhea vaccine developed by Dr. Lewis Greenberg of Canada's Federal Health Department will undergo its first large-scale test this fall.

Approximately 2000 college students of Makerere University in Kampala (Africa) have agreed to be injected with the killed bacteria vaccine, which is supposed to develop antibodies in their bloodstreams capable of immunizing them against the venereal disease.

Makerere University has been chosen as the first test community because, as in most of Africa, the population suffers from a high gonorrhea rate. Gonorrhea in the United States is also considered of pandemic proportions, especially among the young.

The test program in Kampala will last three years, and close track will be kept of the test subjects, a most important factor in medical research of this nature.

Advice to High School Seniors

The college-bound high school senior—facing an often agonizing decision on just which college to choose—is usually inundated with catalogs, booklets, pamphlets and folders from various institutions.

Slogging through this miasma of information sometimes serves only to increase the frustration of the would-be freshman. To focus more clearly on the goal of selecting the "right" college, Manuel Barron—president of Barron's Educational Series, whose manuals help countless students prepare for exams—proposes a college-bound student ask himself the following ten questions:

1. Do I know what I want to do in four years? If you're undecided, choose a multicollage university where you'll be free to wander in and out of classes. You can get a good idea of what's good, which teachers stand out, and the strongest departments in the university. If you have definite career plans, pick the school that has most recently graduated the largest number of seniors in that particular field.

2. Would I be better off getting a degree under a work-study program? Many schools provide a program which involves working for six months—three months at a time—of the school year. Under this degree program, you can be years ahead in a career because of your work experience, and dollars ahead in tuition.

3. How much time do I want to devote to non-college activities? If you want to be where the "action" is, seek a college near a large urban center. Big cities offer limitless opportunities for the volunteer ecologist, social service enthusiast, and budding politician.

4. Does money play an important role in my future life style? If it does, choose a college that has a specialized job-oriented curriculum; one that is well-endowed with grants and sponsoring programs from large corporations.

5. Is winning important to me? If so, then you are probably a highly competitive person who would thrive in a structured, rigorous college. Don't settle for an easygoing school or one that is too large.

6. Will college set me free? If you want to be free of the classroom or lecture hall atmosphere, choose a school which focuses on seminars, tutorial programs, pass-fail grading, off-campus extensions.

7. Do I really want to go to college? More and more students are taking a year or two off from school. They either want to work, travel, or become VISTA volunteers. Should you decide to follow this route, you might well consider a new educational concept: the three-year college. Many state universities already have such a program, while some private schools are considering the plan.

8. Have I picked a specific college because my friends are going there? Frequently, students are dissatisfied with their first year at college because they didn't choose the college in the first place. Beware of this pitfall. Do some independent research and personal evaluation because it's often easier to make new friends than to transfer to another school.

9. Is it possible to combine college with travel? Don't let "four years in one place" scare you off from college. There are countless programs for the globe-trotting student, foreign study programs for six or 12 months, or a semester in a ghetto or museum. Some colleges offer gifted students a year off to write a novel, or study French literature—all for academic credit.

10. Will hard work get me what I want? Changing times have altered the definition of success. For many students, hard work and success are not synonymous. The open university can be one alternative to those wondering about the relevancy of the academic environment.

Thinking about buying a '73 car? Our book can help you make the right choice.

Car Buying Made Easier. We wrote it to help people buy a car. Any car. Any make. Any model.

Apparently it was needed. Because last year, we received requests for nearly a million copies. And according to the people who've written us back, it was helpful, and a lot more book than they expected.

So we've brought out a '73 version.

Once again, it's written in two parts. Part One is about cars in general—types, styles, engines, options, etc.—advantages and disadvantages. (Some of the pages are shown above.) Part Two is updated to cover 1973 Fords, Mercurys and Lincolns—features, specifications, even prices.

The cover is different and some of the information has been refined. But the end purpose is still the same: smarter car buyers.

We believe that if you become a smarter car buyer, we'll get our share of the business... and then some.

And best of all, the book is still free.

Equal Rights Amendment For Women —When?

by Suzanne Curley

U.S. Rep. Martha D. Griffiths, a leading booster of Equal Rights Amendment, believes that chances of its passage in year are good.

March 22, 1972, is an historic day for American women. On that date, the Senate passed by a large margin (84-8) a bill authorizing a new Constitutional amendment which would outlaw governmental discrimination on the basis of sex. Five months earlier, the House had approved the same bill by a similarly lopsided vote (354-23).

After such overwhelmingly favorable votes in Congress, speedy approval—as in the 3-month ratification of the 26th (18-year-old vote) Amendment—was expected from the 38 state legislatures required to make the bill into law.

First to ratify—within 30 minutes of Congressional passage—was Hawaii, home of Congresswoman Patsy Mink, and nineteen states followed suit.

Labor opposition

But other states are holding back, mainly through opposition from powerful labor leaders, a sprinkling of anti-feminist groups, and random male legislators.

Such opposition has defeated the amendment, at least temporarily, in five states: Illinois, Louisiana, Connecticut, Oklahoma, and Vermont.

There has been much discussion, and even more confusion about what legal changes the 27th Amendment would require. Rep. Martha Griffiths (D., Mich.), one of Equal Rights' leading boosters, outlines the following areas:

Social Security: Men and women will qualify for equal benefits at the same age, and widowers will receive spouse's benefits the way widows do now.

Government Pensions: They will have to be equal for men and women in the same job categories. Women now frequently receive smaller pensions.

Military Service: If there is a draft, women will be subject to it.

"But," declares Mrs. Griffiths, "that doesn't mean women would be on the front lines. Individuals would fill the jobs for which they are most suited, and what is even more likely is that the draft will be abolished."

The Armed Forces themselves have already made it clear that they prefer an all-volunteer service to the draft.

The Equal Rights Amendment is also expected to invalidate laws or practices which require male signatures for mortgages and other contracts. Criminal statutes which specify different sentences depending on the sex of the offender would be struck down, too.

It is not clear how the Equal Rights Amendment will affect such important domestic issues as child custody and alimony, with some ERA critics envisioning the total breakdown of the family structure.

In reality, the traditional family will be disturbed very slightly, if at all. The financially dependent spouse—man or wife—could receive alimony payments from the other party, and child custody will be determined on the basis of who is better able to care for the child.

Why then the delay in the ratification of the new amendment?

Debates heated

The best answer is the strong opposition of some labor factions. For instance, labor interests defeated the amendment in Connecticut's house of representatives, and spurred heated debate in the legislatures of California and Ohio.

The AFL-CIO has gone on record against the amendment, but when questioned on their official position, spokesmen were "too busy" to comment.

Says Dr. Ann Scott, of the National Organization of Women, "The AFL-CIO has historically opposed the ERA because it will wipe out state laws originally intended to protect women. But these laws have now come to discriminate against women and, illegally, keep them out of better-paying jobs."

Not all of labor is anti-ERA. The United Auto Workers are in favor, and their female vice president, Olga Madar (the first in UAW history), has testified before Congress on behalf of the bill.

What are chances?

Given such difference of opinion on the ERA, what are the chances of its becoming the 27th Amendment to the Constitution?

Dr. Scott is optimistic: "Although many states have shelved the ERA until their next legislative session, this isn't necessarily a bad thing. It's given those of us in favor time to gather strength. And a lot of help is coming from such groups as the League of Women Voters and John Gardner's Common Cause."

She adds: "There have been more letters to Congress this year on the equal rights issue than on any other single matter—including busing—and that's a healthy sign."

Says Congresswoman Griffiths: "By this time next year the ERA bill should become Constitutional law."

"And that will be a glorious day for American women."
